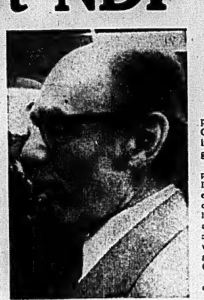
PCs Have One-seat Edge

Stanfield Won't Bend To Court NDP Support

C'est la Guerre$

Tradeau Meets Cabinet Today



By STEWART MacLEOD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Just who would form the next federal government remained in doubt today as Canada's political leaders huddled with advisers — and also received no end of unsolicited advice — about settling the tightest general election battle in the country's history.

With the Conservatives holding 108 seats, and the Liberals 108, it was not known whether Prime Minister Trudeau would try to maintain power with one less seat or turn the government over to Robert Stanfield's Conservatives. The New Democratic Party, with 30 seats, holds the effective balance of power.

The Social Credit Party elected 15 MPs, all from Quebec, and two independent members won their ridings.

Mr. Trudeau was to meet with his cabinet today to discuss the outcome of Monday's election and, presumably, the Hmmm!

Recounts Possible In 7 Seats

OTTAWA (CP) — A handful of paper might tip the scales of parliamentary power to the Liberals from the Progressive Conservatives.

As it stands, only 12 ballots in the rural riding of Oshawa give the Conservatives their one-seat margin over Prime Minister Trudeau's Liberals.

By law, a recount must be held when there is a margin of less than 25 votes and, if the tiny lead held by Conservative Frank McKee falls to his Liberal opponent, the prime minister would bring his total to 109 while the Conservatives would drop to 108.

For that reason alone, it is unlikely Mr. Trudeau would hand the government to Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield before the end of next week, when the recount will probably be complete.

Chief Electoral Officer Jean-Marc Hamel said Tuesday a judge will be asked for a recount Thursday, but because of the size of the riding it could take more than a week to count all the ballots.

The tight national race for power in Monday's general election was mirrored in six other ridings where victory margins were less than 200 votes. Recounts must be considered possible in all six.

One comfort for Mr. Trudeau is that turnovers resulting from recounts stand to benefit the Liberals more than any other party. But it is a small comfort since recounts only rarely result in a change.

Aside from Ontario riding, Liberals could capture recount victories in:

Chaleurs: Gilles Cassette, son of Social Credit Leader Real Caouette, leads Liberal Jean-Guy Alain by 97 votes.

—Drummond: Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin trails Social Creditor J. M. Boisvert by 148.

— Toronto - Trinity: Conservative Paul Hellyer holds a 163-vote lead over Liberal Aileen Nicholson. Mr. Hellyer, then a Liberal, won the 1968 election by more than 6,700 voters.

Two possible Conservative gains could come from:

Also New Democratic Party could steal Meadow Lake away from Conservative Albert Cadieu. The NDP's Elias Nesday trailed the Conservative by 23 votes late Tuesday with one poll unreported in the huge Saskatchewan riding.

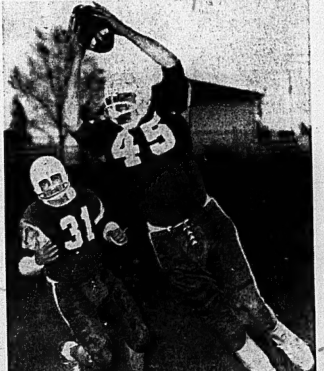
Idea Rejected



WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House says a secret suggestion to give the government a direct electronic link to every home and car in the United States was just one of many ideas that were rejected as too extreme.

Kennedy Quits

TORONTO (CP) —Joseph A. Kennedy, 60, who announced earlier he would be leaving his post as chairman of the Ontario Municipal Board (OMB) on Oct. 31, left the job Tuesday.

Nixon to Remain

TORONTO (CP) — Robert Nixon says he will remain as leader of the Ontario Liberal party until next fall if the party will agree to set a firm date for a convention to pick his successor.

Triumphant Trojan

Moira Trojan Mark McKay leaps into the air after collecting a scoring pass from quarterback Glen Shaw in Tuesday's Bay of Quinte COSSA senior football championship. The underdog Trojans added a two-point conversion after this play to jump into a 22-22 tie with the Quinte Saints but succumbed 35-22 before a fourth-quarter Quinte rally. Teammate Peter Stalikovich rushes to applaud McKay's scoring effort. For story, see first page, third section.

No PC Policy 'Adjustments'

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's three main political parties remained on a collision course Tuesday as Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield refused to tack in order to pick up New Democratic help in forming a government.

During the election campaign, NDP Leader David Lewis attacked the Liberal government so vehemently observers concluded there can be no lasting NDP-Liberal co-operation. That left an NDP-Conservative alliance as a possible way of maintaining a stable government when the new Commons meets.

But Mr. Stanfield told a news conference Tuesday night:

"I don't intend to make adjustments in the philosophy of my party or my own approach as to what I believe is desirable for the country in order to get the support of Mr. Lewis or anyone else."

Mr. Lewis said in Toronto Monday that he will support any government that does something about corporate tax ripoffs, joblessness a n d rising living costs.

Mr. Stanfield said Tuesday he will not commit himself to increasing the tax burden on corporations in order to get New Democrat support.

He also was asked at the news conference whether he would—if he formed a government—try to get the Commons to tighten the unemployment insurance program. During the campaign, Mr. Lewis opposed Conservative criticism of the high unemployment insurance payments.

Mr. Stanfield Tuesday said "the most effective way to reduce the cost of the unemployment insurance system to the taxpayer is to reduce unemployment."

For Other Election Stories See Pages 5, 16 & 17

Although that answer suggested he believes no clash with the ew Democrats would be likely over changes in the unemployment insurance plan. Mr. Stanfield later said one of the things a Conservative government would do is lengthen the eligibility requirement to 12 weeks from eight.

That proposal was put forward by Conservatives in the last Parliament and opposed by both Liberals and New Democrats.

Mr. Stanfield listed several things a Conservative government would do immediately upon taking office:

—Increase old age pensions to balance increases in the cost of living.

—Take other action to halt rising prices:

—Stop the planned elimination at the end of this year of a 10 per cent reduction in personal income taxes which was put into effect last year.

—Fire E. J. Benson, former defence and finance minister who recently was appointed head of the Canadian transport commission.

He also reiterated his readiness to form a government, last added it is Prime Minister Trudeau's constitutional right to stay in office and seek the support of the Commons.

Mr. Stanfield said he has not discussed the problem with either Mr. Trudeau or Mr. Lewis.

McGovern Says Polls Are Wrong

NEW YORK (CP) — Senator George McGovern gave no sign of dismay today at the latest public opinion poll showing that he has lost ground to President Nixon in the last week in the battle for the U.S. presidency.

McGovern, the Democratic presidential candidate, said the polls are simply wrong and the latest one in particular. He continued to predict that he would win next Tuesday's election.

"There's a climate of fear today that makes people afraid to give answers to pollsters," McGovern said in a television interview Tuesday night as he campaigned in New York state.

President Nixon, meanwhile, planned to step up his low-key campaign in the last five days before polling with at least two paid country-wide television addresses and visits to Chicago, Oklahoma, Rhode Island and California.

Two Little Girls in Hallowe'en Garb Killed by Bomb Blast in Belfast

BELFAST (AP) — Two little girls made up in fancy dress to celebrate Hallowe'en, the eve of All Saints' Day, were killed by a powerful bomb blast Tuesday night in a fresh spasm of Northern Ireland bloodletting.

A British soldier and a teenaged civilian also died during the day to raise the province's known death toll to 624 since 1969, and 413 this year alone.

The girls, six-year-old Paula Strong and her playmate Clare Hughes, 4, were dressed in masks and witches hats and dancing around a bonfire a few minutes before the bomb exploded outside Bessy's Bar in Ship Street, Belfast.

They were taking part in traditional Irish celebration of Hallowe'en, an ancient folk custom believed to have its origins in pagan festivals of the dead. Before the 10th century this was thought the time when the spirits of the departed visited their homes for warmth and blessings.

The 100-pound bomb, planted in a car outside the Roman Catholic bar, went off. It practically destroyed the ground floor of the tavern, bringing tons of masonry crashing down on the girls. Paula died immediately. Clare later in hospital.

A woman living nearby said: "They were just like little bundles of rags lying there."

Canada Ready To Keep Truce

WASHINGTON (AP) — Informed diplomatic sources said Tuesday that Canada, Indonesia, Hungary and Poland have agreed to provide 250 officers each for what is expected to be the complex job of policing terms of the Vietnam peace accord, once in effect.

As the Tuesday deadline originally set by the North Vietnamese for signing of the pact passed, the White House continued to withhold any hints on when this ceremony might be carried out.

The reported new 1,000-man international policy agency would line up two Communist nations with two non-Communist countries.

At the state department, spokesman Charles W. Bray neither affirmed nor denied the new watchdog commission is taking shape.

"We ought not speak for other governments until they declare their own intentions," he said.

In Ottawa, an external affairs spokesman said the Washington report is "pure speculation."

"I would reiterate that we have not been invited to participate in anything."

If Canada were to be invited, it would want to discuss the composition and duties of an international force before agreeing to take part.

The spokesman said Canadian and U.S. officials have discussed the subject and Canada understands it could be invited to participate.

Thieu Demands Hanoi Sign Peace with Him

SAIGON (AP) — Stunting aside the United States, President Nguyen Van Thieu demanded today that the Communists in both North and South Vietnam negotiate a peace settlement with his government.

He repeated his demand for the withdrawal of all North Vietnamese troops from South Vietnam and his rejection of a "disguised coalition government."

The South Vietnamese president outlined a plan calling for separate conferences between his government and North Vietnam to work out a ceasefire and between Saigon and the Viet Cong to negotiate a political settlement. He made no mention of U.S. participation.

Today, the Republic of Vietnam government and myself, representing the South Vietnamese people, demand that the North Vietnamese Communists conduct serious discussions in order to sign a treaty on peace and a ceasefire between South and North Vietnam in any place, whether in Paris or in any other country in the world," Thieu said.

Firecracker in Ear One Hallowe'en Prank

NEW YORK (CP) — Police in Bristol, Tenn., reported that two youths grabbed 37-year-old Orville Man as he walked on a street, stuffed a firecracker in his left ear and lit it.

Man was treated in hospital for a burst eardrum. The youths escaped.

Generally, the treats far outdistanced tricks Halloween night as youngsters armed with masks and shopping bags took to the streets and knocked on doors in search of goodies.

Seagod-over cars and windows of homes were commonplace.

Scattered incidents of malicious treats were reported.

Police in Baltimore, Md., reported a child's parents found a silver-of metal in a lollypop the youngster collected while trick-or-treating.

In Boston, police said there had been cases of "the usual razor blade stuff in apples" but the youngsters could not say where they got the apples. There were no arrests and no injuries.

A woman clerk in Miami, Fla., thought it was a joke when two men in clown costumes and masks and carrying trick-or-treat bags burst into a food store—until one of the men pulled a gun and robbed the cash register.

Few Incidents On Hallowe'en

TORONTO (CP) — Tiny tots satisfying forth on Hallowe'en adventures here fared better with sadists Tuesday night than in recent years, although police reported several cases where needles or razor blades were found in trick-or-treat apples and candies.

But no injuries were reported by police or hospitals in connection with the incidents. The only other major problem reported involved the snatching of UNICEF boxes from children collecting pennies for the International Children's Fund.

In St. Catharines, Ont., a seven-year-old boy was reported to have found a pin in an apple, a three-year-old girl found string in home-made candy and another youngster found glass in candy.

None was injured.

Other centres across Canada reported a comparatively quiet Halloween.

Funeral

THOMAS A. KELLY
RR 2, Consecon

Funeral of Thomas A. Kelly, 36, RR 2, Consecon, killed in a highway accident at Rossmore Oct. 29, was held from St. Peter's Church here, Oct. 30.

Born in Glasgow, Scotland, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Kelly, he left Scotland and came to this area less than five years ago. A furniture finisher by trade, he was employed by a local refinishing firm.

Mr. Kelly is survived by his wife, the former Mary Pointer, a brother, Michael, and sister, Betty, both in Scotland.

Mass was said by Rev. W. Lynett and interment was in Mount Calvary Cemetery.

Bearers were Scott Anderson, Peter Just, Allan and Michael Kelly, Lee Bernard and Victor Lowden.

The funeral was under the direction of Weaver Funeral Home.

Researcher Praises Drug Under Tests

Atlanta, Ga. (Reuter) — A university researcher has revealed he is working with a synthetic substance that could profoundly improve the lives of stroke, cerebral palsy and muscular dystrophy victims and revolutionize physical medicine."

Dr. J. V. Basmajian, director of Emory University's regional rehabilitation research and training centre, said the drug is dantrolene sodium, an agent that relaxes muscle tissue without affecting the patient's central nervous system as do similar drugs on the market.

Dr. Basmajian's praise of dantrolene sodiuna was highly unusual since the manufacturer, Eaton Laboratories, has not completed the more than 50 different kinds of tests being conducted to determine the effect of the drug.

"This is an investigation of a new drug," an Eaton spokesman said. "We're not encouraging any publicity at this time.

"It's not ready to be marketed certainly not within this calendar year."

Dr. Basmajian however, feels "it is safe to let people know about dantrolene sodium."

Dantrolene sodiuna relieves spasticity by softening muscles, Dr. Basmajian said. Other drugs on the market do the same thing by affecting the central nervous system, the origin of the spasticity. But they tend to put the patient to sleep.

"The drug is used for treating a severe sign of a cause ton." Dr. Basmajian said. "It's not a preventive or a cure.

"You have to keep taking the pills four times a day. "But it does prevent spasticity while the drug is in the system."

The Emory research program began three years ago. University hospitals in Philadelphia, Baltimore, Miami and Montreal also are experimenting with the substance developed by Eaton, a division of Morton-Norwich Products Inc. of Chicago, the salt products firm.

WHY MEN DIE YOUNGER

Why do women outlive men? Are men biologically weaker? Or does society expect too much of men? Undoubtedly, both factors play a role. But there are ways in which we can remedy the situation. November Reader's Digest shows how science knows about masculinity often results in pressures and frustrations which can kill a man. Here are rules your family should learn by heart—to help fathers and sons live longer, fuller lives. IN MEMORIAM

BAILEY — In loving memory of a dear mother Gladys Ave Bailey who passed away November 1, 1971.
Some day, some day, our eyes shall see.
The face we love in memory,
And God will link the broken chain,
And heal the wounds that still remain,
And always remembered and sadly missed by Anne, Bob, Charles, Douglas and family.

LUCAS — In loving memory of dear Granny Lucas who passed away November 1, 1969.
Sweet memories are all I have left,
A link goes from our chain,
But I'll meet you, Granny, in a while,
Then how we'll smile again.
Some day we hope to meet you,
In that fair land above,
We shall meet in a better home,
Where all is love.
Sadly missed and remembered by wife Phyllis, son Ronald and Donald, daughter-in-law Ruth, son-in-law Gordon and daughter Barbara and grandchildren Ronnie, Donald, daughter Jean and Debbie.

Co-ordination Needed

Area social workers yesterday opposed any centralization of services but agreed in workshop sessions more co-ordination was needed among "people helping agencies."

More than 150 people were gathered in the Four Season Hall, organized by the ministry of social and community services to discuss problem areas.

In their discussions, general weak spots were "overlapping of services, duplication and extravagant use of forms and applications."

The 150 were divided into 17 groups, each holding small discussions which later in the day were molded into a general picture of social service problems in Belleville region.

An example set down by the groups was there should be one income maintenance system.

Bringing the welfare system, family benefits, fringe allowances and so on under one roof, giving greater co-ordination to the program.

It was also recommended that agencies become integrated in the community and not be aloof.

A main finding of the groups was, "problems must be recognized before they become acute."

Recipients of benefits under various social service programs should be brought into the machinery, to provide input and help workers diagnose problems. Each group would then be able to work for a solution.

"They didn't come up with any great solutions," said a spokesman for the meeting. "The one valuable thing these people did come away with was they all realized there was a problem and a solution had to be found."

The four - man task force, co-ordinating meetings across the province, offered no answers to the group but advised that more meetings be held among local groups.

"You will have to find at least the greater part of the answer yourselves," said Hugh Hanson, leader of the force.

The task force also advised local groups to submit progress reports to the ministry dealing with local meetings.

"We have to find the best way to deliver the goods," he said.

Hallowe'en Quiet

Local police and fire officials say last night's celebration of Hallowe'en was one of the quietest ever.

Only one serious incident was reported. A youngster returned home from trick - or - treating and found a razor blade inside an apple he was about to bite into.

Another goblin cut his finger holding an apple but police are not certain what was inside.

Only property damage occurred at a Shoppite store on Victoria Avenue where a plate glass window in the door was shattered.

Deputy police chief Harold Reid isn't sure why this year's activities were so quiet.

"Maybe Hallowe'en's losing its appeal, but I doubt it. Even in areas where escapades by persons of all ages have been the rule, was relatively empty.

In Trenton, police also report incidents were rare but in nearby Brighton, it was a different matter.

Every year gangs of young people put both citizens and police to the test in Brighton.

Last night crowds of young people roamed the streets of the village, hurling pumpkins, eggs and garbage at passing motorists.

Eventually the largest group of youths was picked up by police and taken to the village firehall. They were held and picked up by their parents.

No charges were laid.

In both Trenton and Brighton youngsters carrying UNICEF boxes were urged to do so in the earlier, daylight hours. There were no reports of any thefts from youngsters collecting door to door for the international children's fund.

Making Music for MP

Jack Ellis, newly - elected Hastings MP, was to his first non - election assembly yesterday as guest at Belleville Kiwanis weekly luncheon. Club members marked the occasion with music — singing a chorus of For He's a Jolly Good Fellow for their new federal representative.

Ellis Says Wait and See

A political stalemate similar to the confusion in Newfoundland following a provincial election earlier this year, could be one of the possible results of Monday's federal election cliffhanger, Jack Ellis, Hastings MP-elect said yesterday.

He told Belleville Kiwanis: "We could have a minority government — on either side. We could have a stalemate, as happened in Newfoundland for a number of months. I don't really know what we're in for."

Mr. Ellis was a guest at the club's weekly noon luncheon — his first participation in an event without political overtones since his election Monday night.

He said there was "little sense" commenting on the current government situation cre-

Edward A. Calhoun

Molson's Brewery is pleased to announce the appointment of Edward A. Calhoun to the position of Area Manager, Central Ontario Sales District.

Mr. Calhoun will have as his major responsibility supervision of the Central District Sales Force and will report to District Sales Manager, R. H. (Bud) Henderson.

ated by the closest - run election in Canadian history.

But while the deadlock was being resolved he would spend the time putting his personal affairs in order.

In this way he would be free to be "working full time for the riding" when the political scene is clarified, he said.

MOLSON'S BREWERY APPOINTMENT

Sharing Problems Helps Solve Them

Using others' resources, making best use of all available facilities, which might mean personally "giving up", government consultant Dick Weller said, is the answer to the problems in the social service machine.

Mr. Weller, asked to speak due to the lateness of guest speaker Hon. Rene Brunelle, minister of social and community services, said there are too many programs that have not been assessed since they began, to much duplication and not enough mutual effort in handling the problems of the people.

The ministry has been conducting a series of meetings across the province, gathering all agencies under one roof, to discuss problems and search for a solution.

Belleville's was the 14th in the series.

"One of the biggest problems we will have to contend with is the readiness of everyone in need for someone else to give them the answer," he said. "It won't happen. We will have to find this answer ourselves.

"The answer is trite and simple," he said. "It just means working together."

The ministry, in an attempt to housecleam the services under its wing, discovered that a task force be sent out to meet with social workers from across the land to determine where the key problems were.

"Sometimes just using others' resources will mean personally giving up," he said.

"But the only way that we will use all of our resources is if someone, at some point, steps back and lets someone else take a crack at the problem.

"Unless we rectify the problems in inefficiency we have now, with available resources, how can a task force begin to look to the future?" asked Mr. Weller.

On-street Parking Is Board's Answer

Two-hour parking plus erection of a four-foot fence at the west end of Bay Drive was has been recommended as a measure to ease on-street parking problems in the vicinity of Belleville General Hospital.

The recommendation to city council was approved at Tuesday's meeting of the city traffic committee despite a warning from police traffic inspector Ralph Blatchford, who said that two - hour parking would be difficult to enforce.

But the traffic committee was recommended that a meeting be held with the hospital board of governors to discuss hospital parking problems.

A delegation from Bayview Heights attended the traffic committee meeting in support of a petition received last week by city council.

Delegation members claimed the cars — owned mainly by employees at the hospital — were a hazard to children, prevented entry to private driveways of homeowners and even ran over garbage placed out for collection.

Alderman Arthur Keegan, as chairman of the traffic committee, moved the recommendation calling for two - hour parking on Dufferin and MacDonald Avenues on First and Second Street, and on the west end of Bay Drive.

The recommendation called for parking restrictions to be in force between 7 a.m. and 6 p.m.

Erection of a four - foot fence; at the west end of Bay Drive, according to Mr. Keegan, would help to discourage hospital workers leaving their cars in the Bayview area and then walking to the hospital.

It was agreed by delegation members that all day parking by hospital workers was the main problem.

Inspector Blatchford in his report said the problem was one of insufficient parking places to meet demands.

For instance, the doctor's lot holds about 30 cars for 50 doctors, and there are over 100 people on the hospital staff working three shifts with only 130 spaces. In addition, visitors have about 110 spaces.

In the view of Inspector Blatchford there were three alternatives: 1. Let the matter rest; 2. Arrangement by the hospital board for staff parking at another site and bus employees to work, and 3. Construction of a parking ramp on hospital property.

Museum Free For Pensioners

Admission to the Royal Ontario Museum in Toronto is now free for old age pensioners, said Gerald Boyce of Belleville, a member of the board.

All members of the public are now admitted free after 5 p.m. on week days. The free-after-five policy was introduced as part of the museum's 60th birthday celebrations and evening attendance has climbed steadily every since.

Evening attendance has also been stimulated by activities — including films, concerts, lectures, tours, literary readings and special events.

Little Gain

Someone went to a lot of trouble for little gain last weekend.

Officials at Sir John A. Macdonald public school Monday morning discovered someone had pried open a window, opened the screen inside, then closed the window and repeated the screen.

Trudeau Wants Right-of-Way

The city - owned street runs between Station and Great St. James Street and separates Trudeau's main garage building from its used car lot to the east.

The Trudeau letter to city hall notes that Dafoe Street has become a problem of control. A considerable amount of unnecessary traffic takes place on the street and, as there are three service entrances off the street to the company's main shops, a traffic hazard is created.

The matter was before Tuesday's meeting of the traffic committee which referred it to the city manager for evaluation and full report.

Museum Closes Door Until Glanmore Opens

It's moving time for the Hastings County Museum.

As a result the popular Church Street show place is now officially closed and won't re-open until around Christmas time when hopefully the new location at Glanmore House on Bridge Street will be completed and everything in readiness.

Painters and carpenters are now putting the finishing touches on inside renovations at the former Burrows residence while painting and wallpapering is also going ahead.

The artistic plaster ceilings at Glanmore House have been repaired where necessary and painted and when the carpenters and painters are out of the way, carpets will be laid.

City Alderman Robin Jeffrey, who has taken a keen interest in the work of the museum and in the renovations at Glanmore House, said it was hoped that everything would be in place before Christmas to allow school tours to be resumed.

And with the removal of museum artifacts from the old county registry office, the museum building will go under the hammer next week.

The demolition contract has been awarded to Murney House of Bloomfield. The old registry office will be torn down and the site put to use to enlarge the parking lot at the county administration building.

Woman Dies Of Injuries

BRIGHTON (Staff) — A woman passenger in a car involved in a two-vehicle crash near here Friday night died Tuesday in Kingston General Hospital.

Mrs. Queenie Louise Stevenson, 69, Smithfield, was a passenger in a car driven by her husband Parker Raymond Stevenson, 71, and received head and other injuries.

Provincial police here said the Stevenson car was westbound on Highway 2 near Smithfield, when it turned into the path of another car.

Mr. Stevenson remains in Trenton Memorial Hospital. The driver of the second car, Charles Thomas Hewson, 21, 25 Napier St., Brighton, was released from hospital after treatment for minor injuries.

Barn Burns

CARRYING PLACE (Staff) — Police and fire fighters levelled a barn near here last night may have been the result of a Hallowe'en prank.

The barn, east of Victoria United Church on the second concession of Ameliasburg, was owned by Gary Townsend. It contained bales of straw and was only partially insured.

No livestock or machinery was lost in the fire that caused an estimated $5,000 in damage.

From the Days of Elizabeth I

Ireland: A Political Problem That Defies Solution

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst

In the present spate of TV cramas, movies and stage plays about the Tudor monarchs, the unsolved problem they faced about 300 hundred years ago, Britain still faces today. That is Ireland.

The second Elizabeth like the first, might have to pass the problem along to her successor. When one thinks of the progression of events in all other areas of British national life in 200 years, the fact that one of them has escaped solution not after several years or decades, but after centuries, defies description, boggles the mind.

One lives with the tragedies that have killed millions in Twentieth Century horrors like genocide campaigns, global wars, or obliterated hundreds in technological failures like aircraft and train crashes and wrecks. Yet Protestants and Catholics still catch each other in Ireland. With 400 dead since 1969, the mid-century renewal of the Irish tragedy may go down in history as a mini-Thirty Years War of Protestants fighting Catholics.

In case that equally-unbelievable event in history has escaped you, the Thirty Years, War lasted an unbroken thirty years between 1618 and 1648, made a complete shambles of what is today most of West and East Germany. It shattered monarchies, bankrupted newly emerging European nation states, left legacies of religious hatred in Western Europe which lasted almost until 1914. Then another kind of holocaust engendered the more-comprehensible new hatreds between nations of the Twentieth Century.

Observers on the scene in Northern Ireland now see exhaustion and nihilism taking over as extremist Protestant and Catholic groups currently engage in killings for reasons that appear to have little to do with their religious and economic differences.

The direct rule ordered last March 24 for one year to try to halt terrorism ended self-rule in Ulster and has seen the arrival of nearly 10,000 British troops of "pacification" or "occupation," depending which side you are on the Irish tragedy.

Since last spring, the long-militant Irish Republican Army has found itself outdone in terror and bombings by the so-called "Provisional IRA" which even the old-line IRA disowns.

Protestant militancy once relegated to spasmodic reprisal bomb and assassination attempts, has hardened into the growing UDA (Ulster Defence Association) which now claims 50,000 members.

On Dec. 6, proportional representation in Ulsters elections will be used for the first time in years when the Catholic minority of 500,000 goes to the polls along with the Protestant one million majority.

At the risk of taking sides, it would appear the Catholic minority, restricted from many of the better jobs, including government positions in major Ulster industries like shipbuilding, have suffered the most discrimination.

In fact, the underlying reason for the Irish terror probably relates more to economics than religion.

Memories of '57

Comparisons are being made in the aftermath of the stalemate election with a similar situation in 1957. Then the Conservatives ended up with a narrow majority, with the NDP holding the balance of power.

In what was then Port Arthur we witnessed some of the drama of those days, when the Conservatives won a narrow majority and — in a succeeding election — widened it decisively.

We can see it all now and some of the personalities involved. High school teacher Douglas Fisher, a big man with a black mustache was bearing down on the legendary C. D. Howe. The Liberal cabinet minister, wearing a faded raincoat and hat, came to his committee rooms on downtown Cumberland Street and waited as the returns continued to show his NDP opponent gaining ground. Finally he conceded defeat.

Over in Fort William former NDP leader Tommy Douglas (who has been returned again in his riding in British Columbia) addressed a rally in the arena at the Memorial Gardens. We shared a car with him from Port Arthur, along Memorial Avenue that linked the then twin cities. The familiar, precise tones and friendly manner of Mr. Douglas remain fresh in our memory of those days 15 years ago.

Newly arrived in the area, and temporarily without transportation, we walked back to Port Arthur after the meeting. There was a boardwalk, we recall, and we walked it in the late hours, suspended as it were between two worlds, two cities where the hustings were just about over for the time being and where some of Canada's more recent history had been in the making.

Beyond Price

There has been talk of the cost to Canadians of the Olympics in 1976 and even a suggestion that the sailing events in Kingston could be jeopardized unless sufficient Government aid is forthcoming.

We hope this problem will be overcome, for the country that is host to such events can be enriched in ways far beyond material considerations.

Although a financial loser, the incomparable Expo 67 still lives in the memory. Expo was a once-in-a-lifetime experience. It brought together not only the technical and material achievements of the world, but it also was a marvellous exercise in making the world, for a few short months at least, a better place.

In Montreal at that time Canadians came to know each other better and to take real pride in their nationhood. The Man and His World exhibition, where Expo took place, may be only a shadow of the former glory, but we hope it may continue its annual presentation. For in such are not only the best of our material world but manifestations also of the brotherhood that in so many ways is lacking today.

More Hijackings

Unnerved perhaps by the recent Olympics tragedy, and unwilling to permit another massacre of innocents, the West German government has capitulated to terrorists who hijacked a Lufthansa jet and demanded the release of three Arab guerrillas who survived the Olympics shootout in Munich.

The guerrillas were flown to Algeria where they were received as heroes and we can only deplore this further evidence of international blackmail and jeopardizing of the safety of air traffic for dubious political ends.

Terrorism remains a terrible stain on mankind. It is intolerable that any small group of activists should be permitted to hold as political pawns citizens going about their lawful business. Yet it is happening all the time, even as governments supposedly are tightening security everywhere against such dastardly occurrences.

One result of this has been stepped up attacks by Israel on Arab terrorist camps across its border. Israel — which is the ultimate target of these guerrilla bands — can scarcely be blamed for its action.

Saskatchewan Tries TV

By DON O'HEARN
From The Intelligencer's Queen's Park Bureau

Now the provinces are not only talking about going into television itself but also into cable TV.

Saskatchewan has already announced it intends to set up a trial system covering one or two of its larger centres, and other provinces have reported they are studying the cable TV questions.

Here in Ontario, in fact, some unnamed source or other has been reported as saying we are thinking about buying out the existing systems at a cost of some $60 million or better with some thought of spending further hundreds or millions to extend them.

There is considerably more point to this proposal than is apparent at first glance.

The provinces that are interested have a bit more in mind than seeing that everyone has an equal opportunity of watching hockey games and Mannix.

They are looking to the communications problems of culture and the position that cable probably will play in them.

In addition to immense computer implications there are already visions of shopping by cable, banking by cable, printing newspapers by cable.

It appears that cable will be a vital life-line, of much more significance to the community than even the telephone now is.

So where does government come into the picture? Why should this not be a private enterprise development?

One reason is that if this service is to be as vital as it appears it will be, then it will be essential that it covers all areas.

Then by its very nature the operation would tend to be monopolistic. And there is a lot of public feeling today against private companies having monopoly rights.

This, of course, doesn't mean we won't see private enterprise in the field.

But as of now, it would appear that this will be a government undertaking and eventually a huge one.

'Three Rs.' Are They Missing From Today's School Scene?

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The decision of the Hastings County Board of Education to make a thorough review of the curriculum in our schools is long overdue.

With the staggering cost of education these days and the emphasis on "modern methods" it is becoming apparent to every thinking person that many are not getting value for money in some areas. Those areas, probably the most important of them all, reading, writing and arithmetic have been relegated to a secondary role behind the questionable "new approach."

Listening to board members relate that kids can't spell, read or perform simple mathematical functions when well on in their school years, is indeed, frightening.

There is mounting evidence that this state of affairs is true. Employers, parents, educators and even the kids themselves admit there is still much to be said for the methods referred to by the smug members of the "new concept" breed, as old-fashioned.

I have read submissions by university graduates that would shame a grade nine pupil of the old regime. What is even more shocking is that some educators seem to think it is not important if a youngster cannot master the basics of the three "R"s. How on earth are they expected to go through life with a vocabulary of three and four-letter words? How often do you find errors by young clerks in banks and supermarkets when making change? How often do you come across a youngster that has read, understood and enjoyed some of the staples like Mark Twain, Charles Dickens, Thomas Hardy, etc. Not too often.

Why is it necessary to have a three year review? Seems to me there is ample evidence that the Mums and Dads were taught the basics properly, so why not draw from the curriculums of those days.

And how about, for a change, telling the kids what they are going to do instead of the other way round?

Press Excluded from Deliberations

New City of Cambridge Off to Difficult Start

Kitchener - Waterloo Record

In the selection and makeup of the Waterloo regional government there are two points of concern regarding only one of the seven component municipalities, the new city of Cambridge.

What appears to have been an error of serious proportions was made in the selection of the four Cambridge councillors who join Mayor Millar on the regional council. Compounding the error, however, was the fact that it was made at a closed meeting, with the press (and so the public) excluded from direct knowledge of how the choices were made.

There representatives were picked from the former city of Galt, one from the former town of Preston but none from the former town of Hespeler. This clearly does not make for the greatest balance between the component parts of the new city nor does it provide the best kind of representation on the regional council.

Hespeler may have been the smallest of the three component municipalities, but there were other factors which counterbalanced this. Hespeler has had a long and colorful history as a separate municipality, and its geographical location suggests it will be the last of the three to be fully integrated into the new city.

Because the press was barred from the meeting, what went on is cloudy and perhaps even suggestive of a gang-up on Hespeler. Mayor Millar was forced to break two tie votes one of which involved former Hespeler reeve Erwin Nelson. She explained her vote (apparently for a Galt representative) by saying she didn't know who she was voting against, only who she was voting for. Without further explanation, it is impossible to know how this is possible.

But entirely aside from the question of this particular vote, the decision to exclude the public meeting was strange indeed. Neither Waterloo nor Woolwich Township, the other two municipalities voting on regional representatives, found this necessary.

Mayor Millar was quoted in her first Preston campaign in 1969 as saying she favored open meetings except for financial and personnel meetings. One of the three Galt representatives, Ald. Marie Sonnenberg, was among those who campaigned on the basis of a more open press policy.

The new council, conscious perhaps that its strategy on choice of its committees was vulnerable, decided that in future all its meetings will be open to the press except those dealing with personnel, which is an acceptable exclusion.

But this decision too was taken at a closed meeting. The unfortunate thing about all this manoeuvring is that it gets the council off on the wrong foot in its relations with both the public and press. Its future actions will be watched closely for any new tendencies in this direction.

PM Sought Chat But Canadians Weren't Tuned In

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau only wanted to hold a philosophical "conversation" with Canadians about such matters as their country's integrity and identity.

But Canadians were only half in; the results of Monday's federal election showed. They didn't ignore things like unemployment, inflation and what NDP Leader David Lewis called the corporate rip-off.

Real Conservatism's Social Credit party may not have gained much in an absolute sense, but by holding on to what it had in Quebec it confounded Liberal politicians who had confidently predicted their party would pluck six or eight Social Credit seats—and helped reduce the one-seat Conservative edge.

One effect of Monday's result is that it suddenly throws wide open again the whole question of national unity.

The pursuit of concord between French and English-speaking Canada had been a principal theme of Mr. Trudeau's administration.

The extent to which backlash against the Liberal government's bilingualism program figured in Monday's stalemate will take some time to assess precisely.

The fact, however, that more than half the seats held by the governing party are in Quebec and that Conservatives, neck and neck with the Liberals nationally, hold only two Quebec seats—carries its own unsettling connotation over a national-unity standpoint.

From beginning to end, Mr. Trudeau's was a lonely campaign.

Instead of the dashing playboy of 1968, Canadians saw on the hustings a maturer leader with a disdain for partisan politicking.

In announcing the election on Sept. 1, Mr. Trudeau said the central issue would be national integrity. He developed several strands of this theme in the course of the campaign, contending several times that Canada had attained a higher degree of self-realization under his government than ever before.

"Canadians are discovering that this country has pulled it all together in the last four years," he said in one of his last speeches.

Walks Away

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — A man struck by a car with such force that his hard or elbow smashed the windshield picked himself up from the road and walked away after refusing hospital treatment. Louise I. Stone of Ayr told police that the man, who appeared intoxicated, staggered from the sidewalk into the side of the car, then fell to the ground. Mrs. Stone sought to take the man to hospital but he refused. Damage to the car was $80.

BC Liberal Advises Trudeau to Step Down

VICTORIA (CP) — Provincial Liberal Leader David Anderson said Tuesday it would be wise for the federal Liberals to step down and turn the government over to the Progressive Conservatives.

This is possibly the only worthwhile solution to the stalemate dilemma created by Monday's national election, he said.

Asked if he thought Pierre Elliott Trudeau now would resign as prime minister, Mr. Anderson said: "It is a real possibility that he would. I want to point out that I am not calling for this. It would be presumptuous of me. But it is a possibility."

"He's lost seats and I think he's going to have to give serious consideration to letting the opposition give it a whirl.

"I don't think it would be possible for Trudeau to continue in a minority government as prime minister. There are too many guys in the opposition who hate him."

Mr. Anderson said the nation cannot stand another election, but by allowing the Conservatives to govern, an election could come in two years.

He said Mr. Stanfield's an

French Power Rejected

"MONTREAL (CP) — Rene Levesque, leader of the Parti Quebecois, said Tuesday the federal election results show a complete rejection of French power."

"The Liberals have been reduced to a Quebec bloc," he said in an interview.

"The French power in Ottawa wasn't real power, just linguistic candies, such as local initiatives and grants from the Secretary of State's department. But this French image wasn't tolerated in the rest of the country."

He said the election "will certainly help us move forward and will weaken the provincial Liberals."

Of the 108 seats won by the Liberals in Monday's federal election, 66 are in Quebec or in Manitoba and New Brunswick where there are significant French-speaking populations, he said.

New Vote Unlikely -- Caouette

ROUYN, Que. (CP) — Social Credit leader Real Caouette said Tuesday he doubts that another federal election will be called in the near future.

"It all depends on the New Democratic Party," he said in an interview. "And I don't think they want another election just yet."

"The NDP is closer to the Liberals because they're more socialist than the Conservatives. If you take a look you'll see most of those corporate welfare bums David Lewis is talking about are with the Conservatives," Mr. Caouette said.

"I think they'll support the Liberals for a while. After that who knows?"

The NDP won 20 seats in Monday's federal election. Social Credit won 15, all in Quebec.

"As far as I am concerned we can support either the Liberals or the Conservatives depending on who comes closest to our programs," the 55-year-old party leader said.

Hamilton Man MP At Twenty

HAMILTON (CP) — Sean O'Sullivan, a 20-year-old Progressive Conservative who became Monday the youngest member ever to be elected to Parliament, probably will always hold a soft spot for the Liberal government.

It was the Liberals in the last Parliament who lowered the voting age to 18 from 21, permitting Mr. O'Sullivan to vote and run as a candidate in the federal election.

Lorne Nystrom the New Democratic Party member from Yorkton-Melville, was previously the youngest person to be elected to Parliament when he won at age 22 in 1968. He was re-elected Monday.

Mr. O'Sullivan won his seat by nearly 4,000 votes over the Liberals and NDP. The Conservatives ran third in the riding in 1968.

Sipping ginger ale at his victory celebration Monday night, Mr. O'Sullivan was handed a telegram from the former Prime Minister which read: "congratulations and hail to the conquering hero."

Quebec Liberals Worried

QUEBEC (CP) — Members of the Quebec provincial Liberal party surveyed the Eastern Tuesday with possible friction resulting from a predominantly French-speaking Liberal party in Ottawa pitted against an almost totally English-speaking Progressive Conservative party.

"It's disturbing," William Tetley, English-speaking minister of financial institutions, said in an interview.

"This polarization of opposites is going to be bad . . . you just can't hide that."

Mr. Tetley said he is not alone in believing that troubled days lie ahead for Quebecers.

Noel St.-Germain, Liberal legislature member for Jacques Cartier, said he is "worried" by the possible support the Part i Quebecois could grab from the results.

"Regardless of whether there are other reasons for Trudeau's setback, the average Quebec citizen sees the results as being anti-French," he said.

Mr. St.-Germain suggested the results could bring about "unexpected changes" in the political leanings of Quebec politicians who have defended federalism.

Blind Fence

MONTREAL (CP) — Experimental lessons in fencing at the Montreal Association for the Blind have given some pupils a new sense of balance as well as new sporting skills, Instructor Yvan Stein of McGill University said blind fencers' sense of touch developed as they found contact of blades gave them a feeling of the target without seeing it.

U.S. Is Advised To Be Sensitive

NEW YORK (CP) — The New York Times, in a lead editorial headed Upset in Canada, says "the United States can enjoy productive relations with either the Trudeau or Mr. Stanfield if it behaves with a measure of sensitivity, especially during the difficult period of minority government in Canada."

Assessing what it termed "a stunning and unexpected blow" to Prime Minister Trudeau's re-election bid, The Times comments:

"It would have occasioned no surprise if Mr. Trudeau's party had failed to win an absolute majority while finishing well in front of the Conservatives. What astonished nearly all observers was the fact that the Conservatives—under a leader wholly lacking in the Trudeau kind of charisma—finished in a virtual dead heat with the Liberals. . . .

With the U.S. election less than a week away, the paper remarked that "Americans polls" could take a lesson from the surprising result in Canada.

"Mr. Stanfield obviously made greater impact than even his supporters had dared hope with his campaign concentrated on the bread-and-butter issues: record unemployment, rising costs, increased taxation." The Times says. "Mr. Trudeau's determination to advance bilingualism all across Canada—an essential for preservation of national unity—cost the Liberals many votes in the West."

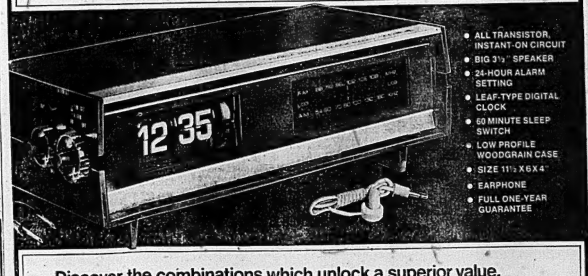
It says that Prime Minister Trudeau "has presided over meaningful and exciting change for Canada."

"It is difficult to envision him either exercising the infinite patience required to lead a minority government or directing hard parliamentary slogging required of an opposition leader," The Times says. "But it would be unfortunate if the talents of this extraordinary man were lost to Canadian public life."

"Despite Washington's hamfisted behavior toward Canada at the time of President Nixon's emergency economic measures last year," the paper comments, "relations with the United States played virtually no role as a campaign issue as far as the two big parties were concerned."

James Reston, vice-president of The Times, also comments on the Canadian election in a separate column.

"The startling success of the Conservatives in Canada and polls" could take a few pounds under their flamboyant intellectual leader, Robert Elliott, is only the latest evidence of a worldwide swing to the right," Reston says.



He says the explanation for the trend no doubt differed from country to country.

"In Canada, for example, it could be argued that Trudeau decided precisely because he took an arrogant attitude toward the people's Parliament," Reston says.

Off Course

CONSBROUGH, England (CP) — Schoolgirl javelin champion Anne Goodlad, 17, was planning some quiet training when she headed for an open space outside this Yorkshire town. But on her first throw, the javelin hit an overhead power cable—and threw the area into darkness. "The electricity people were at least able to see the funny side of it," Ann said. She is rated sixth in her javelin class in Britain.

Was Election Anti-aircraft Weapon?

TORONTO (CP) — The group opposed to the proposed airport northeast of Toronto expects the project will be shelved as a result of Monday's general election.

Dr. Charles Godfrey, chairman of the People or Planes Committee said Tuesday that Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield's campaign statements indicated a rejection of the airport.

David Lewis, New Democratic Party leader whose party holds the balance of power, has said he is against the airport.

Dr. Godfrey said that between Mr. Lewis and Mr. Stanfield he does not expect the project to go ahead.

During the campaign, Mr. Stanfield said he was not convinced that the airport was needed and, even if it was, it would be low on his list of priorities.

The People or Planes group says the money should be used to stimulate economic development east of Oshawa.

The Conservative candidate in the airport area, Frank McGee, won the riding of Ontario by 12 votes from Liberal Norman Cafik. During the campaign, Mr. McGee opposed the airport.

Meanwhile, Metro Toronto will proceed with the purchase of about 1,200 acres of land near the proposed airport site while awaiting the federal and provincial governments to decide if the land can be used.

Metro had planned to dump garbage in the area, but representatives of both senior levels of government warned that the landfill project would attract thousands of birds, which would pose a threat to aircraft.

Want Nixon

TORONTO (CP) — Many members of the Ontario Liberal caucus want Robert Nixon to stay on as provincial party leader, caucus member James Bullbrook said Tuesday.

When he announced at the party's annual meeting in Ottawa in January that he was going to resign he wanted a leadership convention immediately; but was asked to carry on until after the federal election, then expected in June.

Last Supper?

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A witness in a $1.5-million bank robbery trial testified Tuesday she saw the six persons accused of the December holdup at the Royal Bank branch having breakfast at the Holiday Inn here the morning after the robbery.

New Policy

TORONTO (CP) — Eric Winkler, Chairman of the management board of the Ontario cabinet, announced Tuesday the formation of a committee to develop a program to make insurance more understandable to the public.

Speaking to the annual convention of the Ontario Insurance Agents Association, he said the committee would be set up in the next several weeks and would be headed by John Clement, Ontario minister of consumer and commercial relations.

Mr. Winkler told the agents that the public usually purchases insurance with little information.

"Millions of dollars are going out as premiums from the public to insurance companies and very few know what they have and what they're paying for," he said.

Blames Schools

OTTAWA (CP) — Schools may be guilty of adding to the stresses of life rather than teaching students to face them, Norman Goble, secretary-general of the Canadian Teachers' Federation, said Tuesday.

In the closing address at a two-day national conference on school health Mr. Groble said: "There is room for immediate improvement in many schools in the reduction of unnecessary stress, to make them less detrimental to the physical, emotional and mental health of the student."

The Ottawa educationist said he was not referring only to the physical environment of the school, although the "old familiar questions" about lighting, ventilation and "the dietary influence of the soft drink machine" also are important.

"But what we have not given nearly enough thought to is the nature of the school as an overall daily environment during 12 of the most important years of life."

Vatican Ups Ante

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican has made marriage annulments in its tribunal cheaper with new rates to go into effect today. The move drew immediate accusations that the Roman Catholic Church was competing with divorce courts.

The Vatican confirmed the new judicial fees after a Roma newspaper printed the text of the circular letter by which Dino Cardinal Staffa of Italy, the president of the Sacred Rota informed bishops around the world on the decision.

Under the new system, Vatican auditors will strictly control the fees that those seeking an annulment have to pay to lawyers. The lawyer will be paid through the court and within the minimum and maximum fee limits set in the letter.

This, the letter said, is aimed at "eliminating the misuses which in this field have been allured or have actually taken place" giving start to "rumors which really damage the church." Priests and lay lawyers included in a vatican list of authorized lawyers of the Sacred Rota tribunal are known to charge up to $17,000 or more for each marriage case.

The new fees range from $255 to $510 for lawyers. Trial expenses range from $425 to $595 for one trial. Each marriage case, however, requires at least two trials for a ruling to become final.

Barbershop Singers Aid Ones With Speech Defect

By DORIS CLARK

Members of the S.P.E.B.S.Q.S.A. (we believe) enjoy barbershop singing. But they sing for a cause as well as for fun. Proceeds of all their concerts and public appearances go toward a project called "We Sing That They Shall Speak."

Children with speech defects are send to the Institute of Logopedics, Wichita, Kansas, where they are treated by therapy which includes the use of music and creative arts. The Institute was founded by the late Dr. Martin F. Palmer who found that children with no language skills frequently began to talk within three months of being exposed constantly to music.

Thirty-five Ontario chapters of the S.P.E.B.S.Q.S.A. are currently sending three Ontario children to the Institute. It is expensive, as the child must stay at least two years, and must be accompanied by a parent. However the Barbershoppers believe that it is worth every penny! — Dorothy Turcotte.

P.S. The organization with the outlandish initials is the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartette Singing in America.

Dear Doris; I am badly disabled by a curvature of the spine resulting from an accident in babyhood. In 1949 at the Mayo Clinic they gave me one more year to walk. I taught school for 15 years after, then received due to age. A year ago I had to get a wheelchair, but still do my own housework by pushing from counter to sink to stove and so on. One leg is almost completely paralyzed.

I live on a farm 10 miles from a small village, with a married son living nearby. Life with my husband has deteriorated; he wants to go nowhere, do nothing. I can't entertain so we have few visitors.

This loneliness is getting to me. I want to go to the city where I can play bridge and be with people. But where can I go? How can I do it? — M.T.

Dear M.T.: It's a poser. But with your spirit and fortitude, there has to be a way. I am sending you the addresses of some agencies by your area — agencies which may even jar your husband into a little action.

But don't hesitate to turn to your son, your closest friends, even your parish priest for assistance in getting around and improving your life. You are entitled to spend these years in the way that will make you happiest. Don't give up!

Dear Doris: Do you see any wrong in having my stepdaughter to stand up with me as my maid of honor when I marry her father?

She is 15 but looks and acts older. I am in my early forties.

She and I get along like sisters. — Stepmother-to-be

Dear S.T.B.: Doesn't seem quite fittin'. Others may not look on you as sisters. And traditionally it is a relative or special friend of the bride, not of the groom, who has this honor.

But I'm glad you are good pals: it helps get your marriage off to a good start. Mind you, the proceedings would be just as legal either way, although I'd want a more mature person to serve as witness.

There'll be other important things she can do, like taking care of guests, helping with refreshments, sending out invitations, keeping track of gifts as they arrive.

(Ask Doris about your difficulty, writing her in care of this newspaper. She will fix-cuss it or send you to a source of help.)

Ann Landers

Ann Takes a Happy Poll

Dear Ann Landers: While cleaning out some desk drawers I came across an item from the Boston Globe—dated Sept. 30, 1948.

Here is the first paragraph:

"Most people find the 10 years between the age of 20 and 30 the happiest years in their lives," a Syracuse University psychologist told the 50th annual meeting of the American Psychological Association."

What do you think, Ann? What do your readers think?—Fullerton Father

Dear Dad: It wasn't so for me. Each ten-year period of my life has been better than the one that preceded it. I don't know what my readers think, but I'll ask them.

Just send a postcard (no letters, please) to Ann Landers, Chicago Sun-Times, 401 N. Wabash, Chicago, Illinois 60611. Jot down the best ten-year period of your life. I'll publish the result of the poll in a few weeks.

Dear Ann Landers: May I add a word to your warning re regard to the unfortunate things that can befall children because an adult was careless or thoughtless?

Our old car didn't have seat belts. Our three-year-old was in front with me. I turned my head to look for my fan and in a second's time she had her head under the door handle, the car swerved, the door opened and out she went. Through some miracle she wasn't hurt.

Two weeks later we had a new car—with seat belts. My older boy was in the back seat. I neglected to make sure his belt was fastened before we started. A few minutes later we were in heavy traffic, the door flew open and the child fell out. Another miracle. He didn't get a scratch.

From now on we don't turn the key in the ignition until all doors are locked and the seat belts are fastened. I was lucky twice and I'm not going to take another chance.—Mrs. H.K.B.

Dear Mrs. H.K.B.: Thank you for saying something that needs to be said again and again. I can't tell you the number of times I've seen an adult driving with a child on his lap—or a youngster standing up in the front seat—or kids fighting in the back seat. I'm tempted to roll down my window and shout, "Don't you care what happens to your children?"

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a registered nurse in an intensive care unit of a large hospital. Thank you for your wise words about allowing loved ones to die with dignity.

I cannot describe the anguish of husbands, wives, brothers, sisters, children and parents who come to the hospital day after day to sit and stare, praying for the agony to end. I'm sure they would like to say to the doctors, "Please let him go." But they dare not allow such thoughts to cross their minds. Believe me, Ann, it could be the last truly unselfish thing these people can do for someone they love. Say it one more time.—St. Louis

Dear St. Louis: Many problems I deal with require some lived through. My father suf-it could be the last truly unsel-imagination. I must try to put fered too long fighting an ill-fish thing a person can do for myself in the writer's shoes. terly hopeless battle with can-someone he loves. My only re-But this problem is one I have cer. You are right when you say great is that I didn't do it sooner.

Mirror of Your Mind

by JOHN CONNELL

Can a man live up to a wife's ideal?

YES, if a husband knows that his wife expects him to be a fleshand-blood human being with a fair amount of good points and the usual faults that most people have. If he tries to live up to some shadowy ideal that she thought her husband should be, however, the marriage is headed for trouble. Then it becomes a matter of the husband's striving to match a preconceived "dream man" ideal rather than each trying to please the other.

Must constructive criticism hurt?

NO; not if the person who gives it sincerely wants it to be constructive criticism, and not some thinly disguised barb. Also, the critic must know what he is talking about. Equally important is the timing. Constructive criticism should be given when someone can act upon it. But very rarely constructive if the person must live with the criticism for a few days before he can correct whatever brought on the comments.

Do children tie down a mother?

CERTAINLY. Taking care of her children isn't going to leave much time for a mother who wants to be on "the go." Meantime, Dad has been "retired in," too; especially if his wife has an outside job and he pitches in with the child-caring and homemaking chores. If they are both mature emotionally as well as physically, though, the couple can compensate for being tied down by finding satisfaction in their traditional role as parents.

New Panty Hose Shown

By MARGARET NESS

NEW YORK (CP) — Panty hose for fall has three newsmaking facets. There are newly proportioned styles custom-designed for tall girls. Black seams have returned and exuberant colors are here again.

"The movie sirens such as Pola Negri and Gloria Swanson made stockings with contrast back seams an emphatic sex symbol."

Since that nostalgic period has influenced much of this fall's fashion thinking, Burlington decided to introduce a nostalgic collection of opaque panty hose with seams in shock color contrast. So black seams draw all eyes to hose in fuchsia, red, green or navy. Cocoa seams appear on winter white hose and beige on brown.

Indeed color is back on the legs this fall. If you're avant-garde, you might like a new opaque panty hose shade called fresh orange. It's suggested as leg glamor for the browns and oranges that are prevalent in the popular plaid dresses and jackets. Or there are fuchsia, saffron, yellow, mulberry, loden green, red hot and bright blue. These can mix or match with your fall costumes and shoes.

Black is important again, especially for evening wear. And a black outfit demands sheer black panty hose or stockings. Naturally the basic colors are there for the conservative dresser but even in these there's a little more color. Earth brown or cocoa shades go well with fall's popular grey flannel suits.

There are more than 500,000 women in Canada who are five feet eight inches and over, reports Madeleine Jardim, fashion director for Canadian Burlington Cameo. Up to now tall girls had to make do with large panty hose sizes meant for plump figures. But what most tall girls needed was a proportioned length for those long legs. Now special tall-girl panty hose is available in four of the most popular shades.

Seams Are Back

Assembly President Pays Official Visit

The president of the Rebekah Assembly of Ontario, Sister Mavis Slater, made her official visit to District No. 4 recently, at a meeting held in the new Lodge Hall at 111 Bay Dr., Belleville. Visitors were from Laurel Rebekah Lodge No. 211, Stirling; Oakdale Rebekah Lodge No. 134, Madoc, and other lodges in the district.

The Noble Grand of Quinte na Rebekah Lodge No. 133, Belleville, Sister Anne Haagsma, welcomed all present and invited the Officers of Laurel Rebekah Lodge No. 211, Stirling, to take the chairs for the ceremony of opening lodge. The Noble Grand Sister Marjory Stapley of Stirling Lodge presided during the opening ceremonies. The flag was presented by the Color Bearer, Sister Mary Johnston. Appropriate solos were rendered by Sister Nellie McIntosh.

The business of the Quinte na Rebekah Lodge was conducted by the officers of Quinte na Lodge, with the Noble Grand, sister Anne Haagsma welcoming all visitors and members. The president of the Rebekah Assembly of Ontario Sister Slater was introduced by Sister Grace Akey, JPNG., warmly welcomed by the Noble Grand and given the honors of the sister. Sister Dorothy Webber sang a solo of welcome. A number of distinguished guests were introduced.

Quinte na Rebekah Lodge No. 133 Belleville concucted an impressive ceremony of initiation on five candidates — three who joined Oakdale Rebekah Lodge, Madoc; and two who joined Quintena Rebekah Lodge, Belleville. During the initiation ceremony solos were sung by Sister Doris Clark.

Following the Initiation Ceremony and general business of the Lodge, the president of the Rebekah Assembly of Ontario, Sister Slater, expressed her pleasure and appreciation for the warm reception lendered her and congratulated the Lodges on their excellent work. She also complimented the Belleville Rebekah Lodge and the Oddfellows Lodge on the beautiful new Lodge Room and Banquet Hall, and appreciated the fact that much hard work was going into this effort by the dedicated members of both Lodges.

The president left with the members an inspiring message of the teachings of the order and suggested that each member re-dedicate herself to the work of the Order, with special emphasis on visiting the sick and shut-in members regularly.

She also spoke about her projects and plans for the year ahead.

On behalf of the three Lodges present, a gift was presented to Sister Slater by the three presiding Noble Grands, along with other gifts.

The District Deputy President, Sister Alice Adams, spoke briefly and congratulated Quintena Lodge on the beautiful manner in which they performed the initiatory work.

Oakdale Rebekah Lodge, Madoc, presented Quintena Rebekah Lodge with a gift in appreciation for conferring the degree on their candidates.

Lunch was served in the banquet hall by Sister Maud Craig and her committee.

Club Activities

QUINTE FIELD NATURALISTS

In theme with 'members' night', Alma Moorcroft, Marian Fisher, Terry Savage and Irwin Knight showed pictures of the scenery and wildlife in Madoc, Prospect and Prince Edward County.

It was suggested by president, Wayne David, that an auxiliary branch of young people be formed and it is hoped that something concrete may grow out of the suggestion.

After the meeting refreshments were served. All future meetings will be held at the library.

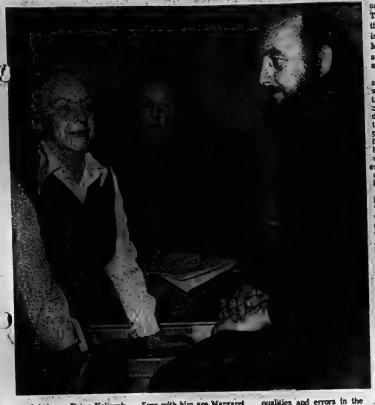
Art Shows the 'Real' Person

"Some artists use frames as commodities," said Peter Kolisnyk, juror for the present art display shown by the Belleville Art Association at the Corby Public Library. "I consider the size the artpiece is and how good it is." Mr. Kolisnyk has no favorite color schemes and did not consider the time taken in creating the 102 selections shown him by Margaret Pedersen, president of the association and past president, Bea Williamson.

This 38 - year - old artist and art teacher from Cobourg, believes that any artist who selects mismatched frames which deviate from their work should be interior decorators.



"What annoys me about this type of artists is the reason why they paint — for others, or to match their chesterfield. These artists are not true to themselves. And more annoying, this work really sells." Mr. Kolisnyk added, "I just sold an art piece, my first in a year, now.

From the art pieces presented, which included oils, water colors, sculptures, batiks and acrylics, Peter could analyse the true artist, "do not consider the length of time taken for these art pieces. "A masterpiece with a few strokes of the brush may be made in several minutes, while another may take longer," said Peter. "It depends on how open and expressive their minds are."

The character of the artist is seen by this art teacher, "By looking at art, I know whether I like the individual or not. Therefore, I personally wouldn't want to meet them. An egotist is easily illustrated by his work. But I can still admire him."

Mr. Kolisnyk has taught several members in the Belleville Art Association. There are presently 128 members in this group, now," said president Margaret Pedersen. "our enrolment has increased since last year."

Not all the members show their art work, as they do not want it judged yet. The association visits various museums, and galleries and discuss eath other's work. While Peter was selecting the art pieces for the show which begins today, the president, Margaret Pedersen, and Bea Williamson, past president, jotted notes and remarks to give the artists from their juror.

Art juror, Peter Kolisnyk had a lot of professional suggestions for artists at last evening's private judging for today's art show. Seen with him are Margaret Pedersen, president of the Belleville Art Association and Bea Williamson past president, discussing the qualities and errors in the given art, while choosing for the art exhibition which begins this evening.

New Tax Laws Called Both Good and Bad

OTTAWA (CP) — As far as farmers are concerned, the new federal tax laws can be called "The Good, the Bad and the Ugly," a recent tax study says.

The study, prepared for the Agricultural Economics Research Council of Canada by Marvin Anderson, opens with the comment:

"Death and taxes are alike in that both are inevitable. They doesn't get worse every time Parliament convenes."

The study, released Tuesday, says the new tax laws contain several provisions that will benefit farmers in the short run, but several other provisions that will be detrimental in the long run.

The short-run pluses are deductions and personal exemptions, an improved rate structure, retention of cash income reporting and retention of the five-year block-income-averaging procedure.

The long-run minuses are the capital gains tax, abolition of straight-line depreciation and basic-herd provisions over a period and transfer of succession and gift taxes to the provinces.

The study recommends that farmers carefully consider changing their business organization to reduce the harmful impact of tax laws.

If you now have a sole proprietorship, assets of $100,000 plus and an annual net income in excess of $15,000, think about incorporating.

"If you are now in a legal partnership (pre-1972), think about winding it up. Start over or establish a different business arrangement. Whatever you do, you should definitely value all of your assets at this time.

"Average-sized farmers specifically concerned with a father-son transfer should thoroughly investigate the possible advantages of a business agreement which does not qualify as a legal partnership."

In discussing whether a farmer should incorporate himself, the study lists four principal benefits from incorporation:

—Farm assets transferred to the corporation are not hit with capital gains tax for a generation.

—Both husband and wife can draw salaries, thus splitting income that would otherwise be taxed as a whole at a higher rate.

—Remaining taxable income, up to $50,000 a year, is taxed at only 25 per cent.

—No provincial succession duties are levied on the corporation, just on the shareholders' stock holdings.

But incorporation also brings some disadvantages, the study says. When the corporation is liquidated, the shares are liable to capital gains tax.

If the corporation is so profitable that it falls under the 50-per-cent rate, then the tax on its dividends will be higher than if the dividends were income earned directly by the individual shareholder.

Gone Dutch

LIVERPOOL, England (CP) — A Lancashire clog-making firm has announced a bumper £30,000 about ($30,000) deal to make clogs for Holland. Nesle Sanders, 23, who runs the business with his brother Keith, said: "Our clogs are very colorful and supposedly more with-it than Dutch styles."

Just For Kicks

LONDON (CP) — Alan Bartlett was cleaning some steels with a can of gasoline when it burst into flames. He kicked the can under his car, which burst into flames; kicked it again and it soared the paint from a second vehicle before rolling against the side of Bartlett's house. Before firemen arrrived $2,000 damage had been done.

Will Breed Lab Animals

Henry Cerny stands in front of an old schoolhouse he is turning into an animal breeding centre in Gunton, Man. When fully operational Cerny expects to produce 10,000 mice, 6,000 rats and 4,000 guinea pigs annually for research purposes. (CP Photo)

'Big Brother' Spy System Is Said White House Plan

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — A Democratic congressman said Tuesday the White House has drawn up a plan for a country-wide "big brother" propaganda and spying system that would affect every home in the United States.

William Moorhead, chairman of the House of Representatives government operations subcommittee on information, said in a statement he has obtained a copy of the secret plan.

The Pennsylvania congressman said the plan, drawn up by the White House office of science and technology, was a blueprint for the "big brother" propaganda and spy system which George Orwell warned about in his novel, 1984.

He said the plan, which the government could put into effect in some cases by 1975, includes placing in every U.S. home, car and boat a special radio receiver which could be turned on by the government as part of a disaster warning system, he said.

Moorhead said this would facilitate a flow of social, cultural, educational and other types of government-controlled information, perhaps even propaganda, to schools, post offices, civil authorities, health personnel and individuals.

Moorhead added: "Literally every American community, every American home would be wired for sound under this plan, which the White House has stamped 'Administratively confidential'—in other words to be kept secret from the American people.

"This plan to remake our entire social, economic and political structure has been hidden from the Congress and the public in the hope it will not become an issue in the 1972 campaign."

Hits Ceilings

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Dalton Clark, chairman of the Lincoln County board of education, said Tuesday provincial ceilings on education spending have a bad effect on local education autonomy.

Speaking to the provincial government's committee on costs of education, he said the ceilings had impaired the board's ability to respond to local needs.

The Library Corner

By O. D.

SELECTED POEMS — Raymond Souster. Though he is recognized as one of Canada's most significant poets, Raymond Souster does not fit the picture commonly held of a poet. He lives and works in Toronto where he grew up, and his way of life is central to all his poems. His gift in writing poetry is to help us see ourselves as we are, and the everyday world as it is, more honestly than ever before.

HUNTING STUART AND OTHER PLAYS — Robertson Davies. Robertson Davies is one of Canada's most successful novelists at home and abroad, but a great deal of his talent lies within the theatre. This collection of plays is worldly and witty, with all the dramatic power of his former works.

THE GENEROUS DAYS — Stephen Spender. These poems, some inspired by his travels, his family and friends, reveal a response to experience, which is both intelligent and sharply sensitive. They sometimes strike also a note of reflectiveness and acceptance which adds to a new dimension to Mr. Spenders poetry.

PLAYS OF THE YEAR, 378-71. The fortieth half-yearly volume of "Plays of the Year" includes work by one of the most applauded of the newer dramatists; one of the most experienced of an older school; a young writer; and an author-director of exceptional gifts.

POEMS OF MAO-TSE-TUNG — Translated by Willis Barnstone. The poems of this collection are not the product of an elder statesman's leisure but rather poems written obsessively during years of wandering. The poems, aside from their obvious political interest, are simply very beautiful in their own right and are the expression of decades of struggle.

BETWEEN TEARS AND LAUGHTER — Alden Nowlan. Nowlan has captured a wide range of human emotions in this collection of 100 poems. His ability to write simply and directly has always characterized his unique style.

SUNRISE NORTH — Elizabeth Brewster. Many of the poems in this collection centre around life in the Prairies and in the Maritimes. Using language of everyday speech, Miss Brewster creates images that are striking in their simplicity.

STOLEN APPLES — Yevtushenko. Yevgeny Yevtushenko was born in Siberia and now lives in Moscow. His poetry has been translated into many languages, and published throughout the world. These English adaptations of his poetry have been prepared by eight distinguished writers.

Thirsty Work

CHRISTCHURCH, England (CP) — The Hampshire town is looking for a man who is prepared to sit down on the job—as an ale tester. His duties will involve pouring beer onto a wooden bench and sitting on it for an hour. If the tester can then stand up without his trousers sticking to the bench, the ale is of good quality. The post dates back to 1267 and a local councilor wants it reintroduced for functions and festivals in the area.

Hydro Rates Will Increase in 1973

TORONTO (CP) — George Gathercole, chairman of Ontario Hydro, said Tuesday rates to all customers will rise in 1973.

Mr. Gathercole, saying increases were needed because of rising energy costs, added that interim wholesale rates to municipal commissions will rise by an average of eight per cent, and the average increase to industrial customers, 12 per cent.

Both increases will be effective Jan. 1, 1973.

He said the average increase for retail customers—owners of cottages, farms and rural residents—will be 10 per cent, effective on bills payable Feb. 1, 1973.

The increase to municipal electrical utilities will be the second in six months. The last was effective July 1.

There have been no increases to direct industrial and rural customers for two years.

The raises affect 350 municipal utilities, 91 large industrial customers and about 600,000 rural consumers.

"In recent years, after a long period of rate stability or decline, spiralling inflation has begun to affect electric costs and rates," said Mr. Gathercole.

"Interest rates on borrowed capital, wages and salaries and the price of property, supplies and material have been rising faster than savings resulting from rising consumption per customer and other economy measures.

"Because Hydro has to operate at cost, rate increases in recent years have had to follow the upward trend in cost of most other goods and services and wages and salaries.

Flying Jockey

WOLVERHAMPTON, England (CP) — Pushed for time, a jockey being flown here in a light plane for a race ordered the pilot to land on the course. Later the pilot, whose aircraft was thought by the crowd to be following around the racetrack horses from its low altitude, was fined 50 pounds (about $120) for flying close to the ground without permission. The jockey's luck was no better. He fell off his horse and broke his nose.

OFL Goal 32 Hours A Week

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Federation of Labor (OFL)...opening its three - day annual convention in Ottawa Monday, will consider resolutions calling for legislation against strikebreakers, a 32-hour work week and a $3 an-hour minimum wage. Among more than 100 other discussion topics are labor relations, employment standards, "unemployment, taxation and conservation rip - offs," the OFL said Tuesday.

DAVID LEWIS

Lewis Has Dangerous Precedents

OTTAWA (CP) — David Lewis has guided the New Democratic Party to its greatest federal electoral triumph since its foundation in 1961—30 seats.

And he holds the balance of power now for either a Liberal or Progressive Conservative party attempt to shape a minority government, barring their coalition.

But history says he should beware. Other minority parties have fared badly in supporting minority governments.

The standings after Monday's election give the opposition Progressive Conservatives 109 seats to 108 for the Liberal party—leaving the ruling Liberals to resign, seek a new election or try to put together a governing band of parliamentarians from the 30 NDP, 15 Social Credit and two Independents who comprisert he 26th seat House of Commons.

That puts the NDP on the spot as the only group that can assure either party the majority. There are examples of the risks to be run.

The National Progressive party, formed under Thomas A. Crerar in 1929, kept W. L. Mackenzie King in power from 1921 until 1926. In the process, it almost wiped out the Conservative party.

In the 1926 election, the Liberals won 117 seats, compared with 64 for the Progressive and 91 for the disorganized Conservatives. In 1925 Progressive strength dropped to 24 but that was enough to keep King, with 101 MPs, in power against 116 resurgent Conservatives.

By the 1926 election, King was still in a minority position with 116 MPs, compared with 91 Conservatives, 11 MPs from the United Farmers of Alberta—which also has disappeared from the scene—13 Progressives and 19 Liberal Progressives.

But the Progressive party was on the way out and virtually died after a strong Conservative victory in 1930.

Then there is the case of Social Credit, first on the federal scene in 1935 with 17 MPs from Alberta and Saskatchewan.

These were wiped out in 1940. But from 1945 until the John Diefenbaker Conservative landslide in 1958 with a record 208 seats, the party always managed to survive.

But party leader Robert Thompson, unsuccessful Conservative candidate Monday, found himself in the same heady position Mr. Lewis is in today when Mr. Diefenbaker was returned to power in 1953. With a minority government of 116 MPs, Mr. Diefenbaker was dependent upon 20 Social Creditors to keep him in office against 99 Liberals and 19 New Democrats.

Before a year was out, Mr. Thompson sided with the Liberals under Lester Pearson to dump Mr. Diefenbaker on the issue of arming now-defunct Bomarc sard-aircraft missiles with nuclear warheads.

In 1963, Mr. Thompson was back with a soon-to-be-split Social Credit group of 24 that helped keep 129 Pearson Liberals in power.

Inmate's Car Stolen By Fleeing Convict

KINGSTON (CP) — A provincial judge found it hard to believe when he learned Tuesday that convicts can have cars parked on the Collins Bay penitentiary parking

Judge P. E. D. Baker, hearing a car theft charge against William J. Stockton, 21, was told a car belonging to another convict had been taken from the parking lot at Collins Bay, in an escape Sept. 11.

"You mean a guard don't you?" he asked Assistant Crown attorney John Bett.

"No. It says here, that the owner was an inmate—another convict in the institution," Mr. Bett replied.

A guard explained that "it's not uncommon for certain inmates who work outside the institution to have their own cars on the parking lot for use while on day parole."

Evidence showed that Stockman broke into a penitentiary locker to get the keys.

Stockman, who had 61 days remaining to serve on three previous convictions for car theft, was given a 15-month term for escaping custody and 12 months concurrent for car theft.

Seek Unity

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian university students are again seeking to unite, four years after their last national organization, the Canadian Union of Students, dissolved amidst squabbles and defections. About 75 delegates from universities and community colleges will meet here this weekend for the founding conference of the National Students Association. Bruce Cameron, of Carleton University, a member of the steering committee, said groundwork is laid and "we hope to come out of this weekend with a working organization, an executive, some commitment of funds and, possibly, statements on the financing of education in Canada."

Boren Beats the Mail

WASHINGTON (AP) — James H. Boren, a professional bureaucrat, demonstrated Tuesday that he is faster than the postal service.

Boren's latest spoof-with-a-point involved his own horseback mail system, NATA-PROBU Pony Express, named for the acronym of his tongue-in-cheek organization, the National Association of Professional Bureaucrats.

With six horses and eight riders, Boren set out from Philadelphia Monday after placing 75 letters in U.S. postal service boxes around town.

The sprtly mail rider carried his view of the Capitol shortly after noon Tuesday, well ahead of the most of the letters he sent via the more usual method.

"Give me that old time delivery, it's good enough for me," Boren sang out in a horseback news conference.

As reporters and onlookers waited for Boren, a mail truck made the 10:30 a.m. pickup at nearby mail boxes—at noon.

Regrouping

TRIPOLI, Libya (Reuter) — The hijackers of the Lufthansa airliner who flew hero of guerrillas held in West Germany for the Munich Olympic massacre went into hiding Tuesday to prepare to deliver another blow against Israel. A spokesman for the two Arab hijackers said: "You can forget about their whereabouts, names or destination from here. They are now ready to strike again, but this time against Israeli interests wherever they are found."

Hams Travel

MONTREAL (CP) — Manitobans Ron Samchuk and Alan Wilkeita crossed Canada on motorcycles this manner "speaking to hams, meeting hams and promoting ham radio." Hospitality wherever they went was assured by the amateur networks which passed on news about the travellers, who were equipped with a battery-powered 10-watt radio and antenna.

Lose Deposits

TORONTO (CP) — William Kashton, leader of the Communist Party of Canada, said Tuesday he was not disappointed by the outcome of Monday's federal election. "We had no illusions," he said. All 21 candidates for his party lost their $200 deposits. Three members of the Communist Party of Canada (Marxist-Leninist) also lost their deposits.

By Custom and Constitution Trudeau Has Two Choices

OTTAWA (CP) — Custom and the constitution seem to leave Prime Minister Trudeau with two choices in the wake of Monday's election.

He could resign now, leaving Gov.-Gen. Roland Michener to ask Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield to form a government. Or he could call Parliament and risk defeat by an opposition that outnumbers his Liberals 164 to 108.

Constitutional authorities appeared to agree Tuesday that Mr. Trudeau should take his cabinet in the Commons before resigning, but history offers conflicting lessons.

Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent resigned after the 1957 election that sent 112 Conservatives to the Commons to the Liberals' 105.

The next year, the Conservatives won the biggest majority in Canadian history with 208 of the 265 Commons seats.

In 1925 Prime Minister Mackenzie King took the other tack, choosing to face the Commons although outnumbered by the Conservatives 116 to 101.

Mr. King dependod on the 24 Progressives in the House to keep the Liberals in power.

But in 1926 a scandal began to bubble, the Progressives withdrew their support and Mr. King then asked for dissolution and another election.

The Governor-General of the day, Viscount Byng, refused and asked Conservative Leader Arthur Meighen to try his hand at governing.

The Conservative government lasted only a few days before defeat on a non-confidence motion.

The election that followed returned a minority Liberal government which lasted until 1930 when a Conservative majority was elected.

Mr. Trudeau does not face any deadline. When Prime Minister John Diefenbaker lost to the Liberals in 1963 he stayed in his Prince Albert riding for several days before resigning.

If Mr. Trudeau decides to face the House the earliest it could legally be called into session is Nov. 20.

Liberal Senator Carl Goldenberg of Quebec, former constitutional adviser to Mr. Trudeau, and Frank Scott, former law dean at McGill University, both said Tuesday Mr. Trudeau should meet the Commons as prime minister.

But once in the Commons the Liberal fate would be determined more by politics than the constitution.

Diefenbaker Is the Expert Here

Minority Rule Effective

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — John Diefenbaker, who should know, says minority governments are effective governments.

The man who twice headed a minority Progressive Conservative government and who later was Parliament's Opposition leader through the minority Liberal administration of Lester Pearson, gets agreement on this point from two old political foes.

Both M. J. Coldwell, long-time leader of the old CCF party, and T. C. Douglas, former leader of its successor, the New Democratic Pary, echoed Mr. Diefenbaker's verdict on the effectiveness of minority government.

They were commenting on results of Monday's election in which no party came close to winning a majority of Commons seats.

In an interview Tuesday, Mr. Diefenbaker, leader of minority administrations in 1957-58 and 1962-63, said such government situations keep members on the job in Parliament "because of the danger of defeat."

"Minority governments are very effective governments, in my opinion."

Mr. Diefenbaker, 77, said the only frustration in minority government is that "the prime minister can never be sure that legislation he brings before Parliament will be passed."

And there was another problem: "There will always be that uncertainty. . . ."

He recalled the 1963 confidence vote his government lost in the Commons when the numerically superior opposition turned against the Conservatives, bringing on a general election that year won by the Liberals.

Mr. Coldwell, leader of the CCF party for 19 years, said Monday night in Ottawa a minority government will be good for the country. In the past, such governments had produced Canada's best social legislation.

No Approach To NDP Yet

OTTAWA (CP) — Clifford Scotton, national secretary of the New Democratic Party, said Tuesday there has been no consultation yet, as far as he knows, between the NDP and the Liberals or Progressive Conservatives following Monday's federal election.

But the arithmetic of the election returns "pretty well" dictates that the two parties must come to the New Democrats to negotiate, he said.

Police Publicist Guilty of Contempt

MONTREAL (CP) — Constable Antoine Carocchia of the Montreal police public relations department was found guilty Tuesday of contempt of court for issuing a news release judged damaging to a cheese company currently involved in a court case.

Mr. Justice James Hugesson of Court of Queen's Bench said in his judgment that the news release, issued after a police raid on the plant of Guiseppe Saputo and Figli Ltd. and linking the firm with organized crime, was written in a sensational manner.

The municipal court judge trying the cheese manufacturer on 14 charges of health violations would not knowingly let himself be influenced by publicity, Mr. Justice Hugesson said.

However, he added that "any judge in such a situation cannot help but be aware of such things."

"All infringements on the impartiality of the court create prejudice for the litigants and for the administration of justice." Mr. Justice Hugesson said. "It is for these reasons that these infringements are punished, not as offences against individuals but as crimes against the public good."

Const. Carocchia testified last August that he wrote the release which contained the statement:

"It is also known that many well-known American Mafia figures or organized crime have been seen many times with the owners of the Giuseppe Saputo and Figli Ltd."

Mr. Justice Hugesson set sentencing for Thursday.

Broadcast Act Held Valid

TORONTO (CP) — An Ontario Supreme Court Judge ruled Tuesday that the Broadcasting Act is within the powers of the federal government, and does not contradict the provisions of the Bill of Rights.

Mr. Justice Campbell Grant, in his ruling, rejected a contention by CFRB Ltd. that the act interferes with a broadcaster's freedom of speech.

CFRB Ltd. had applied to the court for a ruling that would have prohibited any provincial judge from convicting it on a charge of unlawfully broadcasting a partisan program concerning the Oct. 21, 1971, Ontario provincial election.

Mr. Justice Grant dismissed the application with costs.

The station made its application after it was charged Oct. 30, 1971, over a Gordon Sinclair program with political comment, broadcast on the day preceding the election.

The Broadcasting Act prohibits the broadcasting of partisan programme concerning federal, provincial or municipal elections either on the day they are held or the day immediately preceding.

Mr. Justice Grant ruled that the regulation of broadcasting is within federal jurisdiction because it is an interprovincial undertaking.

"The purpose of the legislation is that radio may not be used as an instrument of partisan comment immediately before an election when there is not sufficient time or the person or political party attacked thereby to answer before the election date," he said.

". . . Thus the object sought to be achieved is a limitation placed on the use of radio in that interval rather than an attempt to control the course of a referendum or the election of a member of the House of Commons, a member of a provincial legislature or a member of a municipal council."

Age Limit

LONDON (CP) — A 61-year-old man wanting a divorce to marry a woman 16 years his junior has been turned down by a High Court Judge who told him: "At your age, it should be no great hardship - not to remarry."

Blame Humans

WINNIPEG (CP) — Human activities have replaced mechanical failures such as electrical malfunctions or dirty chimneys in causing fires, says Fire Chief Cam Shewan of Winnipeg. In Manitoba last year, fires caused $9.9 million in property damage and resulted in the death of 48 persons, including 25 children.

Size Pays Off In Quinte Win

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Editor

Paul Hart is a good little football player. Greg White is a good Big football player. And that factor may have spelled the difference as the Quinte Saints defeated Moira Trojans 25-22 Tuesday to win their fourth consecutive Bay of Quinte senior championship.

Hart a 123-pound inside linebacker found himself nose to nose with White, a 200 - pound offensive tackle with the score tied 22-22 in the third quarter and Quinte attempting to mount a scoring drive. What was more important was the Saints' offensive coach Paul Faddon found Hart and kept sending in off - tackle plays to exploit the weight differential.

The Saints' Paul McQuaid and Kevin Joudrey kept following White's blocks for key yardage, which coupled with a 30-yard over - the - shoulder catch by end Stan Brooks, allowed them to march from their own 40 to the Moira end zone. McQuaid capped the drive by crashing over from the two - yard line on the final play of the quarter to help the Saints fashion a 29-22 lead which they never relinquished.

"Yes, we saw that the right side of Moira's line was pretty light, so we started running the ball there," admitted Faddon after. "we should have been doing that earlier in the game."

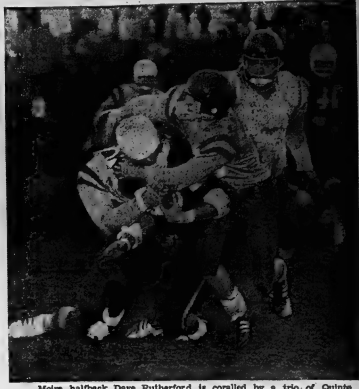
It boiled down to pretty much a simple battle of physiques when Moira curtailed the Saints vaunted passing attack. They forced the defending COSSA champs to move the ball on the ground, despite the fact that the Trojans were playing what amounted to an eight - man line with only two defensive backs.

"We kind of chickened out in the second half," said Faddon, "they forced us to play a physical game, instead of playing our game, which is passing. We were getting men open in the first half, but they missed a few and we were getting into trouble with fumbles. Against a defence like that we should be able to pass all day."

Quinte had appeared to sail the game away in the first half, when Ralph Lepore recovered a Trojan fumble in the end zone for a major score that gave the Saints a 21-7 lead. The Trojans struck back on the following kick-off however, as Bob Perrier carried the ball back 80-yards for a touchdown. But cut Quinte's half - time lead to 21-xx.

In the third quarter, after Rod Hinse' 30-yard single gave the Saints another point, Moira seemed to take control. Penalties and a 40-yard screen pass to Dave Rutherford carried the ball to the Quinte five-yard line where quarterback Glen Shaw connected with Mark McKay on third-down pass. The Trojans squared accounts at 22-22 when Bernier caught a two-point conversion pass that had bounced off two defenders.

It was after this major, that the Saints mounted their winning drive. They scored an insurance marker in fourth when Brooks scooped up a fumbled Moira punt and raced 60-yards for a touchdown.



Trojans' head coach Hugh Cook was anything but disheartened, despite the loss. "We've certainly got nothing to be ashamed of today," he said, while pointing out that all five Moira backs will be returning next season.

Peter Von had opened the scoring with a 40-yard punt return, while Graham added the second Quinte major on a 30-yard off-tackle. Rick Meagher booted two of his four converts on the opening majors. Moira's Peter Stalkovich who played much of the game with a shoulder dislocation scored for Moira on a 45-yard run.

Faddon praised the backfield work of Moira's Dave Rutherford and his own Paul McQuaid, while also lauding "our whole offensive line. You can't single anyone out." Bernier for Moira and linebackers Ken Von and Mike Mayo of Quinte were other standouts.

Quinte head coach Rick Locke was critical of the officiating despite his team's win. "Everyone has to be up for a game as big as this one and I don't think that they (the officials) were," he said.

Moira halfback Dave Rutherford is corralled by a trio of Quinte Saints in Tuesday's Bay of Quinte COSSA senior football championship. The starry Moira back was smothered throughout the game as the Saints emerged with a 33-22 win for their fourth consecutive league championship.

Increases Distance

A new page in the' history books will be written tonight at Frontenac Downs raceway, when a group of pacers and trotters will race over a distance of a mile and a quarter.

The starting gate, instead of letting the horses loose in the-back stretch, will hit top speed in front of the grandstand, from where the bikes will travel the oval twice before finishing in front of the stands.

Set to make the circuit at 7:45 tonight, trotters Tiny Todd (driven by Ron Stone), Chance Hill (John Murphy), Magic Tom Lee (Pat Herrington) and Herland Jimmy (John Huntbach) will try to out-do pacers Lil Buck (Ben Wemp), Reniips (Dick Algaire), Resin Bow (Chris Storm, the Picton driver who starred at the Brockville Invitational Day), and By Rod (Joe Hogan).

The game just didn't seem to go Moira's way. After middle guard Dan Gutoski, had been layed on Bruce Sutherland, limiting him to 16 yards in seven carries, the Collegians made up for his loss by playing David Roach to an 80 yards gained advantage. Roach set up BCI's first quarter touchdown, running the ball down to the Moira 40 yard line. From the 40, BCI quarter back Russ Simonds behind some excellent blocking, swept around the end and into the end zone for the score. The conversion pass was knocked down and no further points were scored until Larry Wilson's second quarter look into the Trojan end zone earned BCI a single.

Moira quarterback Jim Lowe tried valiantly to get the Trojans moving again in the third quarter, getting the Trojans down to the BCI eight yard line, but the Collegians brick - wall defense stopped Moira on third and short yardage. BCI's offense came on the field and on the first play Simonds again swept around the end for a 70 yard gain.

The Roach - Simonds combination proved to be Moira's downfall as Roach set up BCI's second major. The back ran the pigskin-down to within sight of the goal line, when Simonds took it over for the Collegian's second big six. The conversion pass was unsuccessful.

BCI's Bay of Quinte COSSA victory pits them against Peterborough's Kenner Secondary of the Kawartha Division, while Moira will meet Oshawa's Courtice Secondary of the Lake Ontario Division. The BCI - Kenner match will be played in Belleville Friday, at 2:30, at a field to be decided upon by BCI.

Lino's Lace Queens

In the Kingston League soccer play yesterday, Lino's Pizza soundly defeated Queens 6-0 to win the Kirby brothers. Kevin and Paul, proving themselves to be a good offensive twosome.

Kevin managed three goals for himself, while Paul assisted Lino's with another boot into the Queens net. Chris Johnson and Andy Pipe scored the other tallies, while Queens' Taylor with two, and Burke with one kept Lino's from a shut-out.

Bill Durnan Dies at 57

TORONTO (CP) — Bill Durnan, long acclaimed the greatest goaltender in modern times, died Tuesday night at the age of 57. He had been in failing health for some time and entered hospital last Thursday.

Durnan reached the National Hockey League as a 29-year-old rookie with Montreal Canadiens in 1943 and retired after seven at a r-filled, record-shattering seasons, claiming "my nerves are all shot."

In his brief career, the big, friendly giant established a host of records, winning the Vezina Trophy six of the seven years and being named to the first NHL all-star team six times.

Ironically, the only man to break Durnan's string o Vezina and all-star awards was Walter (Turk) Broda of Toronto Maple Leafs, who died Oct. 17.

William Ronald Durnan was born in Toronto Jan. 22, 1915, and embarked on a softball career at the age of 16 that was to propel him into the sporting limelight long before he reached the NHL.

An almost forgotten pair of old skates got him started in public school and led him into Hockey's Hall of Fame in 1964.

He got his biggest hockey boost in 1931, helping Max Silverman's Sudbury Wolves to the Canadian junior hockey championship. He was earmarked for the Leafs until a twisted knee in 1932 set his career back temporarily when Toronto lost interest.

His ambidextrous style, a trait learned early in his career that enabled him to use the stick in either hand, impressed the Canadiens who finally persuaded him to turn pro at an age when most hockey players were retiring.

Durnan was an immediate success, becoming the first ever rookie to win the Vezina Trophy as the Canadiens swept to the Stanley Cup finances in 1944, and he held the award for four straight seasons—the first goaltender to do so.

Big at 6 - foot 2 and 200 pounds, and friendly to the point where he was almost too easy-going, Durnan retired many times before finally calling it quits for good during the 1950 playoffs.

Pulford Gets Plaudits

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It may be a little early to start tooting any horns, but nobody can deny Bobby Pulford his just plaudits.

The rookie National Hockey League coach has molded Los Angeles Kings into early-season wonders and the worst coast team has responded to his grooving.

The Kings made it five wins in a row Tuesday night, 4-1 over Vancouver Canucks, to set a club record and moved alone into second place in the West, one point behind Chicago Black Hawks.

Where the Kings are the surprises of the West, the same can be said of the Buffalo Sabres in the East who put their 6-0-4 mark on the line tonight against Toronto Maple Leafs.

BOB PULFORD

Montreal Canadiens, 7-3-4 and two points ahead of Buffalo, are in Pittsburgh against the Penguins in another game while New York Rangers visit Chicago, California Golden Seals entertain New York Islanders, Atlanta Flames are at Detroit Red Wings and St. Louis Blues at Cleveland Minnesota North Stars continue their rivalry at Minneapolis.

Dutch Clarke, 21-goal scorer last year, scored three goals against Vancouver, including the winner, in a game at Los Angeles that was marked by two third-period fights.

Vancouver's Greg Boddy and rookie Don Kozak precipitated the fireworks at 5:51 of the period. Bill Lesuk of the Kings and Bobby Schmautz of Vancouver clashed at 15:45.

All four were nailed with minors and majors. Bobby Lalonde ruined goaltender Gary Edwards' shutout at 12:38 of the final period as the Kings completely dominated play and outshot the visitors 34-19 in the game.

The Kings have made few changes from their lineup of a year ago, but it appeared obvious from the outset of the season there was a new spirit on the club.

One of the big factors has been the addition to the defence of veteran Terry Harper in the development of Barry Long, a 23-year-old up from Portland Buckaroos of the Western League.

Pulford, captain of the Kings last year, took over the post from general manager Larry Regan. Then Red Kelly, who had Los Angeles into the playoffs their first two years, the Kings have provided little coaching security since 1967.

Their early-season lack of losses in seven games, seemed to indicate they were headed for another dismal season before their sudden change of fortune.

Sharks Show Teeth

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Sharks showed their teeth Tuesday night in Quebec City.

Los Angeles Sharks survived a minor rhubarb at the Colisee to emerge 4-2 victors over the Nordiques in World Hockey Association action.

Most of the disturbance that kept referee Ron Ego busy came in the second period with the visiting Sharks trailing 2-1.

Gary Veneruzzo of Los Angeles and Pierre Roy of Quebec were assessed fighting majors. Bart Crashley of the Sharks and Quebec's Robert Guindon took double minors, and Steve Sutherland of Los Angeles was nailed with a 10-minute misconduct in the disturbance at 7:56.

Bernie MacNeil scored before the period ended and scored again along with Crashley in the third period to lift the Sharks into a third-place tie with Houston Aeros in the Western Division.

The Aeros kept pace when Ted Taylor's routine slap shot was the only goal of 15 third period as Houston edged Alberta Oilers 4-3 at Edmonton.

In the only other game, Chicago Cougars scored three times in the third period to defeat Winnipeg Jets 3-1.

The Jets move into St. Paul, Minn., tonight against Minnesota Fighting Saints while Cleveland Crusaders entertain Philadelphia Blazers and Chicago is in Boston against New England Whalers.

Quebec carried a 2-1 lead, Ronald Leclerc and Jean Paysette sandwiching a Los Angeles score by Tom Serviss, when Veneruzzo and Roy got things started in front of 8,000 Nordiques fans.

Quebec First

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Quebec Remparts regained sole possession of first place in the Quebec Junior A Hockey League Tuesday night by defeating Sorel Black Hawks 7-5.

The win moved the Remparts two points ahead of idle Cornwall Royals. The Royals will have a chance to move back into the spot tonight when they entertain Sherbrooke Beavers in the only scheduled league game.

In the other Tuesday night game, Trois-Rivieres Ducs nipped Shawinigan Bruins 4-3 in overtime.

NHL Not Eager To Face Russia

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — Clarence Campbell, head of the National Hockey League, isn't overly enthusiastic about the NHL board of governors or the players will approve another exhibition series against the Soviet Union's all-star hockey team.

"There is a considerable disparity of opinion on the advisability of staging the series this year," Campbell said Tuesday during the second day of the board's three-day meeting.

Even if the governors allow exhibitions next year, Campbell warns, final approval must come from players.

There was grumbling by some players on Team Canada in this year's inaugural series with Russia over loss of practice time from regular NHL camps. Team Canada had to rally to win the series.

Asked about the possibility of professional hockey expanding into European cities, Campbell said: "In the case of the NHL, I don't think there's any possibility of it being a transatlantic league because that's not realistic.

"It's expensive and time-wasting, that's why." The 68-year-old head of the NHL explained. "In the current league, we have tried to avoid long blackouts (road trips). We try to play our teams pretty regularly."

Campbell said the new World Hockey Association has cut down on the expansion possibilities in the United States by grabbing personnel for its 12 teams, but not by eliminating potential sites.

He isn't sure the southern U.S. can be considered among the sites. "If you get an audience that likes action, then the action is the same north or south of the Mason-Dixon line," he said.

But he admitted that Memphis failed as a hockey town and Oakland and Los Angeles are running below NHL attendance standards partly because they are warm - weather cities, where hockey is not a natural sport.

Ottawa Insures

HULL, Que. (CP) — Ottawa Rangers scored an insurance goal into an empty net as they beat Hull Festivals 4-2 in the Central Junior Hockey League Tuesday.

Ottawa scorers were Rick Hodgson, Marc Aubry, Brian Fagan and Norm McLeod.

Luc Prud'homme and Rick Moyneur scored for Hull, which took six of nine minor penalties and a 10-minute misconduct.

Hamilton Fifth

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Red Wings took over sole possession of fifth place in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A standings by defeating Oshawa Generals 9-6 Tuesday.

Hamilton took a 4-2 lead in the first period and a 7-5 lead going into the third. It was the only game played in the circuit Tuesday.

Jim Money, Doug Ferguson and Rick Plumb each scored twice for Hamilton, who outshot Oshawa 50-43. Mike Robin, Glen Cichetto and Pat Hickey scored single markers.

Action resumes Thursday, when Hamilton travels to Peterborough.

Rams Move

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Richmond Hill Rams moved into first place in the Ontario Hockey Association Provincial Junior A League standings Tuesday night with a 7-1 win over Dixie Beehives in Richmond Hill.

In the other league game Tuesday night, last-place Kingston Frontenacs ended their home ice to advantage, burning back Ajax Knobs Hill Farms 8-2.

Richmond Hill had two goals each from Alex Pirus and Mike Hirtzman and single goals by Pat Hughes, Tony Bellavance and Tyrn Keesor. Dave Large replied for Dixie.

BEAT ALI'S BROTHER

BOSTON (AP) — Muhammad Ali will fight Jack O'Halloran in a 12-round heavyweight bout at Boston Garden Dec. 13, promoter Sam Silverman said Tuesday. Ali and O'Halloran will be in Boston Thursday to sign for the fight. O'Halloran, from Runnymede, N.J., has been fighting since 1966. He has won eight of his last 10, and recently scored a third-round knockout over Ali's brother, Rahman Ali.

Herron, Henley Up for Schenley

MONTREAL (CP) — Two of the greatest offensive threats in the Canadian Football League—pass-catching Gurney Henley of Hamilton Tiger-Cats and blitz Mack Herron, the bulldozing running back from Winnipeg Blue Bombers—are this year's finalists for the annual outstanding player award.

Henley, used mostly as a wide receiver this season by the Eastern Football Conference Ticats, is in his 12th season with the club. At 37, he has performed on defence and offence and on occasion has been inserted into the backfield as a running back.

Herron, five-feet, six-inches and 200 pounds, has scored 16 touchdowns for the first-place Western Football Conference Bombers this season.

Henley has eight majors to his credit this year.

Results of the final outstanding player balloting, and three other categories in the annual Canadian Schenley Awards, will be announced in Hamilton Nov. 30, during Grey Cup week.

Gerry Organ, Ottawa Rough Riders' place-kicking specialist, will be the East's representative for the Canadian player-of-the-year award, while Jim Young, a running back and end with British Columbia Lions will represent the WFC in that category.

The newly-created rookie-of-the-year category has Hamilton quarterback Chuck Ealey doing battle with receiver Tom Campana of Saskatchewan Roughriders for top honors.

The eight players were selected by 96 sportswriters and broadcasters in the nine CFL cities across the country.

The nomination of Henley is the fifth in his career. Herron is in his second season with the Bombers.

As a rookie Herron scored nine touchdowns and booted five kickoffs for a record 1,019 yards.

Organ, with one game left to play, has scored 121 points for Ottawa to lead the EFC scoring race by a wide margin. He has counted 26 field goals, 28 converts, one touchdown and nine singles.

NFL Players Gain Ground

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Football League Players Association scored a major victory over the club owners Tuesday in disputes over fines assessed for leaving the bench during a fight on the playing field and on the use of artificial turf.

A National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) hearing officer has recommended that the NFL owners be ordered to rescind their automatic fine of $200 against any player leaving the bench during a fight.

Judge Marvin Welles, hearing officer, said the provision for automatic fines is an unfair labor practice, a charge brought by the NFL Players Association.

The proposed order would force the league to repay all players for such fines, including interest of six per cent a year. An association spokesman said the ruling would affect 106 players and involve $21,200 in fine money.

Welles said also that artificial turf is a mandatory subject for collective bargaining since its installation constitutes a change in working conditions.

The Players Association has argued that synthetic turf is more conducive to injuries.

Both sides have 20 days in which to appeal the recommended ruling to the full five-man NLRB. If there is no appeal, the recommendation of the administrative law judge becomes final. If the owners refuse to accept the board's ruling they can appeal in federal court.

Perry Named Top AL Hurler

NEW YORK (AP) — Gaylord Perry, the rangy Cleveland right hander, was named winner Tuesday of the 1972 Cy Young Award as the best pitcher in the American League.

The 34-year-old Indians' ace had a 24-16 record and an earned run average of 1.92, second to the league's best, the 1.91 by Luis Tiant of Boston.

In winning the Cy Young Award, Perry duplicated the feat of his brother, Jim, who was voted the American League's top pitcher at Minnesota in 1970.

Orioles Get Hendricks Back

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore Orioles announced today that they have re-acquired catcher Ellie Hendricks from Chicago Cubs in exchange for minor league catcher Frank Estrada.

Hendricks, 31, had been with the Orioles for more than 4½ seasons when he was dealt to the Cubs last Aug. 18 in a waiver deal for outfielder-first baseman Tommy Davis.

Bothered by neck and shoulder pains caused by calcium deposits at the base of his neck, Hendricks hit only .155 in 33 games with Baltimore and .116 in 17 games with Chicago. He hit two home runs in 1972, both in the same game with the Cubs.

Estrada, 24, was obtained by Baltimore in a trade with California Angels last May. He hit .268 in 21 games with Salt Lake City of the Pacific Coast League and .253 in 65 games with Rochester of the International League.

Murphy Ignites Rockets

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"That's the way to win them, man," little Calvin Murphy said. "Why get a big lead a the start and take away all the suspense?"

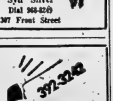
Murphy, Houston's 5-foot-10 rock - count man, Tuesday night came up with the big play that gave the Rockets a 106-105 victory over the Atlanta Hawks in National Basketball Association action.

With 15 seconds to go and Houston in front 104-102, Murphy stole the ball on a turnover, Atlanta's Pete Maravich sank a 14-foot jumper with 10 seconds left to tie the game, was fouled on the play and hit the free throw to put Atlanta up by one.

But Murphy atoned for his mistake by coming right back down court and sinking a 15-foot jump shot with just three seconds showing on the clock, giving Houston the one - point victory.

The victory kept Houston, 5-3, on top in the Central Division.

In other NBA games, Cleveland Cavaliers topped Philadelphia 76ers 126-116, Chicago Bulls beat Kansas City-Omaha Kings 104-96 and Golden State Warriors defeated Detroit Pistons 112-104.



In American Basketball Association play, it was Virginia 125, Carolina 114; Denver 116, Utah 103, and Kentucky 119, San Diego 109.

NEW RATES* FOR CALLS ACROSS CANADA

The rate changes apply to Long Distance calls to many areas in Canada, as shown on the map. These changes do not affect Long Distance calls within Bell Canada territory in Ontario, Quebec, Labrador, and to some points in N.W.T.

MOST DIAL-DIRECT RATES REDUCED, MOST OPERATOR-HANDLED AND PERSON-TO-PERSON RATES INCREASED.

In every case, calls you dial yourself will cost less than operator-handled and person-to-person calls. The difference in cost between these calls is shown in the table of examples below. (Operator-handled calls include coin telephone, hotel-motel, collect, third number, time and charge requests, ZENITH, credit card and operator-preferred.)

FOR THE FIRST TIME ON CALLS ACROSS CANADA, A ONE-MINUTE RATE WHEN YOU DIAL DIRECT.

In our previous schedule for calls across Canada, the minimum long distance charge was for three minutes. In future, it will be for one minute, when you dial direct; you'll pay only for the number of minutes you use. The minimum for operator-handled and person-to-person calls will continue to be three minutes.

These reductions apply to the total charge for dial-direct calls and, after the three-minute minimum, to "overtime" minutes on operator-handled calls. There are no reductions on person-to-person calls.

(If Direct Distance Dialing is not yet available where you live or in the community you are calling, the operator will place such a call at the dial-direct rates.)

Monday through Saturday	8 am to 6 pm	"Day" rate	regular charge
Monday through Saturday	6 pm to midnight	"Evening & Sunday" rate	30% off regular charge
Sunday	8 am to midnight
Daily	midnight to 8 am	"Night" rate	50% off regular charge (maximum rate, 30¢ a minute)

CARING FOR FROZEN FOODS

Frozen foods are becoming more important in the shopping plans of busy Canadian women.

To get the best from them, you need a clear understanding of the conditions under which they should be stored in your supermarket, their handling during transportation, and their care in your home.

At your Miracle Food Mart frozen food counter you'll find a "supply of "Care for Your Frozen Food," a comprehensive pamphlet of the Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food. Miracle Food Mart is making them available free as a service to customers. Be sure to get one.

FOOD QUESTIONS — You're not alone. Helen Gagon is listening. Write: Box 777, Station K, Toronto 12.

DROUGHT RESISTANT by Alan Mayer

Sport Briefs

TRAVINO CONTRITE

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Lee Trevino said Tuesday he should be suspended or "fined quite heavily" for quitting the Tucson golf tournament in Las Vegas last week. "I don't think that I should get away with it scot-free, simply because if I get away with it, then every body can do it." He said he already has apologized by telegram for walking off the course Saturday in Las Vegas after playing only nine holes of the third round. He said he became upset because of an extremely slow pace of play in the $135,000 tournament.

TOUGH DRAW FOR FILION

WESTBURY, N.Y.- (AP) — Al Savage, the speedy colt which will be driven by Herve Filion, drew Tuesday the tough outside No. 8 position for the $77,881 Westbury Futurity Friday night at Roosevelt Raceway. The rail position went to Knights Way, driven by John Simpson Jr. Burning Speed, with Glen Garvey in the sulky, will be second. Flame Thrower No. 3 slot and driven by George Filion, while No. 4 will be Star's Pride with Bill Popfinger. In fifth position will be Imperial Yankee, driven by Billy Haughton.

DROVER BATTERED

LONDON (Reuter) — Bill Drover of Montreal was knocked in seven rounds by John Conteh, the promising young British heavyweight boxer, if a bout at the Royal Albert Hall Tuesday night. Drover, 29, had his right eye closed and blood pumping from a cut over his left eye at the end. But the Canadian, who complained bitterly that the cut was caused by a head butt, had the satisfaction of putting Conteh down in the second round.

TENNIS SEES UPSETS

Intell Team Makes Hay

Goalie Warren Hay shut out Stewart Warner 10-0 last night at Memorial, moving the Intels from a four way tie for sixth to sole possession of fourth place in the Gas House League, one behind Hospital. Stewart Warner's goalie, Terry Murphy, suffered through tallies by Intel's Bruce Symons and Larry Fyfe, with two apiece, and Paul Ruttan, Bill Janisch, Gary Rutherford, Steve Ling, Rick Hay, and Tim Hennessy with one each.

In the other Gas House League game last night, Meads and Wilson Concrete battled with an even 3-3 tie. Mead's goals came from Ted Rowlands, Steve Bedard and Lee McBrian, each of which was answered by Wilson's, Tom Cormier, Ron McLaughlin and Chuck Rowbotham.

Ellis Overcame Election Imponderables

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Hastings riding remains a bastion of Quinte Conservatism, its security intact despite what earlier had seemed a wide-open election campaign.

Successful Tory defender Jack Ellis, former Belleville mayor, was elected Progressive Conservative MP by a plurality of more than 5,000 votes.

Mr. Ellis, newcomer to senior government politics, cantered to victory over the challenges of veteran Liberal Frank Pollved, and New Democratic Party first - time campaigner Eldridge Bretheur.

Final returns from the riding's 198 polls — including advance ballots — were:

Ellis, 18,479; Pollved, 11,685; Bretheur, 2,281.

The Ellis win amounted to an almost unhampered sweep of the entire riding — from sparsely - populated northern townships to the big Belleville urban bloc with more than half the total constituency vote.

Mr. Ellis took 164 of the riding's 198 regular polls and four advance polls.

Also a former Belleville mayor, the 62 - year - old realtor served two terms in parliament, first elected in the late 1940s and defeated in 1957.

He won 25 regular polls, tied one, and gained five of the constituency's nine advance polls.

Liberals and Conservatives entered the race with confidence. The reason for Liberal assurance was the fact Mr. Ellis was a first - time challenger in the federal arena — succeeding Les Grills who held the seat 13 years for the Conservatives before he retired when the election was called.

And, although Mr. Ellis had been in city politics his popularity in rural areas was an unknown quantity.

The Conservatives, won the rural communities handily, taking 8,122 votes against 4,-688 for the Liberals and 1,602 for the NDP.

Any Liberal hopes for a successful bid for the big Belleville urban vote also was dashed.

The results: Ellis, 8,557; Pollvell, 4,606; Bretheur, 1,-770.

Despite more than 7,000 new voters in the riding, the percentage of votes reported cast was lower than in the 1962 federal election.

Monday night 31,555 votes were counted — about 77 per cent of the 41,062 eligible. This compared to about 82 per cent in 1962.

Mr. Ellis slightly increased the percentage of votes cast for his party — approximately 52 per cent compared to about 50 per cent in 1962.

In number of voted polled, both his opponents also increased their parties' ballots over the last election. Comparisons:

A Bird in the Hand

George Woodhouse shows greenwing teal to 10-year-old twins John and Jeff Ricketts, Queen Alexandra public school students. The bird, smallest of duck species, was hit by gunshot on migration flight and is being tended by Belleville - area conservationist.

The Intelligencer

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1972

Wildlife Taken Into School To Teach Conservation

Young school students need more education on conservation.

And senior governments should help step up awareness in a coming generation a time when pollution is a growing threat.

So says Belleville - area wildlife conservationist George Woodhouse.

Mr. Woodhouse dashed off the comments as — shepherding a Giant Canada Goose and a tiny, greenwing teal, he moved through the doors of the city's Queen Alexandra public school to another session on wildlife with local youngsters.

He's been undertaking such sporadic sallies into local schools in hopes of boosting interest in conservation where he feels it now matters most — among the young.

"You can't teach adults conservation — they've already got set in their ways and opinions," he says.

He ties pollution and education together, "We're losing so many birds to pollution now that it's becoming a menace."

What's required is for both provincial and federal governments to bring the message home to school students. A biologist, with much experience in the field, could be sent into the schools as a full-time project, says Mr. Woodhouse. "Now is the time to reach the youngsters."

Time doesn't permit him as many conservation sessions in the schools as he would like. Hence, the thought it should become a full-time, widespread undertaking by official agencies like senior governments.

Such voluntary efforts were initiated some years ago by William Bittle, former game management officer in the natural resources ministry's Tweed district, assisted by the Belleville conservationist. Dr. Bittle has since retirement he decided to carry on alone.

Mr. Woodhouse for years has worked closely with the ministry on various projects out of his own conservation area behind his home east of Belleville — including banding of migrating birds and minimizing to birds wounded in flight.

Both the Giant Canada goose — an imposing specimen of a species once almost extinct — and the teal, the smallest of ducks, and weighing about a half-pound, at one time were injured and tended by the conservationist.

"Most youngsters have never seen a Canada goose — except flying high overhead," he explained as one reason for bringing live wildlife to enliven his talk sessions.

Wildlife — and, by implication conservation — education is "badly lacking in resource training for youngsters," he said.

Maybe, as a coincidental emphasis to his remarks a passing youngster gazed at the goose, pointed to the teal and asked:

"Is that a baby Canada goose?"

Lucky Driver Walked Away with Cuts, Bruises

The year-old lunch truck, driven by Charles Butler of 83 Grier Street, was eastbound on Bridge Street when another truck driven by Richard Hebert of Moose Creek, Ont., went through a stop sign at Grier Street, striking the Butler vehicle.

The lunch wagon then veered out of control and leveled a hydro pole before coming to rest.

Butler was taken to Belleville General Hospital with cuts and bruises. He was later released.

Social Workers Seek To Avoid Duplication

More than 150 representatives of people - helping agencies from Hastings and Prince Edward Counties met in the Four Seasons Hotel yesterday to take a long, hard look at their profession and its efficiency.

The delegates, drawn from private and government agencies, offered a general consensus that some very serious things were inherently wrong with the system of helping people through their resources and some equally serious changes must be effected immediately.

Mass information was dispersed during the full group sessions but many felt the most productive segments of the day were the periods in the hallways and foyers where they could chat informally with other agency people.

The purpose of the exercise was to clean up the situation of overlapping responsibilities and the breakdown or slowdown in delivery of services to the intended recipient.

This was the 14th meeting held across the province under the direction of the ministry of community and social services in an attempt to reassess the services we are providing, creating a more efficient machine, and deliver more of the good faster," said a local organizer.

Nevada Lagroix, administrator of the Picton branch of department of social services, said during one of the breaks, "some changes will have to come."

"There is too much repetition of services, too many overlapping areas and too many forms," she said.

The Picton spokesman said she had been in a situation where one civil servant was just leaving a home as she was coming in, and as she was leaving she was greeted by another public official walking up the path.

"We all had forms and it wasn't necessary to put the family through all of that if a little co-ordination was used," she said.

A general feeling among the group pointed to the acceptance of the change that was needed but things would still come slowly and cautiously.

One speaker, during an afternoon session outlined the need for people in the group to pass cases around if they cannot handle them and not be afraid of losing their position.

Once the backgrounding sessions were completed, the group was broken into IT sections and moved to various rooms throughout the hotel to debate and assess the key problems in the area.

A four - man task force from the ministry then heard reports from the 17, making few comments on the report other than "it would be their responsibility in the coming weeks and months to assess and weigh the reports from across the province and make some recommendations."

All present at the meeting were warned the answer would not come from outside but from themselves.

The task force, under the chairmanship of Hugh Hannon, advised local social workers, those involved in recreation and generally anyone who had anything to do with working in a service manner for people, "more meetings must be held amongst yourselves to fully assess your programs and to come up with a solution."

Guest speaker or the afternoon session was the Hon. Rene Brunell, minister of the department responsible for the regional meetings.

Mr. Brunell spoke briefly on training and the need for increased efficiency with the available financial and human resources.

Doors to Nowhere

There are still doors on the former post office tower in downtown Trenton, and these workmen made a full use of them yesterday. The men were busy on new scaffolding preparing to add cement to weakening walls. Since the tower's general building was demolished several months ago, town council has been advised it is deteriorating. Repairs were called for. Residents are anxiously awaiting word from the Ontario Municipal Board on its ruling on future of the tower that the town wants to include in a proposed municipal office - enclosed parking complex.

Loyalist Giving Farmers the Business

A special dairy farm business course open to qualifying farmers in the Bay of Quinte district is to be offered this year through the rural training division of Loyalist College.

The course will be offered at two locations — one at Campbellford — commencing January 8, 1973 and the other at Belleville starting February 5. The courses will run for five weeks with a limit of 30 candidates for each course.

The farm management courses are being provided through Canada Manpower with the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food assisting with course content and staff.

Applicants must be in the dairy farm business and may be a sole owner or member of a partnership.

Basic structure of the course will include fundamentals such as feeding, breeding and livestock management. Soils and crop work will be related to dairy farm production.

Course candidates will be selected on the basis of application forms and qualifications on a first come, first served basis.

Meeting Probes For Weaknesses

Hon. Rene Brunelle, minister of social and community services, spoke to more than 150 social workers in the Four Seasons Hotel yesterday, pointing to weaknesses in the service and asking that more emphasis be placed on volunteer resources.

The meeting was the 14th in a series held across the province under the co-operation of Mr. Brunelle's ministry to determine the "facts and failacies of the social service machine," in Ontario!

Mr. Brunelle's guidance, a four-man task force is co-ordinating the project which began in mid August.

Mr. Brunelle spent little time talking to the group, leaving the greater responsibility to the task force, but did say, "there will have to be a mutual effort to better use the available resources in social services."

Under social services come not only government agencies but agencies in the private sector including municipal recreation programs, Red Cross and the YMCA.

All local representatives present for the day lost meeting.

The minister spent most of his time illustrating the cost of various sectors of his ministry and where the dollars are going.

The social development segment of the government, is what Mr. Brunelle refers to as the "big government spenders."

The department spends $4.5 billion of the total $7-billion provincial budget.

Mr. Brunelle emphasized, "to supplement the human resources we have, there are many dedicated people in the community who would offer their time as volunteers."

People are retiring earlier and don't want to sit at home doing nothing and we can put them to use, he said.

"We must do this area more," he said.

Mr. Hannon said the results of all the meetings (20) would be taken back to Toronto and where recommendations would be made.

Reaction to Transfusion Caused Woman's Death

Reaction to a blood transfusion led to the death of a 54 - year - old woman at Belleville General Hospital July 30, a coroner's jury decided Monday.

Mrs. Mae Cannons of RR 7, Belleville, was scheduled to go home the day she died, five days after giving birth to her first child.

Her physician, Dr. John Hart, ordered the administration of blood the previous evening to correct a minor hemoglobin deficiency. Mrs. Cannons, employed at American Optical, had been a patient of Dr. Hart's since before marriage and had undergone a normal pregnancy and delivery.

The jury said Mrs. Cannons reacted to the transfusion, terminated after 45 minutes, by failing short of breath due to an attack of pneumonia. The lung ailment, ultimately led to cardiac arrest 23 hours later.

The five - member jury heard testimony from 15 witnesses including Dr. Hart who said he was continuously informed of his patient's condition.

He told presiding coroner Dr. Thomas Burgess of Campbellford that he received five phone calls concerning Mrs. Cannon following her aborted transfusion and prescribed medication accordingly.

His initial diagnosis was based on reports from nurses in the obstetrics department and in the intensive care unit to which Mrs. Cannons was later transferred.

"I believed she had a minor reaction, not major to the transfusion, compounded by her anxiety," Dr. Hart said.

But when he visited Mrs. Cannons next morning, he changed his diagnosis to aspiration pneumonia and endeavored to clear the woman's lungs of fluid.

Tubes were inserted, one surgically, and cortisone applied in an attempt to halt the attack, but Mrs. Cannons died at 8:55 p.m.

Dr. Hart cited three factors of which he was not aware that may have altered the fatal sequence of events.

He said he would have asked a doctor, situated near Mrs. Cannons while she was still in obstetrics, to examine her following the transfusion had he known the doctor was present.

He also said no one notified him after the patient appeared to vomit blood before she was transferred to intensive care. "This secondary complication could have set off the fatal chain of events," he said.

Finally, Dr. Hart denied testimony from a nurse who said she asked him to come to the hospital when Mrs. Cannons' condition was becoming grave.

He commented that during the period immediately following the transfusion, "there may have been evidence (of pneumonia) there, but there was I didn't get it."

The jury made two recommendations based on its findings.

It said clear cut instructions should be well known to all members of the medical and nursing profession at BGH for procedures to be followed in emergencies.

It also suggested that regulations be drafted to stipulate that patients transferred from another department of the intensive care unit be examined by their doctor or some other suitable medical practitioner at the earliest opportunity.

Commission Asks To Close Crossing

Correspondence between the city, the Transport Commission and Canadian Pacific regarding possible closing of Mary Street has been going on for several months and the commission engineering staff are telling them that they are now says that in the interests of safety, the crossing should be closed.

It is suggested that access now gained by using the Mary Street crossing could be accomplished by the construction of a road south of the railway from the old Bay Bridge Road to the edge of property owned by Morch Manufacturing.

If the cost of the construction of the suggested road diversion did not exceed the expense warranted to permit the closing of the Mary Street crossing, the commission indicated it would give consideration to a grant of 80 per cent providing that the rail way and the city agree to pay five per cent and 15 per cent respectively of the costs.

Traffic committee members approved a motion to arrange a meeting with Morch Manufacturing to discuss property requirements for the proposed roadway.

Trenton Girl Runs First

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, Nov. 2
Your birthday today: You learn prudence this year. Today's natives have a faculty for showmanship, sometimes present precisely the reverse of their true qualities.

Aries. (March 21-April 19): From a stiff, standing start you come out rather well by day's end. Persistence pays double dividends.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Seek teamwork rather than stardom. Nearly every detail you had thought settled is subject to revision.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): It is all too easy to get into rash statements, hasty actions in today's turbulent emotional tides.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Cater to your spontaneous urge toward humorous situations. Rushing into important deals isn't the proper spirit—pause for better information.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): The question is not so much of attraction, but more of what and whom. Selective choices are crucially important.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Everybody you know is in on the act. Check out both sides of every story as you get the chance, mainly by just listening.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): There's room to move yet, you needn't try forcing issues. Close friends are helpful but sensitive.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): For once you've drifted into more commitments than you can comfortably cover. Set priorities, make choices very early.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): More experienced people are here and there waiting to be asked to help you almost any project.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Today's routine is later seen to be a significant achievement in future perspectives. Express yourself; make your presence known.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Technical questions find direct, possibly drastic answers. Seek the best or final authority.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Practical moves dominate, mostly, developed on the spot as the situation evolves. Give everybody plenty of time to say and do.

Outside Sources Can Dilate Pupils

B.G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What causes the pupils of the eyes to dilate in an 18-year-old girl? She is taking no medication and does not use drugs. The pupils do not always stay dilated. Sometimes they are normal and then dilate. She does wear contacts. — Mrs. D.

The dilation and contraction of pupils is entirely involuntary and caused by stimulation of the sympathetic nervous system.

Outside sources such as the sun cause the pupils to constrict, bring these forces into play, respectively dilating or contracting the pupils.

Other factors can lead to pupil dilation, for example, staring at distant objects. With all of the drug experimentation going on among our young people these days, parents are naturally alert to such drug-use symptoms as dilated pupils, but it is unwise to jump to conclusions.

Also, pupils can dilate in absence or presence of light symptoms.

The fact that this is a periodic occurrence in your daughter one girl's breast tumor that was malignant. The pathology report said no evidence of spread. I also had 20 cobalt treatments.

I have now discovered a lump in the other breast. It is the same type of lump as the other, in the same location, directly under the nipple.

If this is also malignant, does this mean they are related or spreading, or could there be another tumor elsewhere that is totally cells to the breast?— L.T.

I fervently hope that by time you read this you have ready been examined and know whether the new lump is malignant or benign.

It is quite possible that the new lump is a simple cyst—I have known of just such a situation, a lump in each breast, one malignant, one not.

There is little likelihood of a spread from some remote infection when the removal from malignant tumors is usually to adjacent lymph glands or bone.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it true that the cervix is insensitive to heat, so when a cauterization is being performed it is relatively painless?—Mrs. R.F.

Yes, that's true.

Britain's Car Firms Doing Well

LONDON (AP) — Britain's biggest single exporter, the car industry, is heading for an all-time record trading year in 1972 as the nation prepares for full European Common Market membership.

After six years of stagnation through government curbs on spending, Britain this year has swung into top gear to become the world's fastest-growing car market.

And in the European production league, the British industry looks set to take second spot behind West Germany, ahead of France.

In 1972 Britain will build more cars than in his post-war peak year of 1964.

This remarkable upsurge follows years of trailing the expansion rates of rivals in France, West Germany, Italy and Japan.

Two reasons have given rise to the boom in Britain.

In July, 1971, the government, virtually erased all restrictions on credit buying and cut the domestic sales tax to 30 per cent from 36 per cent.

Within 12 months new car sales moved ahead to almost 1.3 million—a record for a one-year period.

Then, in March, 1972, the sales tax was again cut—to 25 per cent—further accelerating showroom activity.

By June this year car sales were some 60 per cent up on the first half of 1971. Sales of imported cars were up by 85,000 for 23.4 per cent of the total market, while sales of British cars surged ahead by 156,000.

Latest production figures available—for the first seven months of 1972—show a rise of 10 per cent over 1971 at an average 36,530 cars a week, the highest since 1964.

The latest registrations, to the end of August, further confirm Britain's claim as the world's fastest-growing market with total sales of 1.2 million cars—35 per cent up on last year.

By comparison, the French market this year grew by 15.r cent and those of West Germany and Italy were virtually stable at 1971 levels.

IMPORTANT NOTICE
to Ontario Residents

Ontario Blue Cross announce the opening for new subscribers to their Extended Health Care plan on a pay-direct basis. This opening is for a limited enrolment period, November 1 to December 15, 1972. Effective date for coverage is January 1, 1973.

The Ontario Blue Cross pay-direct EHC plan is designed to remove the financial burden of unexpected, costly medical bills by assisting Ontario residents to secure health protection for services not covered by the Government health plan.

This pay-direct opening is offered as a public service by Ontario Blue Cross, a non-profit health insurance organization.

What are the benefits of EHC?

Ontario Blue Cross Pay-Direct Extended Health Care Plan includes payment for such Health Services as:

(a) Prescription drugs, injectible drugs and insulin, except for vitamins and vitamin preparations (unless injected) and patent or proprietary medicines.
(b) Private duty nursing by a Registered Nurse. Limited to a maximum of 80 eight-hour shifts.
(c) Private room in hospital (but not the difference between standard ward and semi-private room in hospital).
(d) Remedial and prosthetic appliances.
(e) Certain other benefits which are not paid for by any Government health plan (these benefits are fully explained in the brochure).

What are EHC Deductibles?

A $50 deductible per benefit year applies to each member of the family covered by the pay-direct contract. If it is to your advantage, claims may be combined by more than three members of the family and a $150 family maximum deductible applied. After the deductible has been satisfied, Blue Cross will pay 80% of the balance of eligible benefits.

How YOU get EHC

If you are not enrolled in a Blue Cross EHC group and wish to enrol on a pay-direct basis, mail the coupon attached to this advertisement today. Upon receipt of the coupon, we will forward to you complete information and application form describing the benefits and the conditions of the contract. This open enrolment closes on December 15, 1972, and the effective date for coverage will be January 1, 1973.

Note: Please bear in mind that this coverage does not provide for the difference in hospital charges from standard ward to semi-private. If you do not have semi-private coverage and wish to enrol, please request a separate application as indicated on the coupon.

Remember this pay-direct enrolment closes December 15, 1972.

MAURICE H. ROLLINS CONSTRUCTION LIMITED

IT ISN'T TRUE

That only higher income families can afford to buy a new home. If you are in the $5,000.00 to $7,000. income bracket you can have your own two, three or four bedroom condominium unit. Monthly payments as low as $110.00 which includes interest, principal and taxes.

Let us show you our furnished models.

BEAT THE RISE IN INTEREST RATES

See our many houses financed with mortgage bearing 8¼% interest. With a forecast of rises to 10% , the purchase of one of our units could save your nearly $20.00 monthly on payments. We have new houses in the West side in a furnished sub-division. Even the roads are already paved. Possession the 15th of December. East side houses available in November.

TWO NEW SUB-DIVISIONS

Now is the time to select your lot for spring construction in one of our new areas. One is on the West side of the city, the East. Each has a couple of lots with large frontages. Act fast if you are serious about a bigger lot.

LOOK TO THE FUTURE

Small holdings are getting scarce and land prices rising, so why not buy now and build later? Over 300' on good county road convenient to Belleville or Trenton. 35 acres of good land, some woods. Price $10,000.

Earth Tremor

MONTREAL (CP) — A slight earth tremor recently shook residents of Hudson, off the western tip of Montreal island. A police spokesman said the tremor lasted a few seconds — "I felt as if there had been a dynamite blast very far away," Rev. Maurice Bale of the Brebeuf College geophysical centre said: "Our instruments know how it was of a minor nature."

Old Ships Perhaps Located

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — A team of explorers searching for two American gunboats which sank in Lake Ontario during the War of 1812 is excited about a large mass of metal detected in 250 to 300 feet of water a few miles offshore between St. Catharines and Niagara-on-the-Lake.

Dr. Daniel Nelson, who heads the Royal Ontario Museum expedition, said the team is awaiting the loan of a research ship from the Canada Centre of Inland Waters so that a television camera can be lowered to film the suspected wreckage.

The team worked 24 hours a day for four weeks last summer scanning the bottom with a magnetic detector. A few targets were isolated for further study.

The two gunboats, both two-masted schooners of about 110 tons, sank during a storm while being pursued by the British fleet.

They were named the Hamilton and the Scourge and were converted merchant ships.

Poet Critical

EDMONTON (CP) — Poet Gerald Lampert of Toronto is critical of "dominance" by Americans in Canadian university faculties. He told the recent convention of the League of Canadian Poets that Canadian literature is beginning to gain attention at the high school level, but "half the university departments are dominated in such a way that Canadian subjects will not be pushed."

Not Perfect Crime

ORILLIA, On. (CP) — A man attempting to steal an automobile fouled up his flight for freedom after being frightened off by the owner of the car. Faulty spokes on the bicycle he chose for his mode of escape collapsed, and he was captured. Judge Albert J. Glass described the case as "far from being the perfect crime."

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Prices on the Toronto stock market rose moderately higher in active mid-morning trading today.

The industrial index, considered a major indicator of market trend, was up .86 to 203.81, golds .04 to 177.74 and western oils .34 to 344.37. Base metals, however, were off .43 to 82.12.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 803,000 shares compared with 678,000 traded by the same time Tuesday.

Oil refining, pipeline, chemical and merchandising stocks were sectors of the market recording the most gains while communication, steel, beverage and general manufacturing issues were off slightly.

Advances outnumbered gains 131 to 97 while 146 issues remained unchanged.

Drug Course

SASKATOON (CP) — The University of Saskatchewan has introduced a correspondence course on drugs used in treatment of cardiac and circulatory diseases to help pharmacists keep up with developments in their profession. Prof. J. G. Jefrey of the college of pharmacy said the correspondence format was selected because it is difficult for many pharmacists to spend time away from their practice.

Leitiffer rose 1 to $39, Imperial Oil ¾ to $414, Pacific Pete ⅛ to $40¼, DuPont ¼ to $28, Shell Canada ⅛ to $25¼ and Texas Gulf ¼ to $17¾.

Dome Pete slipped ⅛ to $39¼, White Pass Yukon ⅛ to $12, Van Ness Industries 3 cents to 58 cents, Greenbrand Computer 5 cents to 84.25 and Spar Aerospace 25 cents to $5.75.

Sherritt Gordon advanced ⅛ to $14⅛, Tech Corp. B 25 cents to $4.50 and Consolidated Rambler 16 cents to $2.60. Denison fell ⅛ to $27⅛ and Iso Mines 30 cents to $3.90.

Study Dam Changes

SASKATOON (CP) — A research centre to study changes resulting from the Gardiner dam, which spans the South Saskatchewan River, has been suggested by a group of sociologists at the University of Saskatchewan. Prof. E. J. Abramson said the dam has implications in agriculture, economics, political science, geography and sociology. The dam was opened in 1967 to provide water to irrigate farm lands, generate electrical power and increase recreational facilities.

Pictures Displayed

They constitute his war period, paintings and sketches of the trenches and fields of the First World War.

Mr. Jackson, who recently celebrated his 90th birthday, enlisted in the army in 1914, when he was already a landscape artist of some note, and served for two years as a private with the 60th Infantry Battalion.

In 1916 he was wounded. After his recovery, he was posted to a reserve battalion and was brought to the attention of Max Aitken, Lord Beaverbrook, who was then looking for artists for a Canadian war memorial collection.

With an assist from Lord Beaverbrook, he was promoted lieutenant and began to sketch and paint the Canadians in the war.

His first assignments were portraits of Canadian Victoria Cross winners. Then he started on war activities and war landscapes, producing a number of works.

Some are disturbing, others hauntingly beautiful. Gas Attack, Lievin, is a melancholy painting. A green-gray gas cloud floats over a dark landscape, the horizon lit by unexpected flashes of flares, bright green and purple.

The Pimple, Evening, is an eerie canvas. Several small, hunched figures, bent under heavy packs, cross a turbulent red-orange landscape that climbs across background hills under a sky of the same colors, in which bulbous grey clouds loom.

U-boats Sank Many Ships Around Newfoundland

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Thirty years ago German submarines prowled the waters of the Atlantic Ocean and their torpedoes sent to the bottom thousands of unarmed freight and passenger ships.

The enemy raiders played no favorites and included small vessels and schooners, many along the coastline of Newfoundland.

Oct. 14, 1942, found one of the German raiders in the Cabot Strait, lying in wait for the SS Caribou, a passenger and freight ship which operated between North Sydney, N.S., and Port aux Basques, Nfld., for the Newfoundland Railway.

Thirty miles from Port aux Basques, the Caribou was struck by a torpedo and went to the bottom, taking 137 of the 237 persons aboard with her, including the captain and a number of officers. Most of the victims were Newfoundlanders returning from Canada.

But the U-boats, though they were active all year round, may not have sunk all the vessels lost in the perilous war years.

The Germans were blamed for the sinking of the Catalina, which sailed in mid-January of 1942 from Grand Dank, on the Burin Peninsula, with a load of salt cod for St. John's.

The ship was never seen again and there were no known survivors but she may have been a victim of fierce Atlantic storms.

German U-boats were known to be in the area at the time but it was never confirmed that the Catalina fell victim to a torpedo.

The Catalina, a motor ship of 650 tons, was a Portuguese craft, registered in Oporto, She had her crew of 16 operated between Portugal and Newfoundland.

There were other casualties. Nov. 5, 1942, two other ships went to the bottom in the vicinity of Bell Island with a death toll of 69.

Some sinkings were avenged. Two schooners from Grand Bank which hauled salt cod were sunk late in 1942 by a submarine identified as U-514. The following year, British and U.S. ships cornered the submarine in the south Atlantic and sank her.

QUESTION: We are driving to Florida for the winter soon and wondered about this non-resident no-fault insurance there. Will we have to buy it when we're Canadian citizens?

ANSWER: The Florida "No-Fault Law" which became effective January 1, 1972 relates primarily to automobiles registered in Florida. However, the law specifies that a non-resident owner of a vehicle who lives in Florida for more than 90 days during the year, must have Florida "No-Fault" insurance. You can buy this insurance in Florida.

QUESTION: Can you let us know how long the ferry trip takes across Lake Michigan from Ludington and how late in the season the ferry operates?

ANSWER: The Chessie Ferry operates a year-round daily service. The crossing to Manitowac, Wis., takes four hours, and six hours to Milwaukee, Wis.

QUESTION: I have just received an International Driving Permit and find it printed, not only in English and French, but in eight other languages. Can you explain why these particular 10 languages were chosen?

QUESTION: Can you provide any details about the auto-train from Washington to Florida?

ANSWER: The auto-train, carrying both cars and passengers, leaves Lorton, Va., six miles south of Alexandria, and Sanford, Fla., north of Orlando, at 8 p.m. daily, arriving at its destination at 11 a.m. the next day. Loading time at each point begins at 5 p.m., but no automobiles are accepted for loading after 7 p.m.

The one way fare is $190 for the automobile, the driver and one passenger. Additional passengers are $20 apiece. A sleeper for two costs $40, for three $55 and a stateroom for four $85. The round trip fare is double the one way rate.

Reservations must be made several weeks prior to departure during peak summer and winter tourist seasons. This can be done and further information can be obtained by writing to the Auto-Train Corporation, 1801 "K" Street, N.W. Washington, DC 20006.

A dinner, complete with appetizers, salads, special entrees and desserts is served in buffet cars. Dinner seating arrangements are made prior to boarding the train. After dinner, riders are invited to view a full-length feature film.

Beginning at 9 p.m., the night club car is open providing late night snacks and a cocktail lounge with live entertainment. Coffee, soft drinks and snacks are available at all times in the Service Car.

Any time after 6:30 a.m. passengers may partake of a continental breakfast, also provided by auto-train, in one of the buffet cars.

The train can provide an alternative to a drive of close to 1,000 miles, which, in most cases would mean between two and three days travel.

Four-letter Words Find Place to Call Home

LONDON (CP) — To practise gasconophing in a house sale is to swindle and therefore a gasconopher is a swindle.

Gerblimey is a vulgar corruption of the imprecation "God blind me" and gosh means "goodness." In the same one, gotcha mean "I have got you."

Heralded by the word watchers as a great triumph, the makers of the Oxford English Dictionary have launched the first supplement in 39 years, producing a 1,331-page volume covering the letter A to G. The remaining volumes will be produced in later years.

To ensure that they are "with it" and have covered every possible corner of the contemporary scene, the lexicontemporary scene, the lexicographers have lifted the veil from obscenity, diligently cataloguing all the well-known four-letter words, along with definitions and historic background.

R. W. Burchfield, head of the lexicographer team, argues that it was "Victorian prudishness" that forced omission from earlier editions of the commonest English words. It was only in 1968 that the delegates of the Oxford Press and the proctors approved in principle the inclusion of these words in the new supplement.

They recognized, he said, that "standards of tolerance have changed and their omission has for many years and more frequently of late excited critical comment."

Some of this criticism, to which Burchfield refers in an article in The Times Literary Supplement, came from the underground mag azine Oz which was not in the Oxford University Press demanding to know why a certain word was not in the Shorter Oxford English Dictionary.

The outcome was that "unclean" words "once considered too gross and vulgar to be given countenance in the decent environment of a dictionary," now appear with full supporting evidence along with a wide range of colloquial and coarse expressions referring to sexual and excretory functions.

Among these coarse expressions is the word crapper, meaning a privy, and the word crap, with all its various from defecation to idle and deceitful talk.

The huge supplement with its thousands of new words is unlikely to cause a pornography rush, for the price, £15, may itself be a deterrent.

The retail price in Canada is $56.

In any case there is more than obscenity to catch the eye. The Economist, for example, finds that the "supplement is as up to date as it can ever hope to be and the citations are so well and vitally chosen that the work can only be described as a triumph."

"This is a great achievement and a national investment," the magazine says. "The next stage, and one never to be finished, should be a cyclincal revision of the dictionary as a whole, letter by letter, with no further supplements."

With dedicated scholarship, the contributors swept virtually all of the Western world to ensure that no new words are overlooked and their derivation unsourced. For example, "hot-end" is classified as chiefly a Canadian word, meaning to jab or thrust with the handle end of a hockey stick.

"Canadien" is a French Canadian and to Canadianize is to render things into the Canadian character.

New words can, of course, have various meanings. A Logrey is either a policeman an unidentified aircraft and banger can be a sausage, a kiss or bludgeon.

Corny is well known as meaning rustic or trite and blub is perhaps equally known as a fit of weeping.

Fulmer gets into the supplement as referring to part of Hitler's title and fuddy-duddy is described as slang for an ineffectual old fogy. Fifth columm goes in as a traitor or spy and of course fuzz gets a listing as referring to the police.

Not to be ignored is Gallbraithian, referring to J. F. Galbraith, the Canadian-born economist, and those who follow his belief that wealth is outrunning welfare, social justice and the ensans of a good life.

Acupuncture May Aid Deaf Children

NEW YORK (AP) — "Now I've become a student again," says a world-famous surgeon who developed an operation that brought hearing to many deaf people.

Dr. Samuel Rosen is studying acupuncture as a possible method of helping some deaf children hear better, or for the first time.

And he is thinking of using chicken legs or grapefruit as practice objects to develop the finger movements in skilful application of the hair-thin acupuncture needles.

Dr. Rosen and his wife, Helen, his research assistant, recently returned from a month in China where they looked into Chinese reports that acupuncture has helped overcome nerve deafness in some children. It was the Rosens' second trip within a year.

Dr. Rosen, clinical professor emeritus of otolaryngology at Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York, developed a surgical technique that overcomes deafness caused by the immobilization or rigidity of the stapes, the small bones within the ear that permit sound signals to be translated into nerve responses recorded in the brain. He has traveled the world demonstrating the technique.

He was among the first medical scientists to warn that loud and excessive noise could cause permanent damage to hearing.

In their first visit to China, the Rosens became interested in reports that acupuncture could aid in treating nerve deafness, even though the acupuncture needles inserted around or near the ear never come close to the nerve of hearing itself.

This last time they worked for a month at the No. 3 Peking School for the Deaf, helping Chinese specialists test the hearing of 711 children aged nine to 15.

The tests set a baseline or "floor" of hearing ability, using an audiometer that records hearing level electrically. The Chinese had been using spoken words or hand-clapping, at various distances, to assess hearing ability. The audiometer can standardize the response.

Dr. Rosen plans to work with a similar group of American children for an objective measurement of what benefit, if any, results from acupuncture.

Dr. Rosen says neither he nor the Chinese have any idea how the acupuncture technique could work beneficially on hearing, and "it might be 25 years before we get an insight." He said the Chinese told him they began acupuncture without knowing that nerve deafness is supposed not to be correctable.

For under $100 we know of no other portable calculator that will give you office machine accuracy and convenience away from the office. The DIGI-MATIC 8 is the kind of personal-size calculator you've been waiting for. Fast, accurate, durable, attractive, the DIGI-MATIC 8 adds, subtracts, multiplies, divides and does mixed calculations anytime, anywhere. Instantly. Without any excuses. Here's why:

Floating decimal
Some portable calculators have a fixed decimal. This leads to small errors when you multiply or divide using a few decimal places, gross errors when working with many decimal places. The DIGI-MATIC 8 has a floating decimal. Which means it doesn't round figures off to one or two decimals. The decimal point goes where it has to go to give you the correct answer.

Constant key
Special constant key permits continuous multiplication or division.

CE key
Say you're working to a final total through a long set of calculations. And you make a mistake on the last entry. The CE key allows you to clear the wrong entry and put in the correct one. There's no need to start all over from the beginning.

Portable power counts
Many portable calculators offer you only minutes of portable calculating time. The DIGI-MATIC 8 offers you up to 8 hours. You see, some other calculators use small throw-away batteries. Like some toys. But the DIGI-MATIC 8 is powered by rechargeable ni-cad batteries (recharger included). You simply plug it in and while you're using it, the DIGI-MATIC 8 is recharging itself.

No Quick Peace Pact

By WILLIAM SCALLY

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Hopes of a speedy end to the Vietnam war were fading today as Hanoi, Saigon and Washington kept up their manoeuvring on the draft ceasefire accord disclosed a week ago.

North Vietnamese negotiator, Xuan Thuy, in Paris, demanded on an NBC television interview Wednesday night that the United States guarantee the terms of the nine-point draft agreement he helped to hammer out in a series of secret meetings with White House adviser Henry Kissinger.

Earlier in the day, South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu angrily denounced the aggreement — disclosed by Hanoi last Thursday morning — as a sell-out, widening his split with the United States.

And in Washington, the Nixon administration continued to insist it will not be stampeded into signing a settlement that would end the seeds of another war and could let the South Vietnamese people a chance to determine their future.

Private contacts between Washington and Hanoi apparently have not raised hopes that a meeting to iron out remaining issues is in the offing. Sources said Kissinger has no travel plans at least until this weekend.

Kissinger said last Thursday that the six or seven issues could be negotiated at one final meeting but diplomatic sources now are suggesting that, two meetings are more likely, plus a trip to Saigon to relay the results to Thieu. This would virtually rule out any agreement before the U.S. presidential election next Tuesday.

North Vietnam apparently fears President Nixon will hold out for tougher terms if the election puts him back into the White House for another four years.

For this reason, diplomatic sources suggested, the Communists want a watertight affirmation by the United States that it will adhere to the draft agreements already reached before they will resume talks.

Hanoi Drives Hard

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese troops and tanks over-ran another border camp in the central highlands today as both South and North Vietnamese fought to expand their territorial control before a ceasefire.

The South Vietnamese reported nearly 150 Communist attacks during the 24 hours ending at dawn and said it was the largest number recorded in any 24-hour period of the war. But many of them were small-scale rocket and mortar barrages.

PHAM VAN DONG
Premier Of North Vietnam

The Duc Co border camp was the third frontier base overrun in the highlands in less than a month. Scores of rangers were reported to have escaped. But the fate of 80 men who had been wounded in the fighting was not known.

North Vietnamese infantry and tanks surrounded the camp, blasted it with cannon, artillery and wire-guided missiles and then made a ground assault from three sides.

U.S. Arms Rushed To Saigon

SAIGON (AP) — The United States is rushing millions of dollars worth of military supplies to South Vietnam in a crash program to beat the signing of a ceasefire agreement.

Both the U.S. command and the 7th Air Force refused to discuss the military aid program. But informed sources said it goes well beyond the equipment originally planned for in the Vietnamization schedule.

The draft peace agreement, which calls for withdrawal of all American troops from Vietnam within 60 days of signing, stipulates that the United States can replace existing military equipment only on a one-for-one basis with weapons of the same characteristics under international supervision.

Anticipating the agreement will be signed, soon, the Pentagon is sending scores of troops into Saigon from bases in the United States carrying military equipment including armored personnel carriers and Chinook helicopters.

Mayor Delbridge complained that when municipal officials go to Queen's Park in Toronto they have problems trying to understand some department employees.

Five Die in Crash

ST. THOMAS, Ont. (CP) — Five St. Thomas residents were killed in a two-car collision Wednesday night on Highway 3, a quarter of a mile west of here. The dead are: Dr. Keith McGregor, 61, and his wife, 60, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Johnstone, the wife 73 and her husband about the same age, and Carlos Rapposelli, 39.

Child Attacked

MISSISSAUGUA, Ont. (CP) — Police are looking for a man in his mid-20s who raped a nine-year-old girl Hallowe'en night. They said the girl, dressed as a gypsy, was dragged into a car after refusing to sell a man her candy for $5. She was driven to a dead-end country road, raped, and taken back to the point of her abduction.

Troops Capture IRA Cadre

BELFAST (AP) — A battalion of British troops swept into a Roman Catholic district of Belfast late Wednesday night and captured a suspected cadre of Irish Republican Army guerrillas.

Army headquarters said they believed an IRA battalion commander, three other officers and four active gunmen were seized in the operation, mounted against fierce opposition from local youths.

The 650 soldiers who penetrated the Ardoyne district were pelted with rocks and bottles as they flung up roadblocks to confine off the immediate area, the army said.

After the raid, more rioters converged on the local infantry command post, he said.

The riots were broken up by volleys of rubber bullets from the soldiers.

The spokesman said the target for the mission was a club "habitually used" by IRA operatives. Twenty-five men were held at first, but 15 were later released, he said.

"We are very pleased with the results of the operation," the spokesman added.

A group of Protestant gunmen crossed into the Irish republic Wednesday and bombed a bar which they said was frequented by the Catholic-based IRA.

It was the latest in a series of Protestant forays into the neighboring republic. The Ulster Defence Association has said these "punitive" incursions will continue until the cross-border raiding from the south.

PM Will Reveal Plans To TV Parley Tonight

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau will hold a television news conference tonight to discuss his intentions on whether his government will remain in power.

The 8 p.m. EST news conference was announced by his office while the prime minister met his cabinet. He said as he entered the meeting today that an announcement on his intentions would be made "when I can get radio and television time."

He said Wednesday that he would announce a "crystal clear" decision today.

Today's cabinet meeting was the second in two days as the Liberal government discussed what it should do in the wake of Monday's election.

A spokesman for the prime minister's office said the cabinet will meet both morning and afternoon.

It was discussing whether Mr. Trudeau should hand over the government to Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, whose party won the most seats on the basis of the count after Monday's election.

The standings now are 109 seats for the Conservatives, 108 for the Liberals, 30 for the New Democratic Party, 15 for Social Credit and there are two independents.

But there are at least two automatic recounts upcoming and several more recounts are expected which could change the standings in the 264-seat House.

But Mr. Trudeau may decide to await the recounts before making a decision whether to step down or remain in government and face Parliament.

Mr. Stanfield, meanwhile, was awaiting the government's decision at his home.

Among items to be discussed were when to call a meeting of the NDP caucus and when to hold a meeting of the party's national council.

Mr. Lewis so far has declined comment on what the government should do, saying only that his party will support good legislation no mat er who holds power.

Nixon Thinks Trudeau Should Resign

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said Wednesday Prime Minister Trudeau should not cling to power unless he has a majority of seats in Parliament.

"I would think that if the result of the election show that Mr. Stanfield has the largest group in the House, the Liberals should let them form a government," Mr. Nixon said in an interview.

Minimum Pay Review Under Way

KIMBERLEY, Ont. (CP) — Ontario may soon have a new minimum wage rate, Labor Minister Fernand Guindon said Wednesday.

Mr. Guindon told more than 100 delegates to the fall meeting of the Association of Tourist Resorts of Ontario that he was speaking personally and not revealing government policy.

"I am discussing a study presently by my ministry for discussion among my colleagues in cabinet, and might add that cabinet is presently examining the whole question of minimum wage and other facets of the Employment Standards Act," he said.

Factors coincidered in reviewing the minimum wage are changes in the cost of living, changes in wage rates and the minimum wage in other jurisdictions.

"It is obvious to all that $1.65 an hour will not buy now what it did in 1971," he said. The cost of living increased that year by 2.2 per cent. Changes in average hourly earnings also show a significant increase in the period in question."

"In 1971 when the $1.65 minimum was set, Ontario had the second highest rate in Canada. Currently, the minimum rates in Manitoba, Alberta and British Columbia are higher.

Nixon Plans Talks

WASHINGTON (CP-AP) — President Nixon will discuss the future of the country in a country-wide television address tonight, a day after Senator George McGovern told the biggest crowd of his political career he believes Americans want the country "to follow higher moral standards."

The president announced plans for a closing blitz in his campaign for re-election. There will be another television speech Monday, and campaign trips Friday and Saturday to six states—Oklahoma, North Carolina, Rhode Island, New Mexico, California and Illinois.

The president's speech is scheduled to be televised live from the White House at 7:30 p.m. EST. Besides discussing the country's future, he is also expected to comment on Vietnam peace negotiations.

McGovern, Democratic nominee for president, told at a rally in New York City that "the American people in their own way are asking something that may sound old-fashioned ... they want this country to follow higher moral standards."

The crowds that turned out Wednesday to cheer the senator revived the flagging spirits of some of the candidate's staff, dispirited by opinion polls showing him 23 percentage points or more behind Nixon.

Police estimated about 100,000 people lined the streets of Manhattan for McGovern's motorcade and rally.

Poet Dies

VENICE, Italy (CP) — Ezra Pound, one of the foremost poets of the 20th century though he was branded a traitor to his homeland and a lunatic, died Wednesday night at the age of 87.

He made pro-Fascist broadcasts while in Italy during the war and was indicted by a grand jury for his indictment, in absentia, on charges of treason in 1943. Italian partisans arrested him in 1945 and he was turned over to U.S. troops, who placed him for a while inside a cage in a detention camp.

It was there, inside the cage, that he wrote the Pisan Cantos, regarded as among the finest poems of the century.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: A storm expected to cross northern Lake Michigan tonight is spreading warm air and rain across southern Ontario. The rain will reach north Georgian Bay tonight with snow further north. Cooler air will move across southern and central Ontario Friday with showers changing to snow. Temperatures are expected to reach 60 in southern regions today but only 50 Friday.

Cabinet Mixture Difficult Task

OTTAWA (CP) — If the Conservatives form the next federal government, Robert Stanfield will be faced with some difficult choices as he tries to blend experience, ability and regional considerations into a new 29-member cabinet.

For instance, little Pginee Edward Island can scarcely have more than one minister in the cabinet, and yet it has at least two MPs who seem to be obvious choices.

J. Angus MacLean was minister of fisheries in the Diefenbaker government and has been a front-bench opposition member ever since. And the party's external affairs critic—the member who would normally expect to enjoy the posts of minister in his specialty area—is Heath Macquarrie, also an Islander.

Furthermore there is David MacDonald, 36-year-old former United Church minister, one of the more vocal members of the opposition, who helped Mr. Stanfield gain the leadership.

This is only one example of the difficulties that would face Mr. Stanfield. He appears to be overloaded with likely candidates in some provinces and extremely thin in others.

The only certainty is that Claude Wagner, his Quebec lieutenant, would occupy a senior portfolio. And with only two MPs from Quebec it is likely that the other, Heward Grafftey, also would be appointed to the cabinet.

There is speculation that Mr. Wagner would be given the trade, or perhaps the external affairs, portfolio.

Store Becoming Courthouse

A March completion date is the target for renovations and a second storey addition to the former Dominion Stores market on Victoria Ave., just west of Pinnacle Street.

The property was purchased earlier this year by local builder Maurice Rollins and is being renovated for use as provincial court accommodation.

Mr. Rollins said Wednesday the total value of the land, existing structure and planned renovations would exceed $200,000.

Yesterday 32-foot-long steel beams were being set in place to give added support before the second storey addition and new roof are added.

Hopes are that the required exterior work can be completed before cold weather sets in, so that interior finish work can be done during the winter months.

Board Supports Rezoning

The Belleville Subordinate Planning Committee will recommend that council approve a rezoning of 4.85 acres of land south of Bridge Street E. and east of Elizabeth Cres. that will permit construction of 80 Maurice Rollins townhouses.

Decision to make the recommendation was made at Wednesday's meeting of the committee, following receipt of a report from Quinte Planning Board officer, Frank Stokmans. The question of approval will be placed on next Monday's council agenda.

In his report, Stokmans says the area concerned is capable of sustaining greater density housing, pointing out present zoning permits construction of highrise buildings on property just further to the south.

At the last meeting of the committee, area residents were out in force to protest the rezoning from R1 (single family residential) to R4G (townhouse). A petition against the rezoning and signed by 140 residents of the neighborhood has also been received by the city.

One letter on the issue sent to the committee from H. G. McGee of 612 Bridge St. E. said many people are city hall as a dictatorship.

He took the position "existing taxpayers living in the area should have priority over those who are potential taxpayers."

A letter from Mr. and Mrs. Vic Williams at 567 Bridge East said in their brief to the committee, "we bought in this area for the sole purpose of its being one-family residential homes and we would like it to stay that way."

Decision on whether or not it will may be made by council Monday.

Landowners Will Receive Refunds

TRENTON (Staff) — Trenton will be reimbursing two Carrying Place Road residents because of, apparent mistakes in their local improvement assessments.

Town council learned that George Condelle has paid $267.20 over the past 12 years, at a rate of 10 cents more a foot on one of his properties than either of the two others he owns or those owned by his neighbors in the same area.

The second resident, Donald Brinklow, has apparently paid $7 for the entire local improvement charges on property owned by his father, Merton Brinklow.

According to the town's report, tabled in the Wednesday council meeting, "our records have been checked several times and no explanation can be found as to why these situations exist."

However, it is possible when a property split between father and son took place, no division was recorded. It was thought that in the case of Mr. Condelle, two sewers from mains to property lines, were installed, but no record to support this theory, has been found.

In the case of the $7 Brinklow arrears, the landowner was not requesting a refund, just a straightened record.

Council, however agreed to reimburse both landowners, if it is found that the lateral sewers were, indeed, installed in the Condelle property, he will be required to reimburse the town.

Barbers Split on Bylaw Change

TRENTON (Staff) — Objection of a dead man, that has held up proposed 30 unit senior citizens housing complex for Wrate Street, has been withdrawn by his estate, town council was told Wednesday night.

The project, initiated at least two years ago, was held up because of the unapproved Trenton Official Plan. The land on which the building would stand is a former mill and the property requires rezoning before construction can begin.

The official plan was approved several weeks ago and could have been in effect immediately if it were not for one objection, filed by a man who died before the Ontario Municipal Board could call a hearing.

Deputy town clerk Arden Royce advised council Wednesday night, the dead man's family had finally been located and the objection was withdrawn. According to Mayor Ingram, the building work can now begin. The OMB has been advised of the withdrawal.

To cut or not to cut (on Mondays) will be the question facing city hall barbers the second time Monday when city barbers for and against plead their cases.

At the last council meeting, two city barbers showed up, and presented a petition asking that the bylaw restricting barber shops from opening Mondays, be changed.

At that time council passed the issue on to more information could be gathered.

The petition asked that the bylaw be changed to allow barbers to open on Mondays and "was not intended to necessitate shops opening if they chose not to," said Bill Bowers, owner of the Hotel Quinte Barber Shop, recently renamed New Image.

Of the barbers in the city, 11 signed for the change, two were against it and two had no strong feelings either way.

The opposition has rallied its forces and is returning to council this week with its own petition.

Mr. Kuipers said yesterday "many of the barbers in the area have lost the meaning of the word service.

"When there weren't so many barbers around, they could pick and choose their hours, knowing their customers would comply," he said.

"We are a service group, like any other business and must open when it is convenient for customers," said Mrs. Kuipers.

Paul Clare, owner and proprietor of Paul's Place and president of the local Barbers' Association said, "the day of the 10 minute hair cut and shave is over and a man can't just slip in and out."

"Haircuts are getting to be more technical operations with the longer styles," he said.

"We have to open more hours to give the customer a chance to set his schedule for the longer stay in the chair.

"The older barbers seem to feel we are trying to put them out of business," said Mr. Kuipers. "That we are trying to do is generally improve the service and get better. We take a long hard look at their shops."

IN MEMORIAM

CROSSEY — BREWSY — In loving memory of Harold who passed away Sept. 30, 1969 and Dee who passed away Nov. 2, 1971.

Now time is home, the days are over.

We little thought their death so soon.

Each those that have lost can tell,

The sorrow of parting forever well.

—Ever remembered by mother-in-law Mabel and family.

BREWSY — In loving memory of Donald William Brewsy who passed away November 2, 1971.

Sadly missed and remembered by Gail.

A voice we loved is stilled,

A place is vacant in our home,

Which never can be filled,

Memories of you we will not forgotten,

Though our eyes you see no more,

But in memory you are with us,

Dear Dad, Always.

—Ever remembered by Bart, Linda and Sandra.

BREWSY — In memory of Donald William Brewsy who died Friday November 2, 1971.

Sadly missed by hearts of those we loved.

—Ever remembered by Dawson.

QUIRT — In loving memory of MRS. Jean Quirt who passed away Oct. 31, 1968.

In memory a daily thought,

A heart to love,

Memories remembered by wife Lewella.

WEESE — In loving memory of a dear husband and father Frederick Weese who was taken suddenly to his heavenly home Nov. 2, 1967.

Our world may change from year to year

And friends from day to day,

But memories live in our hearts,

From memory pass away.

—Sadly missed and remembered by son Allan, daughter-in-law Jean, grandson Gordon and Ricky.

WEESE — In loving memory of a dear husband and father Frederick Weese who was taken suddenly to his heavenly home Nov. 2, 1967.

God looked around his garden,

And chose the fairest flower,

He plucked our dear husband,

And saw your tired face.

He put a kiss upon your brow,

And lifted you to rest.

We cannot see you beautiful,

But know you're blessed.

—Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by wife Mildred and son Don.

WEESE — In loving memory of a dear father Clarence F. who passed away Nov. 2, 1970.

In our hearts your memory lingers,

Sweet and dear as ever more,

You left us all for heaven,

We do not think of you,

But with thoughts filled by daughter Elaine, son-in-law Ken and grandson Kenneth.

Hydrant Markers Still Not Settled

TRENTON (Staff) — The question of which town agency is responsible for keeping Trenton's 280 fire hydrants clear of snow or adequately marked in winter, was once again in the news, this time at Wednesday night's town council meeting.

The problem arose when council requested the Public Utilities Commission install markers, at a cost of $3 apiece, for a total bill of more than $1,000. The markers, would wave like colored wands, high above banks of snow, out of reach of snowplows, and pointing the way to firefighters or town works employees.

But PUC commissioners Oct. 19 emphatically opposed the commission's responsibility, preferring to turn the matter over to either council or the fire department. If the PUC is to pay $1,000, the commissioners said, rents to the town would rise accordingly or a bill would be presented.

In light of council's meeting, it would appear no one there wants to be held responsible either. Both councillors George Brown and Stan Ketcheson went on record as opposing any purchase of markers.

"Why should $1,000 be spent on markers for kids to pull down," Councillor Ketcheson said.

Following brief discussion, council ordered a full report from acting works commissioner Arie Hoornweg on the exact number of hydrants that would be close enough to curbsides to require markers. Council was reminded that one hydrant was shoved from its base by a snowplow last winter, causing a flood of water.

Councillor Paul Tripp also suggested town works employees could manufacture markers at a cost much less than commercial, pre-made markers.

Council Endorses Day Care Centre

TRENTON (Staff) — For some time now, Grace United Church has been attempting to establish a paying day care centre at their Dundas Street East church building here.

In a letter to town council Wednesday night, Rev. Frank A. Hobbs requested council's written approval of the project, as well as the proper zoning changes to permit such an operation.

Council wholeheartedly agreed with the plan, but were reminded by acting works commissioner Arie Hoornweg that under the present zoning bylaw, a commercial day care centre is not permitted.

He said Grace United is situated in a residential zone. However, discussions on the town's proposed new zoning bylaw to accompany the approved official plan, show such operations would be permitted.

Mr. Hoornweg said there has been no word yet on exactly when a bylaw would be ready. Councillor Paul Tripp advised council much work has been done on bylaw groundwork, and he hopes for public hearings at the first of next year.

When Mr. Hoornweg advised council a non - commercial operation could function under the old bylaw, town clerk O. W. Larry said the church operation was definitely a commercial one. "They have to charge or they can't operate. However, they are only interested in breaking even, not making a profit," he said.

Rev. Hobbs said the church has been hoping to open the centre Nov. 27. "Grace United Church will not involve the town of Trenton financially in this matter," he wrote.

A letter from council approving the day care centre will be forwarded to Mrs. D. M. Beattie, field supervisor for the province's day nurseries branch in Toronto. The letter will also advise Mrs. Beattie plans for the bylaw will be discussed at the next meeting of Quinte Planning Board, to be held tonight.

Ore Train Gets Another

TRENTON (Staff) — The driver of a late-model car walked away unscathed from its remains late Wednesday afternoon, after the vehicle was rammed by a CNR ore train.

Police report Frank Gilbert Myatt, 30, of RR3, Napanee, was driving his 1971 Chevrolet east on Rideski Street. He told police later he couldn't see the approaching train because of trees that obscured his vision.

Engineer Sherwin Kenny of RR3, Belleville, blew his whistle several times, but the train struck the Myatt car on the driver's side, spinning it around. The car came to rest in a nearby ditch.

Damage to the car has been estimated at $2,000; to the locomotive $50.

Plomer Will Run for Office

PICTON (Staff) — James Plomer, chairman of the Prince Edward County board of education, has stated he will seek re-election this fall.

He represents the township of South Marysburg and has served two terms on the board.

Mr. Plomer was acclaimed to office in 1970 and in 1971 was elected chairman after acting as vice-chairman of the board for a year.

School Board Spokesmen Damaged Cruiser, Two Jailed

TRENTON (Staff) — Two Kingston men were found guilty in provincial court here Wednesday of public mischief, involving the smashing of a dome and fender light on a town police cruiser July 22.

Douglas Knight, 18, and his brother, Gregory, 22, were each sentenced to one month in jail by provincial court Judge R. C. Jackson.

One of the brothers was arrested when two men were seen smashing the special lights on a cruiser while police were answering a call. The second brother was apprehended later.

Youth Arrested

TORONTO (Staff) — Metropolitan Toronto police early Thursday morning arrested a Trenton youth and charged him with possession of a stolen car and theft of gasoline.

James Pearson, 16, of 60 Stanley Street, was arrested when police observed a man stealing gas. The car he was driving, a 1964 Plymouth, had been stolen from Auto Haus Bellson, Volkswagen dealership in Trenton some time Wednesday night.

At Wednesday night's Trenton town council meeting, two representatives of the Hastings - Prince Edward Roman Catholic School Board, appointed to a brief prepared by parents, teachers and members of the board, opposing the planned use of students as crossing guards in Trenton.

They are left, Austin Scott, separate school board Trustee-chairman, and E. J. Neville, supervisor-chief of schools for the separate school board. Mr. Scott delivered the five point resolution to council.

RC School Board Protests Student Crossing Guards

TRENTON (Staff) — Use of student crossing guards by the town of Trenton, has been completely rejected by the Hastings - Prince Edward Roman Catholic School Board, according to its representative, Austin Scott, the Hastings County school board supports the opposition.

In a brief he read to council Wednesday night, Mr. Scott said the separate school board is primarily concerned with the loss of school time such student guards would suffer, plus the legal liability the board would face if any of these guards were proved negligent in the event of traffic mishaps.

The board also feels it is up to the town to provide the guards. As well, the school board members questioned the sense of giving a child the "responsibility for the safety of young children or other children of his own age." It was also pointed out that any school's jurisdiction over a student is restricted to school premises, questioning whether or not the board has any authority beyond school limits.

Following discussion, council accepted the brief, to be discussed in a committee of the whole meeting when town police Chief David Saunders can be called upon to further [illegible] the proposed program and give the town time to [illegible] legal requirements involved in such a move.

At an August meeting, council voted to temporarily retain four adult crossing guards, fired earlier in the year. The guards were laid off because of plans for their replacement by students, following the move of several Ontario municipalities. However, at that time, no students had been trained for the job, and the transition was delayed until January, 1973.

Mr. Scott told council a group of parents, teachers, and members of both boards had agreed upon a resolution opposing use of students as guards. He said it was an "unemotional piece of paper," but presented by a parent - teachers' groups that "feels very strongly about this."

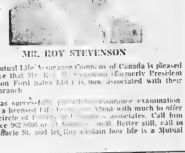
In reply, Councillor Stan Ketcheson said he personally knows several such student crossing guards from Peterborough. "Ottawa has the same type of guards from its separate schools," he said, adding, "I cannot understand if it's against the law, as you state here, why the separate school boards (in those cities) have these crossing guards."

Mayor McDonald pointed out that Chief Saunder's proposal earlier this year was "entirely based on the success of programs in other cities."

Mr. Scott said he wasn't disputing the success of the guards in other centres, again emphasizing the 15 minutes both before and at the end of school, plus lunch hours, that would be lost while a student guard was travelling to his post.

Mayor McDonald said there is a limit to the distance a youngster would have to go. He also said because of regulations, few crossings would be manned by students because of the distance from the school. These points would still be watched over by adult guards, he said.

Trenton Trailers To Be Assessed



TRENTON (Staff) — Residents of the Skyview Trailer Court at 311 Dundas Street East will soon be paying taxes on their trailer homes, following approval of a resolution of assessment by Trenton town council Wednesday night.

The Regional Assessment office in Trenton will be called upon to make assessments of the more than 50 trailers now in the trailer court.

Deputy town clerk Arden Royce told The Intelligencer previous tax laws allowed only for authority to tax the land, paid for by trailer court owners. Under new laws, trailer owners can now be taxed, he said.

Mr. Royce said Skyview is the only court in Trenton that falls under town jurisdiction. He could not say how much additional revenue the new tax would bring.

Stanfield's New Image

Dig the new Robert Stanfield at his Tuesday evening press conference — bland, confident, assured, shrewd, erudite, witty, humorous as ever. In short a man transformed. And all across the country, people were listening. No, a Conservative government would not impose additional taxes in the next year, in fact it would cancel a three per cent impost proposed by the Liberals. And yes, bilingualism was all right, but it would not be pushed at the expense of job security for those who have facility in only one language.

What Mr. Stanfield was saying made a lot of sense. More than that it was believable. That is not to say that Prime Minister Trudeau and his Government were insincere in what they were trying to do, but they had nevertheless built up a serious credibility gap which was reflected by the polls. It had got to the stage no one really knew what was going on, except that a great deal of money was being wasted on dubious make-work programs of no lasting merit, as well as on another project, people in some aspects of defence for instance, and on empire building in the bureaucracy, not to mention on bilingualism programs.

The Conservative Leader was understandably cautious on some matters — future dealings with the United States being one such area. It is easy, incidentally, to appreciate U.S. concern over the present stalemate in Canada, having regard to matters of joint interest to the two countries.

Be that as it may, here we have Mr. Stanfield, the man who all along, for all his early lack of charisma or whatever, has been touted as one who would make a better Prime Minister than a leader of the Opposition.

As for Mr. Trudeau he has frequently said, in effect, "if you don't like us or our policy then throw us out." The Government has in fact suffered a moral defeat and is trailing the PCs at last count by one seat. It does retain a lead in the popular vote but this is not enough to cloud the fact of widespread dissatisfaction with its policies.

Meanwhile if Mr. Trudeau has any time for personal reading these days he might open on The pages of Tennessee William's play, Camino Real, to Chapter 3 where the hunchback Gutman is noting the departure of Lord Byron and he says: "Well, that's that. But this is a time of entry and departure. There are no permanent guests. Possibly you are getting a little restless?"

Gutman says that may be true but asks Byron what he can do about it. The poet replies: "Make a departure!" To which Gutman asks, "From yourself?" and Byron answers: "From my present self to myself as I used to be!"

Later Byron says "there is a time for departure even when there's no certain place to go." But, specifically, he is 'sailing to Athens . . . and he concludes with some heroic advice: "Make voyages! - Attempt them! - there's nothing else. . ."

It is the sort of advice which should strike a responsive chord in Mr. Trudeau.

U.S. Ties

Asked by an American newsman for a lesson in civic practice Canadian-style, Mr. Stanfield obliged, outlining various alternatives open to him in the present stalemate.

We are reminded, in this context, that more and more Canadian voters are of U.S. birth and that some of the candidates have family connections with the States. At a Rotary meeting here two or three years ago, Prince Edward-Hastings MP George Hees for one mentioned family business connections his forebears had across the lake in Oswego.

At least two candidates — both of them NDP — have American-born wives. Mrs. Richard Lunn, wife of the candidate in Prince Edward-Hastings, is from Texas and is a writer of children's books.

In Stormont-Dundas, New York native Mrs. Murray Forsyth and her husband live on a farm with their two children. Mrs. Forsyth lived in Minnesota and met her husband (a teacher at General Vanier secondary school in Cornwall), at university there.

These are all reminders of our essential kinship with our American neighbors as well as with Britain and Europe, for there were not a few names of political aspirants in the ridings out west that reflected Ukrainian and other origins.

$8,100 Will Bring $3,760 for Life

MPs Pension Rip-off Masterminded by Trudeau

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — So some former MPs — they lost their parliamentary status during the election when these was no House of Commons and so, as Members — have become ex-MPs with the votes counted.

Unless they were first-term freshmen, in the House only since the 1968 election, aged 60 or years.

The others, those who sat the four years of the last Parliament and as little as two years of any other, will enjoy a pension which, for generosity, is unmatched by any superannuation scheme anywhere in Canada.

Six years is the minimum parliamentary service qualifying the MP for the country's richest pension ripoff.

For those six years, the defeated or retiring MP draws an annual $3,760 for life after paying only $8,100 into the fund.

Apart from those who were defeated at the polls, 40 MPs, perhaps in fear of what might happen, retired before the election, 30 of them with enough years of parliamentary service to qualify for the pension.

So big-hearted were the MPs when they voted themselves this lifetime payoff that a Member who served only the required minimum six years in the House got back his contributions in just a bit more than two years.

And from then in the day he dies, it is gravy all the way.

Of course the Parliamentary Pension Plan is geared to rise with the rising cost of living.

For six years, an annual pension of $3,760 for life after paying only $8,100 in the fund.

Ten years: $8,380 pension on contributions of $13,500.

Fifteen years: $9,000 for $21,300.

Twenty years: $11,700 for $31,200.

Twenty-five years: $13,500 or $20,700.

Plus whatever the cost of living increase provides.

It comes down to this: for those who retired before the election and those who were beaten, recovery is made a shade on either side of two years of contributions plus.

Unconscionable!" cried the good grey New Democratic MP Stanley Knowles when the last Parliament, suffering this greedy case of the "gimme's" just two years ago" voted itself this pension-like-no-other.

The way it works, an MP buys a year of paid - up pension for every $1,350 he contributes to the fund.

If $18,000 of salary plus $8,000 tax-free expenses this is no great strain on the parliamentarian's purse.

Former Liberal Prime Minister Pearson put through the big salary and expense account increase to the $18,000 and tax-free $8,000.

He made it even sweeter on the basis that the MP of the more he earns the bigger the pension, making sure that more MPs than ever before made more than their basic $18,000 plus $8,000.

Parliamentary secretaries — those backbench MPs who assist and unofficially cabinet ministers — get an additional $4,000 putting them to $30,000, including the free-ride $8,000.

And there have been almost as many secretaries as there have been ministers.

And the ministers get the basic $18,000 plus $8,000 in additional salary and $10,000 in expenses for a total $42,000.

It all makes for the grandest pension in the land.

Robert Stanfield's Perseverance Pays Off

By DON O'HEARN
from The Intelligencer's
Queen's Park
Bureau

In the aftermath of the federal election have you noticed the curious circumstance?

Most people are discussing why and how the Liberals lost not why and how the PCs gained.

This was very pronounced on election night through the broadcasts.

All the reports and interviews were emphasizing the "loss" angle.

The main question was what had the Trudeau government done wrong.

Overlooked almost entirely was the fact that Robert Stanfield had led the PCs to striking gains.

Nobody seemed to even think of giving him credit.

Yet quite probably his contribution was the key to the whole campaign.

He's been think back he was constantly on the go, politicking across the country, for four years solidly.

It wasn't loud politicking. But it was persevering. And unquestionably it paid off.

Today we are hearing talk of reaction to the Trudeau personality, of the good work of the Lib-lab coalition, of the contribution of Bill Davis and the other premiers who pitched in on the campaign.

But do you remember the latter stages?

You would be talking to people and they would say, many of them almost reluctantly, that Stanfield was a "good man."

He wasn't what a politician was supposed to be, particularly a politician in the Trudeau era.

He was plain, down-to-earth, without flair or passion.

But he was a worker. And he talked sense. And above all he reflected decency, and quality.

The Liberals to some extent certainly "lost."

But even more than that one man did some winning.

And he should be given the credit.

The boys of the pupils are from eleven to sixteen and the young workers are most enthusiastic over their war project.

Sharp criticism of the complacent and apathetic attitude evident in the people of Ontario in general and Belleville in particular, in regard to the ability to protect their homes in the event of an air raid, was levelled here yesterday by Captain McIntyre Hood, secretary of the Ontario Civilian Defence Corps.

University Enrolment Down

Kingston Whig-Standard

There are at least two basic ways of regarding the present unexpected economic difficulties of the universities of Ontario. Because of a sudden, drastic and completely unexpected drop in student enrolment the universities, whose grants from the Ontario Government are based on projected student populations are facing serious reductions in funds.

One way of looking at the problem is in necessitating a better "ways of allocating funds. The old way of insisting on a rigid allocation of grants per student population with no leeway allowed for the unexpected is obviously discredited. Even the Minister of Colleges and Universities, Jack McNie, has had to admit that. Why was the system made so inflexible unless it was the result of the unlimited growth doctrine which still possesses our society?

The other angle involves the fundamental question: Why have the students dropped out in such numbers? A few answers have been attempted but they do not turn out to be answers to Why, but simply expositions of How. For instance a recent official survey indicated that some students simply kept on as they had found during the summer. Some university officials believe higher tuition fees and dissatisfaction over student loan policy were factors.

But Why remains unanswered. It shouldn't be beyond the technical ability of those concerned, or advisers more sensitive to university grant policy. But it is not likely that much time will be spent on wondering about why society has produced students who are with such seeming eccentricity—190 of them every paid 500 degrees in education but failed to register, a phenomenon not uncommon throughout the province.

According to Marshall McLuhan the young regard society as "intolerable 'police states', in which everybody is kept 'under surveillance' and everything is kept moving by the specialized packaging and the universal pressure of functionaries." This is because the instant availability of contact with the world about them through TV, radio and the telephone, has enabled the young people to accept an unlimited personal universe without boundaries, walls or police figures. Older people have been conditioned the other way, hence the conflict.

Accept it or not, this idea should not be dismissed without thought. Acceptance can come only through understanding. It is far more important to understand what is happening in the wider context than simply to devise "better machinery" for making an obsolete system "work".

This is the challenge to all our institutions, to our whole society. We had better make an effort to transcend the limitations of our conditioned minds before we inherit what McLuhan calls "the stalled society", with the hope of re-starting the motor.

Cost Of Welfare

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

"If this isn't the limit".

I for one think this Welfare bit has gone too far and after reading this mornings Globe and Mail — Vol 1 'd say all our hard working men (husbands mainly) may as well throw in their lunch pails, hard hats, etc, and go on Welfare.

It's enough we tax payers keep these people but, when it comes to buying (new) homes for them — No way. In fact we shouldn't have to buy even older model homes for them.

We are an average family trying to buy an older type home and remodel when we can afford to which isn't too often. As you see, why I complain a bit but trying to make a go of it and getting kicked in the teeth every time.

Who is paying for these homes for Welfare? The Government? Where does the Government get the money? From the hard working Joe who is trying to make a go of it for his wife, self and family.

This is unfair justice to our cities.

Mrs. P. W. LEWIS.

Wolf Population Threatened

Kingston Whig-Standard

The recent decision of the Quebec Government to try to wipe out the wolf population of the province has been widely protested across Canada. This protest has now been added to by the Fund For Animals Inc., an American organization having about 40,000 members and headed by Cleveland Amory.

The Fund has sent letters to Premier Robert Bourassa of Quebec and to the Department of the Interior in Washington urging that Quebec cancel the "massive wolf kill" and hoping "that you can profit and learn from our mistakes".

According to Louis Regenstein, the National Director of the Fund, wolves in North America are rapidly becoming extinct. "Outside of Minnesota and Alaska, perhaps as few as 60 to 75 remain in the wild state in the United States." In Canada, he wrote, there are still places where they survive in considerable numbers. Quebec being one of the last areas where they are numerous. The letter added, "unfortunately the provincial government decided to kill off most of its wolf population and it now is in the process of doing so by a ruthless hunting and trapping." And, Mr. Regenstein might have added, Quebec has officially adopted the bloodthirsty test of the hunting fraternity which, by putting on pressure, has been able not only to get the Government to agree to the elimination of the wolf, but to offer bounties and prizes as incentives.

The wolf, like all species of wildlife, predators or otherwise, is necessary if the balance of nature is not to be seriously disturbed. Kill off a predator and you bring about the unrestricted increase of its normal prey which then becomes a serious nuisance. Contrary to the hunters' arguments that the deer population is mainly threatened by wolves, it is the hunters themselves who deplete deer herds. Those deer which do fall to the wolves are the old and the weak, the process thus ensuring the survival of the fittest.

If the province of Quebec does not heed the widespread protests this ill-advised campaign against the wolf population will be guilty of a cruel and stupid injustice.

Political Beliefs

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Apropos the comments of Mrs. Wendell in The Intelligencer of Oct. 30.

I found the writer's remarks amusing. I am sure your correspondent meant well but I must correct some misleading impressions she inferred. First, I do not see myself as some sort of Lone Ranger "fighting injustice anywhere". I write letters to newspapers primarily out of interest, concerns and sometimes anger. If they are read I do it to reject attention to some unsatisfactory aspect of our society, so that the leaders of others are encouraged to contribute their ideas and opinions. I think we all benefit.

I have to disagree with Mrs. Wendell that I am unemployed as a result of helping employees in the UIC, when with respect I need people like Charlie Hart, Bert Gerling, Marty Weller, and Liz Bassi to be able to contribute in a small way to securing management - union acknowledgment of certain entitlements of employees pending members of the lodges.

I did not consider that this entailed me, or the others to say specific privileges in relation to job security. What your correspondent is actually suggesting is "feather-bedding" and I don't happen to subscribe to that particular philosophy.

Yes, it was the Liberal government I suppose that laid me off. We must not forget either that it was the Liberal government that freed me in the first place, originally, from prison. That ten weeks lasted for some nine months.

I supported the re-election of the Liberal government because I feel they did a fairly good job in the face of tremendous difficulties. I am quite sure the other parties, had they been in the same position would have done no better. I prefer to say, examine the record of the Diefenbaker government with a 208-seat strength. Unemployment was almost the same (and they were not fighting inflation then) and inflation, at that time, had not reached the proportions it has today.

"Confirmed socialist". I am not. Left of centre, yes, but it is hard to accept extremes of either side. If Mrs. Wendell, and other "confirmed anti-socialists" were placed in the role of leaders of the various bases of the socialist medicine they would be among the first to howl.

All the goodies of our capitalistic, materialistic society we accept and partake, would not be so readily available under any "confirmed Socialist" regime. I saw the whole thing in the United States and it was just did not work.

I still advocate a balance, in which control is instituted to insure that excesses are not allowed to erode the system to the detriment of society. We certainly need a more equitable sharing of the wealth of the country but in striving to obtain it we have to recognize that destruction of incentive is no sure way to achieve the objective.

Longevity Of Grandparents

Ottawa Journal

One of the many joys in a child's life are his grandparents. Not every youngster has the good fortune of having them but there are heartening statistics from the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company that the numbers who do is much higher today than half a century ago. A typical child of 10 now likely in more than 19 out of 20 cases to have at least one grandparent living whereas 50 years ago this was so for 16 out of 20 children. By the year 1990 the chances of a child having at least two grandparents living will increased from 2 in 5 in 1920 to about 3 in 4 in 1970. The probability of a 10-year-old having at least three living grandparents has increased from 1 in 10 to about 1 in 3. The likelihood of having all four living on a child's 10th birthday is now about 1 in 14 compared to only 1 in 90 in 1920.

The UN attempted to meet the demand five years later with a partition proposal, but the issue was not settled until an Arab-Israeli war after the British withdrawal.

Diseased Potatoes Cause Deformities

OTTAWA (CP) — Four or five babies out of every 1,000 in Quebec and the Maritimes are born with head or spine defects related to the mother having eaten diseased potatoes early in her pregnancy, a British doctor said Wednesday.

More than half of these babies are born dead.

Dr. James H. Renwick, an expert in human genetics and birth defects at the London School of Medicine and Tropical Medicine, said outbreaks of anencephaly and spina bifida show definite relationships to the geographic and time incidence of potato blight epidemics.

"These potato babies are as preventable as thalidomide babies," he said. "Women should be warned to eat only healthy potatoes."

Dr. Renwick was in Ottawa to describe his findings to health department officials following publication of his studies in British science and medical journals. He is meeting members of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration today in Washington.

The relationship between the deformed babies and diseased potatoes has been shown in several studies in many countries.

Studies of world statistics cover the number of deformed babies rises about 18 months after outbreaks of potato blight with more deformed babies born in areas where blight is most common. These include areas of humid conditions, such as Ireland, the Eastern U.S.—particularly Maine — New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Quebec.

Anencephaly, a failure in the formation of the skull, and spina bifida, a failure in the formation of the lower spinal cord and column, affect thousands of babies each year—and might be prevented by better standards of potato grading, Dr. Renwick said.

He is not against using potatoes in the diet, but said any that are discared or damaged—those discolored or bruised and cut—should be discarded.

Info Cananda Men Won't Be Jobless

OTTAWA (CP) — The 530 employees of Information Canada would not join the unemployment lines under a Conservative government, an aide to Robert Stanfield indicated Wednesday.

One of Mr. Stanfield's pledges before Monday's election was to abolish Information Canada if he became prime minister. With the largest number of seats in the Commons, he now has a chance to gain that title.

The aide said that whatever is done to Information Canada will be done "in a humane manner," suggesting that the employees would be transferred to other civil service departments if they wanted.

But, he said the specific steps for dismantling the young agency have not been considered by Mr. Stanfield or other top Conservatives. With problems to face ranging from the economy to foreign affairs, Information Canada appeared to rank low among Conservative priorities.

NDP Seen In Peril

OTTAWA (CP) — A veteran New Democrat who has lived with several provincial and federal minority governments say NDP Leader David Lewis will have to guard against mistakes with the balance of power he holds as a result of Monday's election.

Harold Winch, retiring after 39 years in elective office, said Mr. Lewis will have to exercise common sense to achieve his party's aims without shoving too hard and too fast.

He said any party that forces an election too soon will face adverse reaction and anyone that forces a new election at this time will face disaster.

At the same time anybody who attempted to use his balance of power in a minority government situation for political or parliamentary blackmail would be committing political suicide.

"I'm quite certain that our members and our party have more sense than to deliberately court a breakdown of the parliamentary system because we happen to have a minority government," he added.

Ann Landers

Live as Messily as You Please

Dear Ann: My son is 38, married and lives in another city. I get two weeks vacation a year and for the past several years I've gone to visit him. I do not stay in his apartment, however. I have a brother in that city, who wants me to stay with him.

The problem I am writing about is making me sick. My son's apartment is so filthy I can't describe it. When I tell you he has six-month-old magazines and papers stacked up you can believe it. I don't see how a person can live in such filth. Apple cores, banana peels, beer bottles, dried out pizza, clothes hanging on the arms of chairs, on door knobs, on the floor.

On my last visit my son asked me not to clean his apartment because he "knows where everything is." He said the last time I cleaned up place he couldn't find some bills and important papers.

Well, I just couldn't stand the mess so I went to work and tidied the place up. When he came home he was furious. The next day he would not answer the door for me or even come to the phone to speak to me on the phone. When I left town he didn't even say goodbye. What did I do that was so wrong? How can I reestablish communication without crawling back on my hands and knees?—Southern Mother

Dear Mother: My advice is to leave your son alone for a few months, then write to him about an unrelated matter. Make no reference to the unfortunate incident.

What you did "wrong" was to ignore his request that you leave his apartment as it was. A 38-year-old man has the right to live as he pleases. Next time stay out of his apartment. Ask him to meet you at your brother's place. What you don't see won't bother you.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a guy 19. My girl is 18. She's a slinky dish and has her head together but when it comes to pucker power she registers zero. To put it bluntly, kissing her is like kissing a cement wall.

I don't want to hurt her feelings so I pretend I'm being sent. Maybe if you print this in your column she'll take the hint. —Ocsalution Needs Resuscitation In Ohio

Dear Oz: That chick could use a little light instruction, Buster. Invite her to be a participant instead of a spectator. She'll get the message.

Dear Ann Landers: I noted with interest the letter from the college girl who got into the habit of hitch-hiking—and it was a great way to save money. She hitched from home to college for three years and nothing happened. In spite of warnings from her parents and friends. Then one night she got into a car with a middle-aged man who seemed pleasant and fatherly. He drove off to a side road and raped her.

Please tell your readers who are sure that nothing bad can happen to them, to carry a ballpoint pen when they hit the road. It will come in handy to jot down on an arm or leg the license number of the car. They will then be able to give the police a clue when they recite the horror story later.—J.B.

Dear J. B.: Thank you for a useful suggestion. A better one is not to get in the car in the first place.

Confidential to Needing A Lift For The Libido: Not always. In fact alcohol often works just the opposite. It removes the inhibitions, which can be helpful, but alcohol is a depressant and it can make sex impossible.

Wives of great men all remind us We can make ourselves sublime, If we part and leave behind us Policies paid up on time. — Bill Engel, in Farmer's Almanac 1972.

Many a true word is spoken in jest. Have you set your affairs in order? Have you completed your A E C Estate Guide?

Dear Doris: My husband has grown sideburns and a moustache. As soon as we walk into my mother-in-law's house she never fails to say, "Jack, shave off those stupid things; they look terrible." I have gotten to the point where I reply, "I like them."

My 13-year-old son went to her place for a holiday. His hair was long according to the conventional hair cuts, but not more than level with his ears. I thought it was rather becoming. But she made him get a haircut, gave him a diet of scripture: "A man is shamed by his long hair etc. etc."

When my small daughter wants her hair cut in a shag, it is a no-no. "Why doesn't she get a decent haircut?"

She is always commenting that she never gets out, yet she could get a ride downtown any day with her other son and take a taxi home. Taxi fare wouldn't even bend her. But she would rather complain that people don't come to see her.

Just how responsible should I feel? I certainly don't enjoy a visit, yet I am the one who makes sure we go to see her as after all she is my husband's mother — Makes Me Cross.

Dear Cross: I expect she thinks her modernity gives her a claim to fame. But her behavior is infamous.

See what you and your husband can do to get her invited to a Senior Citizens' club. She might come up against others in her age group whose youthful ideas would be good for her.

Explain to your young people that she is used to short hair and can't change. Help them to enjoy her good points and remind them that you and their dad are the ones who have the final say. But do keep up contact.

And let those who approach such age with closed minds open them up to the new world we are living in. Essential principles do not include niggling little remarks about other people's appearance.

Dear Doris: You were asking about my pen-pal husband. We wrote letters for two or three years, he in Alberta, I in Nova Scotia. I felt I knew him.

We met in a train station in Winnipeg on a Friday and got married in Calgary the following Wednesday. But I suddenly realized that it could have been disastrous, so I agree with you about pen-pal marriages.

He was a wonderful husband and father. He helped, washed, tended babies; where he took it, a sharp knife from a child months old he said, "Thank you". Always gentle, no scolding, no beatings. Never did object to anything I wanted to do.

He passed away in 1961 and I was left with a lovely wonderful family (even if I am their mother). — Maud.

Dear Maud: A happy ending! Was your correspondence the kind in which you really expressed yourself, so that it was possible to come to know a good deal about each other? Then when you set eyes on each other all you needed was to confirm your first impression.

Marriage has many ingredients, not the least of which is an ability to be gentle and kind and willing to adjust oneself to the needs of a loving partner. Choosing a mate is a gamble at the best of times.

(There's always something to do about what's troubling you. A letter to Doris, a Canadian social worker, is a step in the right direction. Write to her in care of this newspaper.)

Retirement Party Held

More than 75 family members and friends were present in honor of this special celebration.

A family gift of various selections of framed silk-screened locomotive engines from the early 1800's to the present were awarded to Mr. Guest.

Services will be at 11 a.m. and 7.30 p.m. A finside hour will follow the evening service. Rev. Black was a minister in Smiths Falls before entering Queen's. Everyone is welcome.

GIA Holds Fall Bazaar

The Grand International Auxiliary of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers held its fall tea and bazaar Oct. 26 in Engineers' Hall.

The guests were received by the president, Mrs. A. Fitzgerald and vice-president Mrs. J. Gallagher.

Pink carnations, flanked by tapers, centred the green cut-work tablecloth of the tea table. The tea service was presided over by Mrs. P. E. Kerr, Mrs. L. E. Grey, Mrs. C. Henley and Mrs. R. P. Orne.

Those serving were Mrs. H. Brenton, Mrs. M. Moran, Mrs. H. Thompson and Mrs. D. Pigeon. Kitchen convener was Mrs. G. Gulliver, assisted by Mrs. R. Turner and Mrs. J. McCormick.

The home baking table was convened by Mrs. D. Cook, assisted by Mrs. C. Guest. Mrs. A. VanSlone, assisted by Mrs. C. Kner, convened the miscellaneous table. Mrs. J. E. Kerr sold tickets on the hand crafted quilt, won by Mrs. W. Short of Belleville.

Mrs. A. Clarke was the treasurer at the door and the event was convened by Mrs. N. C. Fisher and Mrs. G. Gulliver.

Club Activities

WHITE CANE CLUB

Clyde Dawson with his accordion and his father with his guitar entertained with popular and classical numbers and conducted a sing-song.

Mrs. Maude Robins read an excerpt from the October newsletter describing a new syringe for blind diabetics. Although new to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind the syringe has been on sale in the United States for some time. An adequate supply of 40 and 80 unit syringes is available from the Homecraft Department of the CNIB for between $3 and $7.

An invitation was extended to club members to an entertainment by the choir of Albury Church Nov. 9.

Is It Christmas Yet?

Though there's no snow, a snowman came out to the Poinsettia Tea and Bazaar Wednesday afternoon. Accompanying him in carrying the Christmas theme was a miniature tree, and red poinsettia flower. Conveners at the bake table are Mrs. Blanche O'Neill and Mrs. Nora MacDonald.

Pupils Plan Yule Meal

FRANKFORD — The 62 pupils in the primary classes grade one and two of Frankford Elementary School will plan and buy the ingredients for their Christmas meal. The teachers, Miss Voteary and Miss Campbell are assisting.

A bake sale has been held already, for which each student brought money for the ingredients. There will be other small projects the children will have to raise the money before Christmas.

'Poinsettia' Theme Highlighted

The Poinsettia Tea and Bazaar presented Tuesday afternoon featured a petite walk of white Christmas trees decorated with red and gold trimmings, (This year's theme color for the Order of the White Sirine of Jerusalem.) Bordering this walkway were individual booths laden with various homemade articles, knick knacks, pastries, plants and toys for early Christmas shoppers at the Elk's Hall. The tea room was situated within the encircling tree path.

Guests were greeted at the door by Mrs. Dorothy Ellis, Worthy High Priestess and Mrs. Margaret Neyman, convener for the tea and bazaar. Lodge members from Belleville and other centres from Port Hope to Napanee attended this annual autumn tea and bazaar.

This is the 48th year for the Order of the White Sirine of Jerusalem to hold its autumn tea.

Various booths included were: Sweet Tooth, handled by Mrs. Helen Shorey; preserves, Mrs. Marguerite Henning; fancy work, Mrs. Jean Bell; bake table, Mrs. Kathryn Bushell and Mrs. Nora MacDonald; white elephant, Mrs. Gertrude Ellsworth; men's table, Adam Stalker and Douglas Ellis.

Mrs. Myrtle Cross and Mrs. Margaret Helson presided over the tea room. The colorful Christmas decorations and thematic designs were supplied by Mrs. Dorothy Jones.

Tea pourers were: Mrs. Leona Austin, Pearl Anderson, Ruby Vick, Dora Elvidge, Margaret Stalker, Molly Alderman, Mary Heams, Gertrude Ellsworth, Kay Bushell and Dorothy Ellis.

Mrs. Anne Combe was kitchen organizer.

Fashion Show Illustrates Simplicity in Sewing

A number of the outfits were part of the models own wardrobes which they had made. The remainder were supplied by the pattern company.

The popular new BAGGY pants worn with sleeveless long jackets appeared in a variety of plaids and plain materials. Judy Devring, Judy Killian, Marilyn Wells and Roxanne McGarvey modelled these outfits.

With the Christmas season in mind, a black velvet dress with see-through chiffon sleeves was fashioned by Mrs. Terry Bell: a white crimplene pant suit by Mrs. Robert Sanderson, a floor length shirtwaist dress with side slit modelled by Mrs. Jack Fluke and the Kelly pants were shown by Mrs. Borden Bell. These outfits make ideal hostess fashions.

The Unisex look was shown in comfortable terry cloth lounging robes by Mrs. Keith Fenton and Gerry Bell. Gerry also modelled the latest in men's fashions.

Longer length daytime dresses were displayed by Mrs. Bill Nayler and Mrs. John Peters. Mrs. Walter Potts modelled a co-ordinated gaudy skirt and long lined jacket. Mrs. John Glover followed in a pink matching dress-and-cape outfit.

A display of children's clothes by Judy Barrons and Tommy Brownson proved that outfits for little people can be both practical and attractive and inexpensive, if their mothers can sew.

The bridal party, a final number on the program included Mrs. Keith Fenton, the bride in traditional white gown with her attendants Mary Feeney and Patsy Hamilton in floor length pastel gowns.

The fashion show was conceived by Mrs. Ron McGarvey and Mrs. John Peters. The stage decor was planned and executed by Mrs. Vaughan Glover and Mrs. Stan Reynolds.

Belleville Wesleyan Methodist Women's Missionary Society

The October meeting of the Wesleyan Methodist WMS was recently held in the vestry and Mrs. Nellie Greenwood presided.

An interesting sketch on the origin of the Americah Bible Society and individuals who contributed to the success of the organization was given by Mrs. Jean Locklin. Mrs. Hazel Blakely and four readers gave illustrations of the effectiveness of the book called the Bible in Mongolia, Japan, Islands in the South Pacific, El Salvador and Florida. Even now Chinese scholars are working on a translation in a common dialect for politication. Efforts by the Wesleyan denomination in the Scripture printing and distribution fields in Colombia, South America and in the Phillipines were explained.

Mrs. Helen Spearman led the singing and gave the treasurer's report, acknowledging gifts of over $600 in the past quarter. The reading course secretary, Mrs. Vivian Trotter presented awards covering the past quadrennium. The work committee reported seven barrels of used clothing presenting on hand and ready for shipment to needy areas in Northern Ontario.

Mrs. Eileen Blakely gave the devotions and the theme song for the year "The world is reaching out" was taught by Mrs. Ruth Irish. Mrs. Eileen Blakely rendered a solo.

The correspondence secretary Nora Elliott read letters from Cheryl Sullivan and Bertha Major in Sierra Leone and another letter was read from Kingsley Ridgway in Australia.

READ CWL

A mass for the members of St. Charles Boromeo's Catholic Women's League preceded the October meeting in St. Mary's School.

Guest speaker, introduced by Mrs. Vince McDermott, was Sister Anna Coffey, a native of Reed. Sister Coffey spoke on liturgical music and offered her help to choir members in learning new and more meaningful hymns. Miss Rosemary Phleffer presented Sister Coffey with a gift.

Women's Institutes

CARMEL WI

Mrs. Lyle Bradshaw was hostess for the October meeting of Carmel Women's Institute with 12 members and two visitors in attendance.

Mrs. H. Pound, convener for the education and cultural activities program, introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Edna Henderson, who gave an informative talk on her hobby-painting. Mrs. Henderson started her hobby as a result of a visit to an art show at the library. She took art lessons for four years and showed her audience samples of her work. The guest speaker also noted the importance of framing.

A question and answer period followed after which Mrs. D. Martin thanked Mrs. Henderson and presented her with a gift.

Mrs. J. Lucas presided over the meeting. Mrs. H. Elliot gave a report on a district she had attended. The president reminded members of a tour of Brooke Bond on Nov. 15.

Mrs. S. Homan, curator for Tweedsmuir Book asked members to begin a house log.

Biscuit Meal

READING, England (CP) — A biscuit a day as a staple diet has been recommended by an Oxford University nutrition expert, Prof. Hugh Sinclair. Addressing a food symposium in Berkshire, Sinclair suggested that "enough knowledge has been found to incorporate into a biscuit the daily quantity of nutrients known to be essential to man." Sinclair added that man's present diet "probably accounted for our generally unhealthy rate" and said that fatty foods can lead to coronaries and cancer.

Old Warriors

LEICESTER, England (CP) — Police, called to the scene of a street fight when sisters Flo and May Cook had a dispute outside a supermarket in this Midland city, were astonished to find when they arrived to break it up that Flo and May were both over 80. Flo, who is usually confined to her bed, said later: "I don't know what all the fuss was about. We were simply having a set-to."

Urged to Protest

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary's mayor, Rod Sykes, criticized the provincial government for its refusal to approve a law faculty for the University of Calgary. "The real issue," he said, "is an arbitrary attempt to downgrade the University of Calgary—to return it to a branch of the University of Alberta. Calgarians should get up on their hind legs and fight this injustice."

You're probably losing 20% a year in interest on your savings account.

Most savings accounts pay you only 4% interest on your minimum monthly balance. Guaranty Trust pays 5%.

That means for every $1,000 in your savings account you're losing over $10 a year in interest.

There's just one other difference between a Guaranty Trust savings account and other savings accounts. Until November 30, Guaranty Trust will pay you a full month's interest no matter what day of the month you open up your savings account as long as you leave the money with us for 90 days.

Even if you open your account on the last day of the month, you still get paid 5% interest for the whole month.

That way you don't lose one cent of interest by moving your savings account to Guaranty Trust.

What is more, you don't even have to come in to Guaranty Trust to open up a savings account. Just give us a phone call and we'll take care of everything for you by mail.

Quebec Newspapers Analyse Election

MONTREAL (CP) — Two differing societies . . . French power . . . English backlash . . . language . . . more losers than winners . . . economic problems . . . unemployment . . . separatism.

These are some of the themes of French-language newspaper editorials analysing Monday's federal election in which English Canada voted largely Conservative while French-Canada went largely Liberal.

One editorial writer says English-Canada pulled the rug from under Pierre Elliot Trudeau, the Liberal prime minister, at the time he seemed to be gaining ground against separatism in Quebec.

Unlike English practice, editorials in French-language newspapers are customarily signed by their authors—and, in this case, the reader can almost sense the shudders felt by some writers as they realized Canada had elected a minority government for the fifth time in 15 years.

Marcel Gingras comments in Le Droit, Ottawa, however:

"The history of recent years having shown us that the taste of suicide is not popular among politicians, we can hope for several months of respite before a new election and several months of very sane administration. . . ."

Though the editorials speak of English-Canadian reaction against French power in Ottawa as represented by Mr. Trudeau and prominent Quebec ministers, they also generally portray Robert L. Stanfield, Progressive Conservative leader, as a friend of French-Canada, sensitive to Quebec problems.

It is noted that the Conservatives elected only two members in Quebec—compared with 56 Liberals—and questions are raised about Claude Wagner, the 47-year-old former provincial Liberal justice minister who resigned as a Montreal judge and led the Quebec PC campaign.

"It seems more and more that the choice of Claude Wagner was an important tactical error and may be a decisive factor. . . ." says La Tribune, Sherbrooke, Que.

The personality of Mr. Trudeau, the glamorous figure of 1968, is contrasted with the comparatively austere prime minister of the recent campaign. And today's social climate is contrasted with the euphoria following Expo 67 and the feeling of urgency caused by reports of the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism.

Claude Ryan writes in Le Devoir, Montreal, that various factors including "the arrogance and technocratic naiveté of the Trudeau Government will be invoked to explain the election but none of these go to the root of the problem.

"If one wishes to get to the bottom of it, the explanation must . . . be found in the reality of the two societies which always come out in times of crisis and which Mr. Trudeau has been firm in denying for the last four years. . . . Mr. Stanfield, if called upon to govern, will need a boundless readiness to face the Quebec challenge. If he accepted to return to the priorities of the 60s, it could be a more important step in the search for a durable solution than the too stiff option for the narrow means of bilingualism, and the extremely fragile means of "French Power."

Jean Pellerin, La Presse, Montreal: "One can say that the Trudeau team constrained anglophones to show more accommodation toward Quebec, and the middle class to show more generosity to the poor class. As underlined by Gerard Pelletier, these were not easy and popular initiatives. . . . Perhaps Mr. Trudeau is also a victim of his style, as well as of the tempo of reform put into effect. In the eyes of certain intellectuals, this style and tempo seem too slow, yet they are too fast for the majority."

Clement Brown, Montreal Matin: "This rending the country along linguistic lines threatens to favor separatist leader Rene Levesque and cause him to say English-and French-speaking Canadians will never get along. It is not as simple as that but the problem remains serious . . . How is the impasse to be resolved? Mr. Trudeau and Mr. Stanfield will need all the wisdom in the world to prevent the situation deteriorating to the point of confirming such a division."

Trenton Clerk in Group Toronto Man Heads Police Force Review

TORONTO (CP) — Hugh A. Crothers, 36, a Toronto businessman, has been named to head an 18-member study team to undertake the first major review of police forces in Ontario in more than a decade.

Solicitor-General John Yaremko, who first announced the review last May 4 in the legislature, Wednesday released the names of the committee members which include a woman lawyer, business executives, policemen, two aldermen, two provincial civil servants and a judge.

Toronto lawyer Arthur Maloney will act as legal counsel for the committee which is to begin immediately to examine the extent and nature of policing needs in the 1970s. Public meetings are to be held across the province.

Mr. Yaremko said major advances in recent years in law enforcement have made such a review necessary.

The members are E. B. Hale, Kitchener, and J. L. McIntyre, Sault Ste. Marie, both business executives; Marva M. Vermeulen, Toronto, and Val Swain, Kingston, both lawyers; S. G. Isserstedt, Toronto; Ormond DesLauriers, Ottawa high school principal; A. J. Piansoi, Copper Cliff; Allan Masson, Oakville, and William Archer, Toronto, both aldermen; O.W. Larry, Trenton town clerk; Barrie police Chief Edward Tschirhart; D. F. MacDonald of Barrie; Constable Sydney Brown, president of the Police Association of Ontario; E. M. Pollock and J. R. Pierrard, both civil servants J. L. Erskine, chief superintendent of the Ontario Provincial Police, and Judge T. J. Graham.

Cabinet Minister's Memories

McNie Recalls Life Before Unions Came

TORONTO (CP) — There's a bag of money in Jack McNie's life that tells something of the forces that motivate Ontario's new minister of colleges and universities.

Mr. McNie, 52, was raised in an industrial district of Toronto, one of three children of a proud, fiercely-independent factory worker. The average wage in those days was $6 to $7 a week, and when his father died, the family was left without means.

"He was a victim of the paternalism that characterized so many of the old companies before the unions came in," the new minister recalled in an interview.

"There was no pension, no benefits of any description. All we got was a bag of money that the factory employees collected among themselves and brought to us to see us through.

The experience also taught him a lesson in self-reliance because, while the times were tough, the neighborhood families fought to retain their independence.

"All they had was pride that they hadn't gone on relief."

As a successful, independent businessman, Jack D. McNie exemplifies the virtue of doing for yourself.

Most of he 16 credits he has piled up for his arts degree—he needs only one more—came through night university extension courses, completed while he built up his business and kept active in politics.

As to his new cabinet post, he brings another experience that taughs him the injustice of over-crowded classrooms.

That occurred after he returned from the war to enter a University of Toronto crowded with war veterans and high school graduates.

JACK McNIE

"It was just not very satisfying. There were 500 to 600 in the class. It was totally impersonal. Teachers just weren't able to cope.

"That's why I have every sympathy with kids who are in those kind of classes today in university."

Mr. McNie is currently rearranging his business interests to comply with guidelines on conflict of interest laid down recently by Premier William Davis. This means divesting himself of an active role in Russell T. Kelley Co., the lucrative Hamilton advertising company he purchased while a member of the firm's staff.

Modest, unassuming, basically a backrooms politician until his entry last fall to the legislature as the new member for Hamilton West, Mr. McNie was modest as cabinet material from the start.

He was one of four freshmen MPPs named to the cabinet this fall, and was co-ordinator prior to his election, of convention arrangements for the campaign that led to the selection of Mr. Davis as party leader.

Don't look at it as a stereo.

Nobody else offers Dolcraft cabinetry in a wide range of stylings, from the sublime to the meticulous.

We have another reason for choosing Electrohome stereo. And that's what you can do with it after you get it home.

For a start, you can add an optional cassette or 8-track tape deck. With the cassette unit you can record baby's first "da-da"..., Aunt Rose's birthday party..., or your niece's violin solo.

With the 8-track unit, you can enjoy the same tapes you enjoy in your car's tape deck. But in the comfort and safety of your own living room. Both are custom-fitted for any Electrohome stereo console.

Share the joy.

And why restrict that great Electrohome stereo performance to one room? With a set of Electrohome extension speakers, you can groove to the Rolling Stones in the rec room.

Or Cat Stevens in the kitchen.

Or Brahms in the bedroom.

(You devil you!)

There are seven Electrohome extension speaker models in all, each perfectly matched to any Electrohome stereo console.

Of course, Electrohome is still the only stereo that offers Satellite Sound. Which means you place the Electrohome stereo console where it looks best.

And the Satellite speakers where they sound best. Voila! The best of both worlds.

There's even an Electrohome accessory that converts your living room into a concert hall. Acoustically speaking, that is. It's called Environment and when describing its realistic effect, words fail us. Hear a demonstration at your Electrohome dealer.

Best of all, you can add any of these Electrohome stereo accessories any time you wish. Even install them yourself in minutes.

So on top of Electrohome's good looks and great sound, you get to enjoy the opportunity of practically custom-designing your own home stereo system. As if we didn't have enough advantages already.

Globe Says Firm Gave PCs $50,000

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says Fidinam (Ontario) Ltd., a Toronto-based investment company, donated $50,000 to the Ontario Progressive Conservative party last year nearly a month after the Ontario cabinet approved a property deal between the company and the Workmen's Compensation Board.

P. A. Saunderson, president of Fidinam, said the donation was made but a Telex message relating the donation to the deal was an error made by a company official.

The newspaper, in a copyright story, says the message making the connection was part of a Telex exchange between Fidinam and its Swiss parent company Nov. 23, 1971.

The newspaper says the first message was a query from the Swiss office asking for an explanation of "a cheque issued to Mr Kelly July 23 for $50,000."

It says the second was an answer over the name of Betty McDonald, Fidinam (Ontario's) secretary treasurer, saying the cheque was a "political donation related to UCP—WCB."

The newspaper says the exchange refers to a deal by which the board agreed to become a major tenant of Fidinam's Upper Canada Place development and to lend $15 million—at 10 per cent—in board trust funds toward its construction.

Mr. Saunderson said there was no connection of any kind between the donation and Upper Canada Place.

He said Miss McDonald had answered the query from Switzerland incorrectly.

Miss McDonald said: "I agree it was a very significant error. It was very stupid."

Pickering Expropriation Will Commence in 1973

TORONTO (CP) — Harry Mitchell, who is in charge of the Ontario government's land acquisition program for the new city of North Pickering, said Wednesday that expropriation procedures would likely be launched in the new year.

He said the cabinet has not set a date to start the proceedings.

Open market land buying in the area northeast of Toronto has slowed down since provincial negotiators picked up 2,500 acres in the eight weeks following July 1. The land purchased is about 10 per cent of that needed for the proposed new city of 200,000 people.

Mr. Mitchell said the land acquisition program is "coming along right on schedule."

The schedule calls for the province to have 25 per cent of the acreage by the end of the year. Another 8,000 acres was to be acquired by the first half of next year and the third 25 per cent by the end of 1973.

Opponents of the planned community and the adjacent airport blame low prices and pressure tactics for the drying up of sales.

Court's Load Too Heavy

TORONTO (CP) — Chief Justice George Gale of the Ontario Court of Appeal said Wednesday the court is "in trouble" because of an unprecedented workload.

"It has become reasonably clear that we are not able to give a sufficient measure of consideration to some of the cases before us," he said. "We simply do not have the time."

No Quebec Backlash Is Seen by Kierans

MONTREAL (CP) — The set-back suffered Monday by the Trudeau government signifies a rejection of Liberal economic policies and not a backlash against Quebec, Eric Kierans, former Trudeau cabinet minister, said Wednesday night.

Interviewed on a local CBC public affairs program, the former postmaster-general and minister of communications said that in terms of economic reform "these people just didn't deliver the goods."

Besides the Liberal' a poor economic showing, there were other regional concerns that broke the party's hold on the country, Mr. Kierans said.

In Ontario, for instance, the Liberals held a total of 63 seats going into the election, their best score ever in that province. In Alberta, businessmen opposed Prime Minister Trudeau because of the white paper on taxation.

"What they don't like in Alberta is taxes. Not high taxes, just taxes," said Mr. Kierans. "Everybody in Alberta wants to be an instant millionaire."

"There was bound to be a swing back," said Mr. Kierans, especially as Conservative Premier William Davis had his entire provincial "machine" out in the field behind Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield.

Only in Ottawa did the Liberals lose two seats because of the language issue, said Mr. Kierans. Civil servants were unified in their resentment of language policies which had suddenly changed the rules by which they played their careers.

Most Manitoba and Saskatchewan voters, already hostile to the Liberals, simply swung from NDP to Progressive Conservative at the golden promises of Leader Robert Stanfield, he said.

ERIC KIERANS

Churchman Sees Time When Revolt Justified

TORONTO (CP) — A South African churchman, who was imprisoned under that country's terrorism act, predicts that a time will come when ethical conditions would justify participating in a political revolution there.

Very Rev. Gonville ffrench-Beytagh, former dean of the Anglican cathedral in Johannesburg, told a news conference Wednesday that conditions which would justify a Christian's taking part in political revolution do not exist yet.

"But there will come a time when they will, and when they do, I could with perfect integrity take part," he said.

Dean ffrench-Beytagh said a Christian cannot justifiably join or plan political revolution unless there is a very high chance of success, the revolution will be short lived, work less harm than the regime in power and the new regime will be more just than the old one.

Listing numerous forms of discrimination against South Africa's black population, he said he was doubtful if the conditions for revolution would ever exist within the country.

"But from without—pressures could be brought to bear on South Africa.

"If Britain would stop selling helicopters to South Africa, political action would be one stage nearer," he said.

The dean was arrested Jan. 20, 1971 and held in solitary confinement by the South African secret police. He was finally tried under the terrorism act and was accused of inciting violent revolution.

During his trial, he was accused of "being party to commission acts of sabotage."

"I prophesied violence: I did not advocate it," he said Wednesday.

Training Director Appointed

PICTON (Staff) — Peterborough man awakened by a town policeman as he lay sleeping beneath a boat at the rear of Rev. William McDowell's 110 King Street residence, will be spending the next little while in more comfortable quarters.

In Trenton provincial court Wednesday, Wilfred Calvin Smith, 24, pleaded guilty to break, enter and theft, and was sentenced to four months in jail by Judge R. C. Jackson.

Smith entered a basement window of the McDowell home, Oct. 28, court was told and made off with a quantity of frozen meat, plus a blanket. However, instead of making good his escape, he set down his load at the rear entrance to the minister's home, curled up beneath an overturned boat and went to sleep.

West Hill Building Booming

A concerted residential building boom is under way this fall in the Palmer Gardens area east of Centennial Secondary School, on hitherto vacant property south of Bridge Street.

Since last spring Maurice H. Bollins Construction Ltd. has been building better class single family residential units along Palmerston Avenue streets in the area.

Utility services and roadways for the area were installed several years ago when the first phase of the Palmer Heights development was under way.

During the late summer Rollins Construction also commenced erection of a number of town house units in the same general area.

And also this fall, construction has commenced on a 14-suite 14-storey apartment tower directly across from Centennial Secondary School. Construction of the apartment tower is by Wenlaw Developments Ltd. of Toronto.

Sleepy Thief Goes to Jail

Competition Keen at Art Show

By BRIAN AMARON
Staff Reporter

Of 122 paintings, sculptures, wall hangings and batiks entered, only 81 were approved for display by jurist Peter Kolisnyk, Cobourg professional painter.

One local artist brought four works to Tuesday's scrutinization cum adjudication, only to have them all rejected.

And the only sculpture to meet the judge's approval was a steel free form by well-known Trenton craftsman Tony Lassing.

But most significantly, the show's outstanding artist, Barbara Whelan of Belleville, had one of her paintings turned down.

"I entered three but only two were accepted," she said Tuesday at the official opening of the sixth annual exhibition.

The art work, most of which is for sale, will be on display at Corby Public Library until November 18.

Mrs. Whelan, who conducts a night art course at Belleville Collegiate Institute, returned to Belleville from Burlington last year.

She says she has painted all her life but has found her style changing somewhat in recent years.

"I used to do outdoor scenes on the spot. Now I find I'm more free if I paint from my sketches. For instance, if you see grass as green, it's hard not to paint it that way. But when you get home, it's easier to let your mind run."

Despite her willingness to spend more time in the studio, Mrs. Whelan's husband is still often confronted with that inimitable urge that spontaneously strikes artists.

Audrey Davies has contributed a mixed media work titled Life's Shambles which association president Meg Pedersen has described as "definitely batik designs.

Altogether 27 local artists are represented, although only four ventured outside the canvas medium.

Part of the reason is due to sporadic instruction available in the past few years to budding crafts enthusiasts, a situation that schools such as Loyalist College are attempting to remedy.

But ceramics, macrame and other newly popular techniques do not always meet the straight portal, says the association's definition of art and are therefore not eligible for competition.

"We'll show ceramics when they look like sculpture," said association president Mrs. Pedersen.

On hand to open the exhibit president of the Quinte Arts Council, and council vice-president Manfred Koechlin.

More than 125 persons attended the opening.

Sutton Will Run for Reeve

Ross Bengry, incumbent reeve of Hillier and warden of Prince Edward County is not expected to seek a council seat this term.

Mr. Sutton, who is manager of the Belleville chamber of commerce, was first elected to Hillier township council in 1970. He is a former member of the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce and is active in the Picton Rotary Club.

Hillier deputy-reeve Lewis Wright also has been rumored as being interested in making a bid for the office of reeve.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1972

Timing Cancels Artsmart

Conflicting schedules have forced cancellation of this area's first independent show of local arts and crafts.

Artsmart, set for Friday and Saturday at Christ Church, may be held next year, but only if local art promoters can establish a timetable beforehand.

Manfred Koechlin, vice-president of the co-ordinating Quinte Arts Council, says two rival attractions caused the cancellation.

"The Belleville Art Association didn't let us know in advance that they were holding their exhibition at this time," he said. The sixth annual showing on until Nov. 18 began Wednesday night at Corby Public Library.

Secondly, the annual conference of the Eastern Ontario Crafts Association was held last weekend at Loyalist College. Held in conjunction with Artsmart, it would have provided a widely - based audience for the area's top talents.

"I still think it's a valid idea," said Mr. Koechlin. "Maybe we'll hold it next year."

To prevent further mixups, the visual arts branch of the Arts Council is holding a meeting Nov. 14 to discuss exhibition planning.

Past meetings have dealt largely with next spring's August 73 sculpture symposium, particularly from point of view the visual arts display should be dazzling.

Talk is increasing about the possibility of a light show, arranged by Rednersville's Dotty Stokes.

But more importantly, says Mr. Koechlin, local artists are being encouraged to begin work now while there's still plenty of time.

"To get artists busy, you must get them involved early. Next year, we have a situation where the artists were showing the previous year's work because they didn't started early enough.

"Also," he added, we're getting additional artists involved, not just the old guard."

Hospital Plans Big Week

Belleville General Hospital will launch an education program later this month that the hospital's medical co-ordinator, Dr. R. M. Anderson, calls "unique in Canada".

Called Rehabilitation Week, the program begins Monday, Nov. 20 with lectures and discussions in the afternoon for physiotherapists, nurses and volunteers on the rehabilitation of diabetics. In the evening the lectures will be repeat ed at Education Hall for the general public.

Other days in the week will be devoted to talks on rehabilitation from other ailments and diseases, again with staff and volunteer lecturers in the afternoon and public discussions in the evening.

Tuesday will be devoted to arthritis, Wednesday to cardio vascular problems (strokes), Thursday to cancer, Friday to respiratory diseases.

He regretted the cancellation of Artsmart but said had last week's decision not been made only 60 per cent of the invited exhibits would have been available for the weekend show.

More than 35 Queen's University and BGH specialists will participate in Rehabilitation Week lectures.

Dr. Anderson explained today that, through the program, the hospital hopes to heighten public awareness of the fact "rehabilitation can be achieved in very successful ways.

"Many are not aware of what can be done," he said.

The hospital will follow the five days of particularized discussions of rehabilitation with a careers day, Saturday Nov. 25. Planned in conjunction with the Hastings County Board of Education, it will give students a chance to discuss a range of medical and para-medical professions with hospital and university staff.

It is on Nov. 25, too, that health minister Dr. R. T. Potter will officially open the new BGH administration wing.

Christmas Preview

Mrs. John Hayman and firefighter Ralph Boomhower got the annual Christmas Sharing project under way yesterday. The project puts donors in touch with families requiring a holiday dinner hamper, and the Belleville firemen provide toys for children, a long-term project of the firefighters that grows bigger every year.

Christmas Sharing Plan Getting Ready to Help

Christmas is next month!

And for a group of Belleville volunteers, every one of those days will be filled with Christmas Sharing — the annual campaign to see that no city family spends a cheerless holiday.

Christmas Sharing director this year is Mrs. John Hayman, and together with firefighter Ralph Boomhower, she initiated the campaign yesterday.

The Christmas Sharing plan unites those who need a helping hand and families with concern enough to spare time and money for those less fortunate than themselves.

The program is a clearing house of information. Donor families can call the Christmas Sharing people to obtain the name of a family and the details of the number of children and adults to be provided for. The donor family, or, church group, social organization or school, then buys the food for a Christmas dinner for the family, packs the hamper and delivers it Christmas Eve.

The firefighters work closely with Christmas Sharing, providing toys for all the children on the lists turned in at Christmas Sharing headquarters at the United Community Service office on William St.

Last year Christmas sharing and the Belleville firefighters provided for more than 400 families. Donating 1,600 or more children.

To kick off this year's campaign, letters have gone out to the individuals and organizations that have made the program a success in former years. These include service clubs, youth organizations, sororities, community groups, and classrooms of elementary and secondary school students.

Cost of a hamper for a family of six is about $20. The Christmas Sharing program can match families with other families ranging from two to 12 or more people and with single people.

Belleville firefighters are now launched on their annual campaign for toys — new and used. In former years the city firemen repaired used toys for distribution, but with an increasing number of toys now being made of plastic this is no longer always feasible. The firefighters still repair such items as bicycles, but have to raise money to buy new ones to meet the demand. Last year they raised $2,200 for the purpose.

The firemen are assisted by a group of Girl Guides who dress dolls and many outer community organizations that contribute toys. All toys, both new and used, can be left at either the Moira or Dundas St. firehalls.

The firefighters are now looking for a large hall where they can repair and store the toys and pack them for distribution at Christmas.

Any donor seeking a family to assist this Christmas should register as soon as possible by telephoning 962-5531.

Sidney Opts for Motorola

WALLBRIDGE (Staff) — Sidney township council is now on the point of approving an expenditure of $100,000 for the building of a new combined firehall and township garage but uncertainty remains as to how the job should be done.

The major question remaining after last night's council meeting here is whether Sidney should administer the construction itself through a winter works' program or whether a contracting firm should do the building.

Council has ruled out several sites it had been considering in favor of locating the 6,500 - sq. ft. structure on land to the east of the township offices on the Bell Line.

Moreover, there is now resolve among councillors that the firehall and garage should be built concurrently under one roof. During the fall, the prospect of completing the project in stages had been considered.

Architect Paul Wiegand was on hand here for last night's meeting to unveil his plans for the complex. The brick veneer firehall and garage features two bays for fire trucks, three for road vehicles.

Dividing the firehall and the road department garage would be offices, storage areas, a lunchroom and wash rooms.

Replying to a question from reeve Jack Bush, Wiegand said he expected the portion of the total cost consumed by wages would be one third or less.

Bush argued that by building the garage firehall through winter works' program a substantial saving may be realized. However, Wiegand cautioned that in doing the construction over the winter, materials would have to be kept warm and the walls not be allowed to freeze. He said this could bring substantial oil bills.

Councillor Glenn Meyers said it may be difficult to get people to work on the job, which is likely to be only a week on UIC, they are not going to come out here and shiver," he commented.

Council will seek specific details from government authorities on the application of winter works regrades to the garage - firehall project.

If councillor Meyers thinks it may be difficult to get the unemployed to help build the new municipal facility, Wiegand was also quick to point out it may be difficult to get a contractor to do the work at this time of the year, as many are fully engaged in other contract commitments.

The difficulties of winter building do not put off Bob reeve, who said "we can always hire a man to stay at night to heat the walls."

Council may decide as early as next week whether to follow the contract or winter works approach to the proposed construction. Much will depend on discussions with officials of the winter works program.

Meeting to Set Sod-turning Date

BATAWA — Officials of the Orange Order in Eastern Ontario next week meet to discuss the official starting date for a $ 56-unit senior citizens' housing project here.

Bernard Hollinger, Foxboro, president of Ontario East Trinangle Court — the development company incorporated for the project by all Eastern Ontario branches of the Orders — said today the meeting is expected to set a date for the sod - turning ceremony on the site.

The event would mark the start of construction of the first the lodge's plans in the first phase of the scheme — two one-storey buildings each with four housing units, estimated to cost $250,000.

This would be followed in the next few years with 10 more buildings and an administration centre.

Hollinger said it is hoped the first phase may be finished by mid - 1973.

Some problems still are being ironed out — notably that of water service. The order's developer would prefer obtaining water from the nearby Bata Industries, but there is concern about the cost of feeder pipes to the project.

Provincial government permission already has been received to link the first units to Batawa sewers.

Somebody Goofed

TRENTON (Staff) — Someone involved in drawing up property lines or assessing land values has been paying taxes and keeping up land that is actually town-owned, he disclosed.

Councillor Ketcheson said the property in question the northeast and northwest side of South Street at the intersection of Byron, have 12 to 15 foot stretches on the road edge, that are owned by the town.

He requested a sketch of the property, plus survey reports, be prepared for discussion at a future meeting of council.

In an interview Wednesday night following council meeting, Mr. Viesi said he has owned his property "since the war, either '42 or '43. I even have the receipts upon at times," he said.

Mr. Viesu couldn't say exactly how much he has paid in taxes, but admitted it "was quite a bit."

Councillor Ketcheson recommended the land "either be deeded to the owners, or they be reimbursed for taxes and expenses incurred.

Smokes Worth $1,500 Stolen

TRENTON (Staff) — On the edge of each package of cigarettes is a message proclaiming possible danger to a smoker's health.

Someone who broke into the Sidney Street Confectionery here some time before 8.10 a.m. Wednesday, should have quite a collection of these messages. Owner Les Ilie opened up shop and discovered 350 cartons of cigarettes had been stolen from his store, town police Detective - Sergeant Sid Vickers reports.

Theft, the value of which has been estimated at approximately $1,500, occurred after someone removed plywood from beside a front window air conditioner and broke through the window. Investigation continues.

More Condominiums

Pre-fabricated roof truss sections are seen being hoisted for new condominium housing units being constructed on O'Hara Drive near Centennial Secondary School by Maurice H. Rollins Construction. Construction of 30 units is underway on the west side of O'Hara with a like number planned for the east side of the street next year.

Formwork Insulation

Construction workers Joseph Bevy and Mike Fort inspect lightweight block of foam being used in wall con struction for the new bus terminal on Dundas Street East. The hollow foam blocks are laid up like brick and then filled with concrete to form w eight-bearing walls. The foam blocks are left in place to provide built-in in sulation and are covered outside with veneer brick and inside with finish w all covering.

Leafs Burst Buffalo Bubble

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Observers of the National Hockey League who wondered when the Buffalo bubble would burst got their answer Wednesday.

The Sabres from Buffalo, starting their third season in the NHL, were off to an unexpectedly fast start for an expansion team, holding with Montreal Canadiens the distinction of being the only undefeated teams in the NHL.

But Wednesday night Toronto Maple Leafs found their shooting range and,just as end to the Sabres' unbeaten streak, defeating them 7-1, the Sabres first loss in 11 games.

Their loss leaves the Canadiens as the only undefeated team in the NHL. The Canadiens went into Pittsburgh and handed the Penguins a 7-1 drubbing, the worst defeat ever suffered at home by the Penguins.

Meanwhile, Detroit Red Wings, who started the season with six successive victories, suffered their fourth straight loss as they were beaten 4-2 in Detroit by Atlanta Flames, one of the new entries in the NHL this season.

In other games Wednesday night, New York Rangers scored three goals in three minutes and four seconds in the second period to beat Chicago Black Hawks 5-2. St. Louis Blues and Minnesota played to a 3-3 tie and New York Islanders downed California Golden Seals 6-2.

In games tonight, the Canadiens play in Atlanta, Boston Bruins visit the Kings in Los Angeles and the Penguins play the Flyers in Philadelphia.

The Sabres' success has been due mainly to the scoring of the line of Gilbert Perreault, Richard Martin and Ren Robert and the hot goaltending of Roger Crozier and Dave Dryden.

But Wednesday night the Leafs held Martin and Robert scoreless although Perreault asked around and Leaf defencemen Joe Lundrigan of Corner Brook, Nfld. to score Buffalo's only goal.

The goal tied the score 1-1 in the first period and it came after Perreault and Martin, acting gathered in the puck, circled around Lundrigan and beat Toronto goalie Ron Low.

The Leafs had scored earlier when Errol Thompson, on a pass from Pierre Jarry and beat Crozier for his second goal of the season. It was the first of two goals for Thompson, a native of Summerside, P.E.I. playing his first full season in the NHL.

Dave Keon also had two goals for the Leafs who scored three second-period goals in less than five minutes.

Jacques Lemaire and Marc Tardif each scored two goals for the Canadiens against the Penguins, and goalie Ken Dryden stopped 31 shots to thwart nearly every threat the Penguins were able to make.

Lowell MacDonald of New Glasgow, N.S. scored for Pittsburgh in the second period on a power play.

The Wings, down 3-1 at the start of the third period, got a goal from Mickey Redmond at 57 seconds of the third period-and made repeated scoring threats after that, but Bouchard withstood the pressure.

Lew Morrison and Randy Manery, who once played for Detroit, scored for Atlanta, and John Stewart scored into an empty net in the final seconds of the game.

Blazers Burn Cheevers' Average

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Goalie Gerry Cheevers is one reason why Cleveland Crusaders are atop the East Division of the World Hockey Assoc. at last.

The former Boston Bruin net-minder in the National Hockey League had a 1.83 goals-allowed average going into Wednesday night's game against Philadelphia Blazers.

But the Blazers, in last place in the East, fired seven goals behind Cheevers Wednesday night to down the Crusaders 7-5.

In other games, Minnesota Fighting Saints, cellar dwellers in the West, shut out west Division leading Winnipeg Jets 3-0 and New England Whalers defeated Chicago Cougars 4-2. Philadelphia, with only one victory in its first nine games, got four goals from Danny Lawson and some spectacular goaltending from Marcel Paille to beat Cleveland.

Paille kicked out 42 shots and Lawson scored three of the Blazers' first four goals. Derek Sanderson also scored for Philadelphia, beating Cheevers, his old Boston team-mate, on a breakaway.

The seven goals allowed by Cheevers was the most scored against him this season. He had not given up more than three goals in any previous game.

Despite the loss, Cleveland remains in first place in the East with 15 points, four ahead of second-place Quebec Les Nordiques.

Goalie Mike Curran, a former United States Olympic hero, stopped 41 Winnipeg shots as the Fighting Saints shut out the Jets.

'The King' Alive in Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — The King is back in the Montreal Alouettes football picture.

He's not using his passing arm, but that right arm may still receive prominent attention because Jim (King) Corcoran is coming back in another capacity—that of a cheque signer.

"You all snickered when I left town and said I'd be back to buy the Alouettes, but here I am," Corcoran said in a telephone call from Washington.

He is expected here today or Friday.

"My backers and I have researched this very carefully and we are willing to make a good offer."

Corcoran, a former standout signal caller in the Atlantic Coast Football Conference, was signed by the Alouettes before the current season. He left before the season opener and following a rather hectic preseason performance against the Toronto Argonauts.

Curran kept the Saints in the game until Craig Falkner's goal, with five seconds left in the second period, put Minnesota in front. George Konik and Mike Alonych got the other Minnesota goals.

Kevin Ahearn scored two goals for New England as the Whalers whipped the Cougars. Ahearn, a former Boston college star, tied the score 2-2 late in the second period, and assisted on Tom Earl's third-period goal for New England. Then he wrapped up the victory with a backhander for his second goal of the game.

BCI Wins Sr. Soccer

BCI seniors took the measure of an old nemesis in the finals of Bay of Quinte COSSA soccer action Wednesday. The Collegians defeated Trenton 4-2 to win the Bay of Quinte Secondary School Senior Soccer Trophy.

Both the Collegians and Trenton were undefeated in league play and had battled to a 2-2 tie during the regular season.

BCI Collegians started the scoring off five minues deep in the first half, when a Trenton fullback obstructed BCI centre Charlie Nesterowski, earning Gary Donavan an indirect penalty kick. The kick bounced off a Trenton defender and into the net.

Seven minutes later, Trenton's Bob Maheux dropped the ball in front of the BCI net, where Jim McDonald beat goalie, Phil Seers for the 1-1 tie-up.

Midway through the first half, BCI's Nesterowski's throw-in was headed in by forward Dave van Vliet. Just before half-time, following a break by forwards van Vliet and Ken Downey, a Trenton defender, kicked it into the corner of his own net. Credit for the goal was given to Van Vliet. The half ended 3-1 in BCI's favor.

The second half was a fight for the ball, until 10 minutes left in the game, when van Vliet again scored on goalie Jeff Banks, earning for himself his third hat trick of the season. Trenton answered the goal two minutes later, Drew Knight scoring.

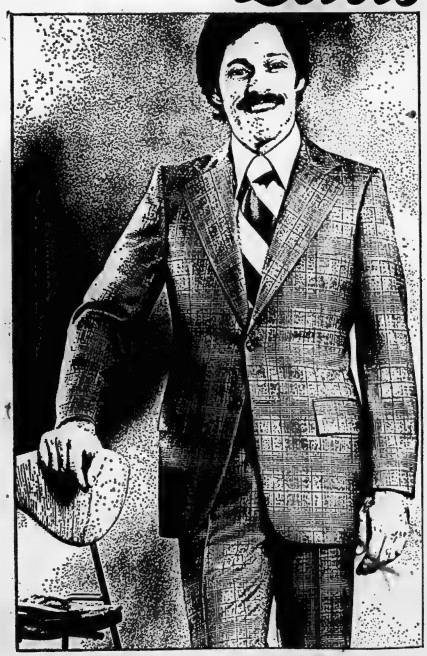
Palladini Pulverized

BCI's centre Charlie Nesterowski lost his balance and fell on Trenton's Joe Palladini just as Palladini got ball away to team member Steve Ormsby, in Bay of Quinte high school soccer final Wednesday. BCI won the league title by defeating Trenton 4-2.

Western Rolled, Imperials Rolling



Belleville Western Tire Juveniles were defeated last night 6-4 by Trenton. Belleville's goals came from Paul Ackerman, Peter Smrke, Kevin Joudwa, and Russ Herrington. Trenton beat Western Tire with tallies from Don Armstrong with two, Kelly Glover, Baker and Stutsky.

Belleville Blake Kerr Imperial All-stars last night defeated Cananoque Midgets of the Quinte - St. Lawrence League 6-2. Imperial goals came from Peter Crawford with two, Peter McBride, Mark McKay, Thompson.

Belleville Still Unbeaten

'Cats Tie Nats in Last Second

To the Belleville Bobcats it meant maintaining their unbeaten Toronto Metro Junior B record for this season as centre Wayne McGeachy tallied at 19.59 of the third period to earn his team a 4-4 split with the Toronto Young Nationals.

With only four seconds remaining to play, and Rick Meagher sitting out a rough-

Two Tries For COSSA Title

Bay of Quinte football teams will have twice as many chances to represent their area in the COSSA football finals this season.

Both winning and losing teams from Tuesday's league championships earned the Central Ontario championship.

Quinte Saints' senior champions will be on home grounds Friday when they face Bowmanville in a 2 p.m. contest while BCI's junior winners will face the Kawartha district champs in a 2.30 p.m. meeting at Belleville's Centennial Secondary School.

Moira's senior Trojans will be in Peterborough to face the Kawartha champions, while their juniors will travel to Oshawa for a 2.30 p.m. game with the Lake Ontario winners.

RICK MEAGHER

weak slap shot was deflected into the net by McGeachy, giving the Bobcats a 4-2 record to date.

The Bobcats outplayed the Nat's, firing 38 shots on their goalie, while Moore had a more peaceful evening with 31 shots in his direction.

In the first period, the lone goal scored came from Toronto's centre Doug Scilars at 1.32. The Bobcat's answered his ballic sweep—five points for Scilars' tally in the second, with the red light going on at 5.33 from an unassisted goal by Rick Meagher, and at 12.29 another Meagher goal, assisted by Wally Dainard. The second ended with Belleville leading 2-1

In the third, the Nat's regained their composure, with Barry Scully firing the first at 1.47 past Cat goalie Moore. At 12.35, Ken Holmes tied up the game 3-3 for the Cat's, but less than a minute later Nat Dwight Foster beat Moore with Toronto's final goal.

The the Belleville Bobcats mettle showed through, as they pulled the game from a defeat into a tie.

Carlton Takes Cy Young Award

NEW YORK (AP) — To the surprise of absolutely no one, Philadelphia's Steve Carlton has won the Cy Young Award as the best pitcher in the National League.

Carlton was the unanimous choice of the 24-man committee of baseball writers—two from each National League city—for the honor after turning in a remarkable 27-10 record for the last-place Phillies.

The lean left-hander, who accounted for 46 per cent of Philadelphia's 59 victories last season, is only the sixth unanimous selection in the 16-year history of the balloting and the first Phillie ever to win the award. He was the first man to win the award while pitching for a last-place team.

Runnerup was Pittsburgh's Steve Blass, who had 35 points. Ferguson Jenkins of Chicago Cubs, last year's Cy Young winner, was third with 23 points.

Carlton's 27 victories topped the majors and tied the National League record for a left-hander set by Hall of Famer Sandy Koufax. Koufax in 1963, 1965 and 1966, and Bob Gibson and Denny McLain, both in 1968, were the only previous unanimous Cy Young winners.

Whenever Carlton pitched, he filled Philadelphia's Veterans Stadium, providing the lone bright spot in an otherwise bleak season for the Phillies. And, ironically, they almost didn't have him.

Ferguson, Mavety Both Make Moves

Two familiar local names were making pro hockey moves last night, but only one of them needed a ticket.

by counting a goal and two assists in their 7-1 win over Buffalo last night. Larry Mavety, on the other hand, was moving in a more literal sense of the word after being dealt from the Los Angeles Sharks to the Philadelphia Blazers.

Ferguson counted a goal and two assists centring a line with Errol Thompson and Pierre Jarry. He scored his first NHL goal on a long shot from near centre ice that was mis-played by Roger Crozier, while assisting on two goals by Thompson, another Leaf rookie. Jarry also scored once as the unit was used on power plays during the second and third periods.

Mavety, who performed last season with Salt Lake City of the Western Hockey League was dealt to the Blazers for a future World Hockey Association draft choice. The big Belleville defenceman had counted a goal and an assists in two games for Los Angeles this season.

WHA PLAYERS ORGANIZE

TORONTO (CP) — A World Hockey Association players' association is in the planning stage, says Jerry Odrowski of Los Angeles Sharks, one of several representatives from the league's 12 clubs who met here this week to discuss setting up a player union. Main purpose of the meeting was to discuss what should lead the organization, but no decision was reached. Lawyer Alan Eagleson, executive director of the National Hockey League Players' Association, said he was approached but would not consider the job.

RIDERS AXE IMPORT

OTTAWA (CP) — Import tackle Art Laster has been placed on waivers and replaced on the Ottawa Rough Rider roster by offensive end Rhone Nixon, now recovered from a shoulder injury. Laster, used to spell off veteran lineman Moe Racine, "just wasn't in as good condition as the other guys on our club and I feel Nixon can contribute more offensively," coach Jack Gotta said Wednesday.

DEAL FOR DEFENCEMEN

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Fatherly Philadelphia Blazers of the World Hockey Association, with a 1-8 record, bolstered their weak defence Wednesday. They gave up centre Mike Rouleau, 28, and right winger Frank Golembrocky to Quebec for defenceman John Gravel, 28, and forward Brit Selby, 24, then immediately sent Selby to New England for defenceman Bob Brown, 22. They got two more defencemen, Roger Cote, 23, and Derek Harker, 21, from Alberta Oilers for future considerations.

VETERAN SQUEAKS BY

GOTEBORG, Sweden (AP) — John Newcombe, the No. 1 seed from Australia, was his second-round match in the $50,000 World Championship Tennis tournament Wednesday, but the winner of three Wimbledon titles had stood within two points of elimination by Dick Stockton, U.S. intercollegiate champion. Third-seeded Tom Okker of the Netherlands also advanced to the quarter-finals, as did Australians Allan Stone and unseeded Roger Taylor of Britain.

Cubs Name All-Star Trio

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Chicago Cubs captured three spots on the National League All-Star team selected by the players announced Wednesday.

In the American League, Chicago White Sox pl... players on that team, and those two players also won the American League stations as pitcher and player of the year.

Dick Allen was named the American League player of the year, and team-mate Wilbur Wood was the league's pitcher of the year.

In the National League, Billy Williams of the Cubs was the player of the year and Steve Carlton of Philadelphia Phillies pitcher of the year.

Knicks Hot

New York Knicks are going places and Philadelphia 76ers are going someplace else.

The Knicks continued their hot pace in the National Basketball Association by beating Kansas City-Omaha Kings 122-113 Wednesday night for their seventh straight victory.

New York's victory, fashioned behind the scoring of Walt Frazier, Dean Meminger and Earl Monroe, boosted the Knicks' record to 9-1 and moved them within a half-game of the idle Boston Celtics in the Atlantic Division.

While, stayed ice-cold by dropping a 108-104 decision to Houston Rockets for their 10th straight loss.

In the only other NBA game played Wednesday night, Detroit Pistons trimmed Seattle SuperSonics 118-106.

In the American Basketball Association, Indiana Pacers tripped Virginia Squires 120-109; San Diego Conquistadors downed Memphis Tams 107-101 and Utah Stars ripped Denver Rockets 122-113.

Ozark Named to Phillies

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Danny Ozark, the surprise sweepstakes winner in the Philadelphia Phillies managerial derby, says there's nothing wrong with the perennial last-place baseball team that proper attitude and fundamentals can't cure.

The 45-year-old Ozark, handed a two-year contract to manage the Phillies, said the team was lax in fundamentals and had a losing attitude. He told his first news conference here Wednesday night that the 1972 Phillies threw too many times to the wrong base, made too many wrong plays and stood at the plate taking too many third strikes.

Before Ozark described the Phillies as a team loaded with young talent that needs proper instruction to become a National League pennant contender, general manager Paul Owens said how the veteran Los Angeles Dodgers' minor league manager and coach got the job.

Owens said Ozark did not apply until last week. He said the report was correct that he had decided to hire Dave Bristol, the former Cincinnati and Milwaukee manager.

"... I did not know at that time that Danny Ozark would be available. He was not under consideration at the time of the World Series."

"Ozark has a background of a winning tradition, with the Los Angeles organization," Owens said. "He was the right-hand man of Walter Alston and we are sure he can carry on that tradition."

Ozark said his first job would be to select a coaching staff.

Ozark signed with the Dodgers in 1942, as a minor league first baseman. He never made the majors and later became a manager in the Dodgers' farm system. He was promoted to the Los Angeles coaching staff in 1965, and since has coached at first and third base.

Dead Heat At Frontenac

The judges ruled a dead heat in the fifth yesterday at Frontenac Downs, as two geldings Ace of Aces and Mr. Le May hit the wire racing nose-for-nose. In this rare racing event, Dbris Wheeler's Ace of Aces won its second of the year, while Mr. Le May chalked up his fourth win.

In the mile and a quarter featured ninth, Charlie Blasko's trotter Chance Hill took the race in a time of 2:46 2-5. Due to the reception of the feature, a 5-miler will be held Sunday afternoon. Post time for the card will be 1:45 p.m.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

FRIDAY, OCT. 27

Aries (March 21-April 19): People are touchy. Your utmost efforts at tact and subtlety barely suffice. Keep notes of any promises; you'll certainly be expected to keep them.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Timetables and schedules tend to confusion as everybody gets off his routine to listen to unusual news or attend personal crisis.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): In today's mixed conditions you may find a chance to close out a long-standing loose end.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Your estimate of situations is better than usual. Follow your own course as tactfully as conditions permit, waiting for nobody to join in or supply help.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Don't be dismayed to find friends grinding their own axes. Allow for all to indulge in moods, impermanent, games as you concentrate on being effective.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Whatever cause or person you help now becomes an associate later. For once, passing the buck is not a bad idea.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Failures of communication and co-operation bring crisis in which new and more efficient methods are inaugurated.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Personal matters thrive and you compete well. Make no casual or impulsive changes—you can't reverse them.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Career plans run ahead in accord with your planning. Marital or romantic situations develop challenge.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Authority backs you only as far as your work and views relate to practicality. Impatient behavior, power plays defeat their own purposes.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Speculation, rumors, adventure spring to the forefront of your thinking.

Risk in Wedding Even Third Cousin

By G. C. Thosteson, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I know you shouldn't (and sometimes by law cannot) marry your first cousin because similarity of genes would cause damage to children.

But does this hold true for second and third cousins? My cousin and I plan to marry but are hesitating until we've heard the facts. Could you help us?—S.A.D.

Marriage of cousins—first or otherwise—doesn't necessarily mean that children will be defective, but the risk is much higher.

Why? Because there are strongly. As an example, genes known as "recessive genes" which indicate a trait or characteristic of one sort or another that is minor and tends to be blotted out. Doubtless we all have them, but being "recessives" these traits tend to take a back seat and eventually disappear.

Tend to die out, that is, except if the same recessive gene is carried by both parents rather than just one, then the recessive genes reinforce each other.

If a potentially dangerous trait is involved, the baby, instead of having the trait in mild form, is likely to have it very severely.

As an example, cousins having a relatively mild eye disorder might have a baby with a severe eye disorder. You have seen children going blind from that particular circumstance.

You may ask: "But can't people have similar recessive genes even if they aren't cousins?" Yes, it can happen by chance, but it happens much more frequently with cousins, because they have similar ancestry. The closer the relationship, the greater the danger.

But can't good traits be reinforced? Yes, that can happen, too, but the danger is that undesirable traits (recessive genes) are not likely to be recognized ahead of time. Not recognized by the average person, that is. Experience shows it happens, and that is why so many states flatly forbid marriage of first cousins.

As the relationship becomes more remote (second or third cousins, or older kinds relatives) so does the risk of defective children become less likely. But since there is some common ancestry, some risk remains.

So what are you going to do about it? My suggestion is that you get some counseling from a clinic or centre that specializes in genetics. The number of such genetic counseling centres has grown considerably in recent years, principally in university or other large medical centres.

The question is so important to you that I suggest you consult such a centre. Your regular doctor either can tell you where the nearest one is or can find out for you.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Specifically what is a low-fat diet? I have been put on one by my doctor due to a gall bladder inflammation.—R.B.

It means exactly what it says—avoid fats in your food, because a cranky gall bladder can't be as helpful as it should be in digesting fats. So don't eat friend foods, trim fat off meat and eat lean, and use butter or oleo sparingly. Skim milk or two per cent milk has had much of the fat removed from it.

Farmers Concerned

EDMONTON (CP) — An Alberta government survey of methods of disposing animal waste recorded only a few instances of farmers deliberately pumping wastes into creeks. Brian West of Red Deer, chairman of the survey team, said a sampling of 600 farms showed "most farmers are quite concerned about pollution and many farmers feel there should be more controls on agricultural pollution."

Opening lead — queen of hearts.

"If the cards must be a certain way for you to make the contract, assume that they lie that way. If the cards must lie a certain way for your contract to be in danger, assume that they lie that way and take appropriate precautions).

These very sound words of advice appear in the book by Marshall Miles titled All Fifty-two Cards. The Columbia star illustrates the first part of the quotation by citing this deal where South, obviously a nut so far as using Blackwood is concerned, gets to six clubs.

When dummy comes down, it is plain to see that, barring a miracle, the slam will go down. The odds strongly favor losing a diamond and at least one heart.

But there is a chance of making the contract if the adverse cards are favorably divided. This possibility can exist in only one form — West must have precisely three spades in the king.

In line with this, south wins the heart with the ace, finesses the jack of spades, ruffs a spade, and cashes the A-K of trumps. When he then plays the ace of spades, favoring the king, he is able to discard his three heart losers on the spades and so make the slam. He clores only a diamond trick.

Note that you cannot divide the spades any other way and make the contract. Thus, it would not help to find either defender with the singleton or doubleton king, for you have to make four spade tricks to land the contract and nothing less will do the job.

I need what this contingency, South must shape his play to the only distribution that will allow the 2'am to be made. Nil desperandum!

Tomorrow: Bidding quiz.

The Big Hole

Situated in Kimberley, South Africa, is the largest crater ever made by man.

Known as the Big Hole, it is a mile wide and 1,300 feet deep and when in operation yielded 14.5 million carats of diamonds. It is now a dead mine and half-full of water. (CP Photo)

Greedy Hunters Threaten Moose

KENTVILLE, N.S. (CP) — The moose herd in Nova Scotia is being threatened by "uncontrolled greediness," the provincial forestry department says in a wildlife newsletter.

Biologists warn that the increase in illegal hunting may endanger the resource.

"With a limited resource such as our moose herd, this uncontrolled greediness of a few could lead to the end of the resource for us all," said an official.

A renewable resource which adds to its number each year might sustain a given but changing mortality indefinitely but "if that mortality is not controlled and exceeds the numbers added, it can eventually reduce the herd" to a useless level.

The moose is not the only threatened animal in the woodlands. The deer population is decreasing rapidly but not because of poachers.

"Highways, housing projects, industrial and commercial developments have grown, sometimes in areas which used to be deer habitat," officials said. The result is a dwindling home for the deer.

"Old farms, woodlots and young forests have grown up taking once abundant food sources out of reach. Stands of softwood have been cut down, removing shelter areas."

The department newsletter singled out two Nova Scotia companies which are helping the deer survive.

It said Scott Maritimes Paper Co. has its own deer habitat in Hants County and has planned others in co-operation with the department.

Nova Scotia Forest Industries Ltd. has included deer habitat improvement practices in its cutting programs, which while not giving economic advantage to the company "may represent definite gains to those of us who appreciate the deer resource," the department said.

Cremation Growing In Favor

SASKATOON (CP) — Cremation in Canada now is the choice of a minority. Of the 7,254 people who died in Saskatchewan last year, for example, only about 75 were cremated.

But "the more heavily populated the area, the more rapidly this type of service increases," said W. Arnold Edwards, a Saskatoon undertaker.

He said an international conference three years ago was told that 50 per cent of those who died in Great Britain are cremated.

In Canada, cremation figures went to 9,188 in 1970 from 4,537 in 1960.

Cremation, described by the Cremation Association of America as a "symbol of enlightenment and a challenge to thoughtful people," is "the tidiest and most final way of disposing of the dead," said Dr. W. G. Davidson, Saskatchewan epidemiologist and director of communicable disease control.

Ruth Andrusoff, public relations officer for The Memorial Society of Saskatchewan, said she considers it a practical attitude to cremate rather than bury the dead.

Mrs. Andrusoff cited several other reasons for cremation.

"Some people think of land wasted," she said.

"One comment I have heard most frequently . . . has to do with the idea of the body slowly decaying in the ground.

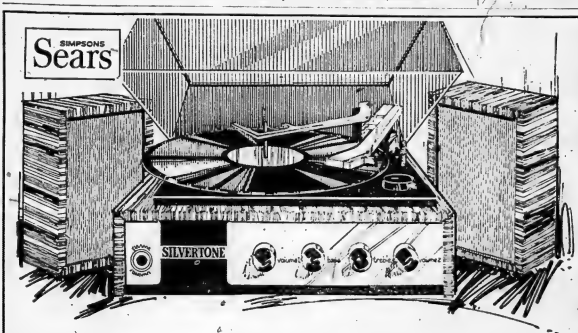
"It's a distasteful thought to people.

"Many people think in terms of claustrophobia underground, and a number of them have fears about being buried alive. Cremation takes care of that.

On the other hand, older people usually insist on the traditional burial in the earth, said Mrs. Andrusoff.

"And I run into a few people with hang-ups about fire.

"But oddly enough, people reluctant to be cremated or wanting their body to be present at the burial do it out of respect for the survivors."



Rev. Ken Wotherspoon of St. Martin's United Church said the United Church doesn't consider cremation any less sacred than burial.

Very Rev. E. J. Lyons, chancellor of the Roman Catholic diocese of Saskatoon, said: "There is room for cremation as long as it is ascertained the motivation does not proceed from antagonism to religion or from denial of Christian belief.

"But inhumation is the more reverent way."

Ecuador Suddenly Big Oil Producer

ESMERALDAS, Ecuador (AP) — Tankers drop anchor off this steamy tropical port to load the crude that suddenly has converted Ecuador into Latin America's second-largest producer of oil.

More than two dozen vessels have tied up at offshore loading buoys since Aug. 17, when the first shipment of 14,000 barrels of crude left aboard the Texaco Asscorites headed for a refinery in Panama.

The shipment was the climax of a five-year process which began with phenomenal oil discoveries in Ecuador's wild eastern jungle by a Texaco-Gulf consortium and continued with development work and construction of a 314-mile pipeline to bring the oil over the Andes Mountains to the coast.

Although the oil has just begun to flow, it already has made an impact on this country of six million people.

Gleaming modern office and apartment buildings are rising in Quito, the capital which lies 15 miles from the Equator at an altitude of 9,350 feet.

A newly constructed road now links Quito with Lago Agrio, site of the first oil discoveries. A bustling community of several thousand people, including oil workers and colonists, has grown up in what was virgin jungle only five years ago.

Texaco-Gulf and a-score of U.S. oil companies which followed them into the eastern jungle will have spent nearly $400 million by the end of this year. Most of the money has been spent for importation of equipment and material, but a sizable amount has gone into the pockets of Ecuadorian workers.

Working in difficult jungle terrain and hampered by tropical rain, snakes and insects, Texaco, the operating partner, has drilled 106 wells in northeastern Ecuador. Of the 74 tested so far, 8 reports, only four were dry.

Exploration work by the companies which followed Texaco-Gulf has been somewhat disappointing so far, causing one oil man to comment: "There's an awful lot of oil in that jungle but this doesn't look as though it will be quite the bonanza everyone expected a year or so ago."

Attention currently centers on negotiations between Texaco-Gulf and Ecuador's military government, which will decide how oil earnings will be split.

Equal concern is being shown by Ecuadorians over government plans, still vague, for the spending of Ecuador's share of oil earnings, due to total between $120 million and $130 million annually by next year when the trans-Andean pipeline is expected to be pumping 250,000 barrels a day from Lago Agrio to the terminal near Esmeraldas.

The military leaders have decreed that all oil contracts must conform to a strict by-direcarbons law irnted by a former president in October, 1971. Problems revolve around requirements that companies return approximately half their concession acreage by June 6, tax payments and establishment of a stable reference price upon which royalty payments will be based.

Safety Car

Automatic safety belts help protect occupants of Volkswagen's Experimental Safety Vehicle. When the engine starts shoulder belt moves backward, locking for protection. In any impact over 15 mph shoulder belt tightens and knee belt is deployed from behind seam in knee bat. Force limiters in the belts help occupants to "ride out" collision. (CP Photo)

Beheading Outdated Say Judges

LONDON (CP) — "Beheading having long since fallen into disuse as a method of execution, the section is obsolete," the bewigged justices of England and Scotland solemnly concluded.

Burdened with the task of plucking out obsolete laws from Britain's ancient and weighty statutes, the joint law commissioners propose the repeal of 258 specific acts, including a section of the 12th-year-old treason law which deals with beheading.

Not that Britain is about to bring back capital punishment —far from it. The law commissioners, noting that the 1814 act empowered the king to behead rather than hang treacherous subjects, simply observed that beheading is no longer in use. So that section can be ditched safely.

For seven years the law commissioners inspected the statute books, going back as far as the 13th century. Each decision was weighed with legal exactitude, brushing aside the political storms that changed the course of history.

The tax act of 1778, relic of the American war of independence, renounced the right of Crown and Parliament to impose taxes on North American colonists. This act, the commissioners simply noted, "is no longer of practical utility."

Proposed for removal also are parts of the 1774 law which gave George III the power to tax Quebec innkeepers and entertainment houses £1 16 shillings a year.

A significant reflection of the industrial revolution is the conclusion that the 1967 law regulating horse-drawn vehicles, tramcars and trolley vehicles in London is no longer required.

"These forms of public transport no longer exist in London," the commissioners observed.

In the same way they decided there is no further need for certain provisions dealing with restrictions on the movement of carts, carriages and livestock during the hours of divine service on Sundays.

With the practice of floating timber having fallen into disuse, th ey considered that an 1813 Scottish law regulating the floating to prevent bridge damage is obsolete. And a bit concerned that practices may change, the commissioners cautiously added: "If it were ever revived, the Scottish law of reparation is adequate to deal with any problems of damage to bridges which might result."

Dam Puts B.C. Town On Map

HUDSON HOPE, B.C. (CP) — The W. A. C. Bennett dam has put this northern Peace River community on the map as both a tourist attraction and power producer.

Last year 34,000 tourists visited the dam site and the Gordon M. Shrum generating station. B.C. Hydro provides free tours of the Peace River project seven days a week during the summer months.

Asians Leaving Uganda Fewer Than Estimated

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of Asians who must leave Uganda by the Nov. 8 deadline set by President Idi Amin has been overestimated and Canada as "winding down" operations there.

"The fact is that the supply of people who must leave the country has nearly dried up," W. G. Clark, chief of the immigration department's foreign service branch, said Wednesday.

"Considering estimates that ranged from 55,000 to as high as 85,000 Asians, we're winding to see the lower figure as more realistic."

He was commenting on recent reports from Uganda that the flow of Asians seeking entry to Canada has been reduced to a trickle. This has prompted some immigration officials here to suggest that many Asians could be stashing hopes the Nov. 8 deadline might be rescinded.

Countries who offered to take a proportion of the evicted Asians have been bruced for a larger onslaught of immigrants.

As of Wednesday, Canada has issued 5,712 visas, with 200 still awaiting medical examinations and 600 applicants still to be interviewed.

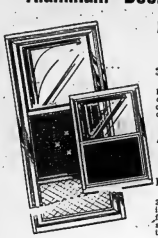
U.S. officials in Kampala reported that "with a week remaining before President Amin' deadline, the 1,000 places offered by the United States to stateless Asians may not be filled.

As of Tuesday, the British High Commission in Kampala reported: 27,345 British visas had been issued." Britain had originally anticipated as many as 35,000 Asian immigrants. The figure was later modified to 35,000.

Liberal Urges Leadership Test

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — A Liberal member of Parliament said Wednesday that Prime Minister Trudeau must "seek a vote of confidence from his own party" by calling a leadership convention before the next election.

"There's just too much anti-Trudeau feeling in English Canada," said Ross Whilcher, who was re-elected Monday in the rural Ontario riding of Bruce.



"When you lose the way he (Mr. Trudeau) did in the West and everywhere else in Canada except Quebec, I'm sure he must be thinking about a leadership convention," Mr. Whicher said in a telephone interview from his Wiarton, Ont., home announced Wednesday.

"If he wants to run again, he should first seek a vote of confidence from his own party."

Mr. Whicher, a former member of the Ontario legislature who won his first federal seat in 1968, said Finance Minister John Turner is his nominee for the Liberal leadership.

Pipeline Creates Boom Town in Andes

SANTO DOMINGO, Ecuador (AP) — Bustle has come to this unlikely town at the foot of the Andes, formally known as Santo Domingo de los Colorados.

Every Sunday the population of 50,000 doubles as workers from miles around flock to shop and stroll along the one paved street or to sit and gossip in the tree-shaded plaza. Mixed-blood laborers from nearby banana or cacao plantations and cattle ranches rub elbows with blacks from the nearby Pacific Coast, brightly painted local Indians, pig-tailed and poncho-attired Andean Indians and an occasional tourist.

They come by car, bus, truck, horseback, burro and on foot. Some bring along a squealing pig, a brace of chickens or a wild animal or bird. It will be sold to buy an article of apparel, a pot or a gleaming new machete, the all-purpose tool and weapon of Ecuador's tropical coastal plain.

Sunday afternoon is a time for diversion, maybe at one of two movie theatres—showing a 15-year-old John Wayne epic and a spaghetti Western. At a nearby revival meeting a Protestant evangelist harangues a mostly Roman Catholic audience.

There's also time for a quick glass of aguardiente, a fiery liquor made of sugar cane. Those who over-indulge are likely to meet the police patrol or rural police. With bread-brimmed straw hats on their heads and six-guns on their hips they maintain order in Santo Domingo.

The police, the rough single-storey buildings and rutted streets give the town a Wild West flavor, although it is located in the tropics 22 miles south of the Equator.

The title of fast growing town likely would go to Santo Domingo if such records were kept in this country of six million. Santo Domingo's population—not counting Sunday visitors—has tripled in a dozen years. Three major highways, none more than 10 years old, pass through the town.

Nearby is a new pipeline capable of carrying 250,000 barrels of crude oil daily from the jungle over the Andes to the port of Esmeraldas, where oil exportation began Aug. 17. A braking station near Santo Domingo helps slow the flow as oil descends from an altitude of 13,000 feet on its way to the coast.

Ecuador and its military government stand to collect perhaps $130 million a year in revenue once production reaches the 400-barrel level, likely early next year.

What oil may mean for the future of their country still is somewhat vague to most Santo Domingo residents. More important are the highways, the commerce they bring and the nearby plantations.

Greenland Boys Train in Denmark

GODTHAAB, Greenland (AP) — The young Greenlander chosen for vocational training in Denmark nervously asked: "Will I have to carry a gun?"

He was convinced that the streets of Copenhagen were overrun by cowboys.

Ib Olsen, inspector of the Greenland vocational training service, tells this story to illustrate the collision of cultures as the Danes try to teach Greenlanders skills that will give them new ways of earning a living.

The integration of the former colony with the life-style of Danes living 2,500 miles across the Atlantic is producing inevitable human strains.

The young Greenlander had been brought from a bleak settlement in the far north to his provincial capital for training in the construction trade. He had seen a few movies and some television—just enough to mislead him completely about Denmark.

Greenlander leaders do not dispute Denmark's generosity or motives in spending $130 million a year to create a modern society for the 45,000 inhabitants of the world's largest island.

But they say the pace is too fast for the Greenlanders to take without damage to human qualities.

Karl Klaus Olsen, 32, deputy head of an adult education centre at Holstenborg, said: "The Danes deserve a pat on the back for what they have done for us—but money is not everything."

He is fluent in three languages—his native Greenlandic, Danish and English. He is a passionate defender of the Eskimo culture.

His institute runs courses to preserve the ancient skills of kayak building, spear-making and carving bizarre figures in whalebone or soapstone. Greenlandic artists are encouraged to use new media to reflect Eskimo traditions.

Karl Olsen abhors the suggestion that some 6,000 Greenlanders will have to emigrate to Denmark by 1985 to find work.

"If such a transfer takes place, we will know that many souls have been killed," he said.

"There are too many trees in Denmark, so we can't see. . . . We have grown up in a country of wide horizons."

Olsen looks north, to other Eskimo societies, rather than to Denmark, for cultural inspiration. Two Canadian Eskimos had attended seminars at the institute. He hoped that more from Canada and Alaska would come next year and added that he would like contact with Eskimos in Siberia.

Moses Olsen, 34, a Greenland member of the Danish parliament, acknowledges the many material benefits the Greenlanders have received, but he complains the education system is designed for a Danish existence.

"We young Greenlanders find that the creation of a modern social pattern has not been accompanied by human growth, mental stability, psychological balance—in short, human well-being in the new environment," Moses Olsen wrote recently.

"Families are breaking up. Crime is increasing, alcoholism is spreading, even to the very young. The number of psychological disturbances is increasing, also among school children.

"Many people discern an inner confusion and disillusion. The social privation of the past is being replaced by human disintegration."

Australia Pares Size Of Cities

CANBERRA (Reuter) — After 15 years of studying decentralization schemes, the government here has decided to encourage families and businesses to move out of Australia's capital cities.

Living in cities now is an established pattern of life for more than 80 per cent of Australia's 13 million people. Sydney and Melbourne—the two largest cities—account between them for five million people.

The new scheme, the cost of which is estimated at more than $1 billion, will emphasize promotion of so-called "sub-metropolitan centres"—such as Dandenong near Melbourne and Blacktown near Sydney.

In the past, the growth of the cities has resulted in rocketing land prices, housing shortages, traffic congestion, increasing pollution and other urban ills.

Davis Promises New City

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government will go ahead with development of a community for 200,000 people east of the city even if plans for a new airport at Pickering are shelved, Premier William Davis said Wednesday.

Plans for the airport were announced by the federal Liberal government last March. At that time, Queen's Park said it would develop the residential area south of the airport.

The Ontario government already has spent more than $10 million buying land for the development.

Flood Warning

OTTAWA (CP) — Border officials have been warned of a flood of illegal Indian immigrants and immigration Minister Bryce Mackasey said Wednesday their planes may be turned back.

About 200 Indians were reported to have left New Delhi earlier in the week for Montreal Canada under existing immigration laws. Travel agents there say many more are preparing to leave, in anticipation that the next government will tighten entry requirements.

What Now?

A spokesman for Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford said Wednesday the Liberal government will proceed with the conference if it is in power. But a source in Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield's office said a Conservative government would have to consult with provincial premiers before deciding whether to hold the conference then or suggest a delay.

"Both the Liberal and Conservative parties would be well advised to listen to what people with local responsibilities have to say and get some strong sense of the mood of the country at large."

Five Killed

ST. THOMAS, Ont. (CP) — Five persons, all St. Thomas residents, were killed Wednesday night in a two-car collision on Highway 3, one-quarter mile west of here.

Provincial police said two elderly couples in one car were killed and a man in the second car was killed.

Police said the other occupants of the second car, two women and a man, were in hospital. The women were in fair condition and the man in serious condition.

All occupants of the second car were in their early 20s, police said.

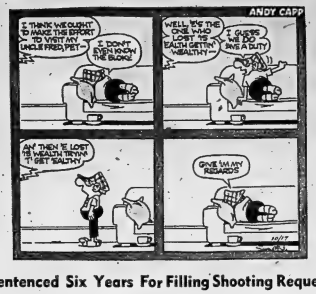
Pursue Peace

NEW YORK (AP) — A group of United States peace activists left by plane Wednesday night for Hanoi. Tom Hayden, their spokesman, said the trip was "to clarify the question raging whether or not a peace settlement is about to be signed."

Their mission, originally intended in part to deal with the release of prisoners of war, apparently was made uncertain by the delay in concluding a peace agreement.

They expect to be in Hanoi Friday.

Deadline Near



OTTAWA (CP) — About 900 applications for grants under the Local Initiatives Program have been received, a manpower department spokesman said Wednesday. The deadline for applications is Dec. 31. There is $85 million available for projects from Dec. 1 to May 31. The spokesman said that if all the 900 applications received so far are approved, grants would total $33.9 million and 16,000 people would be employed. The average grant per job would thus be $2,344.

Pot Costly

TORONTO (CP) — Two Americans were sentenced Wednesday to five years each in penitentiary after pleading guilty to possessing $87,000 worth of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking. Raymond Jackson Davis, 25, of Atlanta, Ga., and Howard Raymond Cutrell, 24, of Murfreesboro, Tenn., were arrested May 16 after police searched a house trailer and found packages of marijuana behind the false wall of a closet.

Sentenced Six Years For Filling Shooting Request

JOLIETTE, Que. (CP) — Jean - Pierre Cantin, 26, of Ste. Marcelline, Que., was sentenced Wednesday to six years in prison for manslaughter in the death of Marie-Andree Chartrand.

Miss Chartrand, daughter of labor leader Michel Chartrand, was shot to death in a farmhouse in Ste. Melanie, about 40 miles northeast of Montreal, in March, 1971.

A confession signed by Cantin a few hours after the death and accepted as evidence at his trial, said Miss Chartrand complained of a headache following an automobile accident and asked Cantin to shoot her.

"Mari-Andree said, 'You should shoot me in the head. That might cure my headache'," the statement said. He ck aim and fired with a .233 calibre rifle and she fell to th floor, it said.

Joliette is 30 miles north of Montreal.

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — ...tinada ranks 22rd amcng ...ell-developed countries i... ...rms of cilleen health, ...ueen's University economi... ...fessor told a public hearin... ...the medical professio... ...rdnesday.

Dr. R. D. Fraser said the re... ...dits were from a recent stu... ...conducted and indicate ...something is and had bec... ...ry much amiss" in Canadia... ...alth care during the post-wa... ...eriod.

Dr. Fraser said in a brie... ...nal United Nations statistic... ...ow Canada ranked 14th ...mong developed nations in in... ...t mortality with a rate o... 8.8 deaths per 1,000 live births.

He said Canada's poor health ...nding is a result of the quality ...f health care, doctor shortage ...nd inefficiently-organized doc... ...ors' practices.

Dr. Fraser said a 1963 study ...howed general practitioners in Ontario scored an average of 57 per cent in interviewing and observation procedures. He said ...scores declined with increasing ...ars of the doctors.

"This performance clearly ...ustifies an immediate study of ...the need for a new set of proce... ...dures for the licensing and certification of physicians after they ...have been practising 10 years," ...said Dr. Fraser.

Dr. Fraser was among 13 persons who presented briefs, and 60 who attended the day-long hearing.

He said the shortage of do... ...rs in Ontario is shown by the ...fficulty of newly-arrived fro... ...rs in finding a physician in ...ronto which has one doc... ...r 396 persons, the highest ra... ...in the province.

Dr. Fraser said Canada ranks ...h among 24 well-developed ...ountries in its doctor-popula... ...ro ratio and called for a sixth ...medical school in Ontario to in... ...crease the number of graduating doctors.

Doctors' incomes, which increased 122 per cent between 1960 and 1970, are a result of the shortage of doctors, Dr. Fraser said.

He was critical of physicians' reluctance to encourage training and use of paramedical personnel such as midwives, public health nurses and physicians' assistants.

Ontario health care expenditure has surpassed the $2-billion level and is growing at an unchecked rate, said Dr. Fraser. He said the Ontario government has undertaken payment of medical services and should decide when care is too expensive.

Grimsby Residents Reach Boil

GRIMSBY, Ont. (CP) — ...Town council will meet tonight ...with officials of the environ... ...ment ministry and Niagara Re... ...gional Health Unit to discuss ...contamination of drinking wa... ...ter in the east end of this Niag... ...ara Peninsula community.

More than 2,097 of the com...munity's 12,000 residents have ...been advised to boil water since Thanksgiving weekend after tests indicated the presence of bacteria.

In the first week of September, all residents were advised to boil drinking water after a break in a water main.

A recent survey by health unit inspectors indicated contamination is not serious. More than 620 homes were checked and only three persons reported upset stomachs and this was not attributed to water.

Substandard plumbing in the east end of the town is suspected as one cause. Engineers say the lines are three inches in diameter and are two-thirds filled with rust and scale.

Replacement of the plumbing system could take several months. Council has authorized a house-to-house inspection of the area and homeowners which have substandard plumbing will be ordered to replace it.

Stores Asked to 'Buy Quebec'

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec government may take steps to impell large commercial food chains to buy a larger percentage of their products in Quebec, Guy Saint-Pierre, minister of industry and commerce, said Wednesday.

Mr. Saint-Pierre said large retail distributors are buying their products in Ontario because of lower prices. He told a symposium of Quebec food and agriculture industry representatives they must undertake to regain control of the province's $3-billion food production and distribution sector.

He said scarcely 30 per cent of the Quebec food industry is controlled by local interests.

A "Buy Quebec" policy may become necessary if Quebec's share of the total of agricultural products produce in Canada continues to drop, he said.

Firm Fined

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian Stock Exchange fined Alfred J. Lewis, president of Toronto-based Asta Securities Corp. Ltd., $31,000 Wednesday and suspended him as an exchange member for 15 days.

The penalties were imposed during a CSE board of management hearing, after Mr. Lewis had pleaded guilty to six charges laid against the brokerage firm by the exchange.

Trudeau Stays To Face House

Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin Wins Close One

PM Smiles for Newsmen

Liberals, PCs Tied at 109

OTTAWA (CP) — Tied with the Conservatives at 109 Commons seats each, Prime Minister Trudeau Thursday said his Liberal government will face Parliament and, if necessary, go down fighting.

And the first sounds of battle followed immediately after the prime minister's press conference as New Democrat Leader David Lewis took Mr. Trudeau's place before the national television cameras.

Both the prime minister and Mr. Lewis were conciliatory in tone, suggesting that the Parliament due to sit in a few weeks could go on for some months if the government presents legislation acceptable to either the New Democrats or the Progressive Conservatives.

There has been no behind-the-scenes dealing, said Mr. Lewis, and therefore it appears that the party leaders were setting out their basic bargaining positions both to the nation and to each other.

The prime minister, certainly more subdued than before Monday's vote, said his government had not been clearly rejected by the electorate although it did indicate his performance

"was not satisfactory."

"What the vote has not done, however, is express any clear degree of approval for any single party."

He said it now is his constitutional duty to try to make the stalemated Commons work.

"Frankly, it will not only depends on all members and all parties, for no single party has nearly enough support in the House of Commons to exercise its will without the co-operation of others."

Meanwhile, Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield sat in his Parliament Hill office watching the political excitement not out their battle lines. Two nights earlier, Mr. Stanfield went before the same cameras and suggested the government should resign and hand power over to him.

He would not speak directly with reporters Thursday but his staff gave this statement by telephone.

Meeting to Study PM's Leadership

It is expected that a policy convention of the party that was supposed to be held this year will be held early in 1973, a party informant said.

As a matter of course delegates to such a convention are asked if they want a leadership convention.

Mr. Trudeau made reference to that question at a news conference Thursday night at which he announced that the Liberal government will continue as a minority.

Mr. Trudeau, in answering a question about the prospects of his continued leadership, said the ballot at the convention is a secret one.

He said in the last policy convention, in 1970, there was a 30 per-cent demand for such a convention.

The policy convention is supposed to be held every two years. But as it was known that there would be an election some time this year, it was postponed.

If there is a majority vote, or even a large vote, for a leadership decision at next year's convention, it could be taken as an indication of some lack of confidence in Mr. Trudeau.

Already there has been talk of a leadership convention among some Liberals. Finance Minister John Turner, considered heir-apparent to Mr. Trudeau, also has been mentioned.

Gordon Blair, who unsuccessfully sought re-election in the Ontario area constituency of Grenville-Carleton, said the day after the election that there should be a convention. HE said the prime minister proved antipathy in the electorate.

Rose Whicher, successful candidate in Bruce, said Wednesday that Mr. Trudeau must seek a vote of confidence from the party if he wants to stay as leader. He said his choice is Mr. Turner.

Hu Harries, who lost his seat in Edmonton Strathcona, said Mr. Trudeau must appear before a national convention and defend his policies.

Paper Says Millhaven Pen Has New Warden

OTTAWA (CP) — The penitentiary service announced today that N. G. Caros, 46, has been appointed director of Millhaven penitentiary in Kingston, Ont.

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — The Whig-Standard says Nicholas George Caros, 46, has assumed duties as warden of Millhaven Institution, replacing Donald Clark.

The newspaper says Mr. Clark recently was removed as warden of the maximum-security prison near here.

Mr. Clark was the centre of a controversial report released two weeks ago by Douglas Kienbrack, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Frontenac-Lennox and Addington.

The report said Mr. Clark's authority at Millhaven had been usurped by a string of incompetent or inexperienced officials that outrank him.

In a Toronto telephone interview, Mr. Allenbrack said that Mr. Clark told him Sept. 23 that he would be removed as warden "because of policies he was compelled to use, as I understood it."

Mr. Allenbrack said Mr. Clark's reported removal could have been prompted because "he was making an effort to run the place realistically—any government policy apparently wouldn't let him."

Economist Suggests Motorists Should Pay to Use City Streets

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Motorists should pay to use city streets as a means of controlling traffic congestion, air pollution and automobile insurance costs, says economist William Vickrey of Columbia University.

He presented the case for "roadway user charges" in a paper given Thursday to the first international conference on comparative urban economics, which continues through Saturday.

Mr. Vickrey proposed charging motorists on varying scales for the use of roads. Systems have been established for metering road use and billing motorists at low cost without hindering traffic flow, he said.

Under his proposals, usage charges would be rated at higher levels during peak traffic hours and at places where congestion is frequent.

By adjusting the road user charge, motorists would be encouraged to use either other routes or the same route at different times, thus eliminating congestion but maximizing use of the street to full capacity.

By controlling congestion Mr. Vickrey's paper says, public transit systems can be assured of clear routes, thus eliminating the need for separate rights-of-way.

The costs of automobile pollution have been estimated as high as $400 per year per vehicle in New York, Mr. Vickrey said. Such costs could also be recovered through road user charges.

The paper says that analysis of accident data in California indicates that when traffic increases 10 per cent on a given type of road, the accident rate climbs by 15 per cent.

No Truce Until Pact OK--Nixon

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon says the United States will sign a Vietnam peace agreement "when the agreement is right—not one day before."

"We are not going to allow an election deadline or any other kind of deadline to force us into an agreement which would be only a temporary truce and not a lasting peace," he said.

Communist delegates at the Paris peace talks said Thursday the United States must sign the draft peace accord before any further negotiations are held.

Diplomatic observers said U.S. insistence on another round of peace talks and North Vietnam's refusal to negotiate before the draft is signed indicate a delay of at least several weeks before a Vietnam ceasefire.

A ceasefire agreement can no longer be expected shortly, administration sources said.

U.S. to Leave Americans In Vietnam

SAIGON (AP) — The U.S. government has drafted secret plans for a military advisory group of American civilians to remain in South Vietnam after all U.S. troops are withdrawn, similar to the situation that now exists in Laos.

U.S. military sources said the advisers would be employed by civilian firms that would be under contract directly to the U.S. defence or state departments. They would be on the order of Air America, the charter airline that the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency finances in Laos.

Burned Bodies Believed Those of Missionaries

VIENTIANE, Laos (CP-AP) — The charred bodies of two white women were found Thursday in smouldering ruins in the town of Kengkok, in southern Laos, and a U.S. embassy spokesman said it was believed they were the bodies of two missing American missionaries, Evelyn Anderson, 25, of Quincy, Mich., and Beatrice Konig, 35, of Fort Washakie, Wyo.

Both were members of the Swiss Brethren. They were captured last week, along with Lloyd Olsen, 26, a Canadian Brotherhood hospital in Kengkok, escaped.

Wash., when pro-Communist Pathet Lao forces seized the town of Nam Bac southeast of Vientiane. Oppel and Mattix are still missing.

Oppel's father, Magnus, said in Courtenay Friday that negotiations are going on for the release of his son and Mattix.

Magnus Oppel said he had no idea what the Pathet Lao is demanding for the release of the two missionaries or the location of the village where the bargaining is being conducted.

Two other Americans, a Swiss and seven Filipinos working in the small Operation Brotherhood hospital in Kengkok, escaped.

Five Votes Give Pepin Close Win

OTTAWA (CP) — The announcement Thursday that Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin won Drummond by five ballots in Monday's election came at the end of the official addition of the reports prepared by deputy-returning officers at each of the 220 polling stations in the Quebec riding.

But in that official addition, the ballots themselves were not individually counted and the final result could change again.

Under the Canada Elections Act, whenever there is a winning margin of fewer than 25 votes at the official addition, there must be a judicial recount in which each ballot paper is examined under the supervision of a judge.

In the election-night tally, Mr. Pepin was reported trailing Social Crediter J. M. Boisvert by 138 votes. The error corrected Thursday was in the total figure accumulated from all the individual polls.

The tenuous Liberal victory in Drummond stalemates the Liberals and Progressive Conservatives at 109 seats each and drops Social Credit strength to 14. The New Democratic Party's 30 seats are unaffected by the Pepin victory as are the two elected independents.

Pay and Price Curbs Likely In Britain

LONDON (AP) — The British government was expected to decide today to introduce statutory prices-and-incomes policy following the collapse of talks aimed at harnessing inflation.

The marathon tripartite discussions-they had struggled on for more than 40 hours over 10 sessions since last week-ended in failure late Thursday night.

Prime Minister Edward Heath and business leaders accused labor union representatives at the talks of being unwilling to make concessions.

The TUC adhered to its insistence on legal controls for prices only, leaving wages to be governed by employer-union bargaining and market conditions. Heath insisted either both must be statutorily controlled or completely left to voluntary restrictions.

By optimizing congestion Mr. Vickrey's paper says, public transit systems can be assured of clear routes, thus eliminating the need for separate rights-of-way.

The costs of automobile pollution have been estimated at high as $400 per year per vehicle in New York, Mr. Vickrey said. Such costs could also be recovered through road user charges.

The paper says that analysis of accident data in California indicates that when traffic increases 10 per cent on a given type of road, the accident rate climbs by 15 per cent.

Living Too Well

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The world could not survive if every person on it enjoyed a living standard equal to that of the United States and Canada, a Harvard University economist, Professor Wassily Leontief, said Thursday. "Someone's standard is going to have to go down."

Nine Passengers Hurt

Priest Slain

LOS GATOS, Calif. (AP) — A Roman Catholic priest, Rev. Henri Tonel, 68, was stabbed to death Thursday in the confessional box of St. Mary's Church.

May Allow Communes

EDMONTON (CP) — The government of Alberta gave notice Thursday it may introduce a bill to allow Hutterites to purchase land freely. The proposed bill would repeal the Communal Property Act which restricts land purchasing by the religious sect.

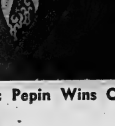
Japanese Miners Trapped

SAPPORO, Japan (Reuter) — Hopes for rescuing 31 miners trapped in a coal-mine explosion faded today as search teams were unable to reach the missing men.

36 Miners Die

VIENNA (Reuter) — Officials probed the tunnels of a Romanian coal mine today to try to learn the cause of an explosion that killed 36 miners.

Riot in Londonderry



BELFAST (AP) — British troops clashed with rioting Roman Catholic youths in Londonderry today in one of the worst outbreaks of trouble since the army seized control of the city's guerrilla strongholds last summer. The rioting continued for almost two hours after troops arrested a man they said was carrying a loaded revolver.

No Truce Until Pact OK--Nixon

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon says the United States will sign a Vietnam peace agreement "when the agreement is right—not one day before."

"We are not going to allow an election deadline or any other kind of deadline to force us into an agreement which would be only a temporary truce and not a lasting peace," he said.

Communist delegates at the Paris peace talks said Thursday the United States must sign the "draft peace accord before" any further negotiations are held.

Diplomatic observers said U.S. insistence on another round of peace talks and North Vietnam's refusal to negotiate before the draft is signed indicate a delay of at least several weeks before a Vietnam ceasefire.

A ceasefire agreement can no longer be expected shortly, administration sources said.

U.S. to Leave Americans In Vietnam

SAIGON (AP) — The U.S. government has drafted secret plans for a military advisory group of American civilians to remain in South Vietnam after all U.S. troops are withdrawn, similar to the situation that now exists in Laos.

U.S. military sources said the advisers would be employed by civilian firms that would be under contract either to the U.S. defence or state departments. They would be on the order of Air America, the charter airline that the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency finances in Laos.

Burned Bodies Believed Those of Missionaries

VIENTIANE, Laos (CP-AP) — The charred bodies of two white women were found Thursday in smouldering ruins in the town of Kengkok, in southern Laos, and a U.S. embassy spokesman said it was believed they were the bodies of two missing American missionaries, Evelyn Anderson, 25, of Quincy, Mich., and Beatrice Kosin, 33, of Fort Wellhaize, Wyo.

Both were members of the Swiss Brethren. They were captured last week, along with Lloyd Oppel, 32, a Canadian from Courtenay, B.C., and Samuel Mattix, 19, of Centralia, Wash., when pro-Communist Pathet Lao forces seized the town 200 miles southeast of Vientiane. Oppel and Mattix are still missing.

Dr. Thelma Magnus, said in Courtenay Friday that negotiations are going on for the release of his son and Mattix.

Magnus Oppel said he had no idea what the Pathet Lao is demanding for the release of the two missionaries or the location of the village where the bargaining is being conducted.

Two other Americans, a Swiss and seven Filipinos working in the small Operation Brotherhood hospital in Kengkok, escaped.

Five Votes Give Pepin Close Win

OTTAWA (CP) — The announcement Thursday that Trade Minister Jean Luc Pepin won Drummond by five ballots in Monday's election came at the end of the official addition of the reports prepared by deputy-returning officers at each of the 220 polling stations in the Quebec riding.

But in that official addition, the ballots themselves were not individually counted and the final result could change again.

Under the Canada Elections Act, whenever there is a winning margin of fewer than 25 votes at the official addition, there must be a judicial recount in which each ballot paper is examined under the supervision of a judge.

In the election-night tally, Mr. Pepin was reported trailing Social Crediter J. M. Boisvert by 138 votes. The error corrected Thursday was in the total figures accumulated from all the individual polls.

The tenuous Liberal victory in Drummond statemates the Liberals and Progressive Conservatives at 109 apiece each and drops Social Credit strength to 14. The New Democratic Party's 30 seats are unaffected by the Pepin victory as are the two elected Independents.

Pay and Price Curbs Likely In Britain

LONDON (AP) — The British government was expected to decide today to introduce statutory prices-and-incomes policy following the collapse of talks aimed at voluntary limitation.

The marathon tripartite discussions-they had struggled on for more than 40 hours over 10 sessions since last week-ended in failure late Thursday night.

Prime Minister Edward Heath and business leaders accused labor union representatives at the talks of being unwilling to make concessions.

The TUC adhered to its insistence on legal controls for prices only, leaving wages to be governed by employer-union bargaining and market conditions. Heath insisted either both must be statutorily controlled or completely left to voluntary restrictions.

Pam Flindall Is Miss Hope

A 19-year-old student nurse at the Edith Cavell Regional School of Nursing is the Belleville entry in this year's Miss Hope contest sponsored by the Canadian Cancer Society.

She is Miss Pamela Flindall of Belleville, who Thursday evening at Education Hall won the honor over two other contestants, Sharon Randy and Margaret Lone, also students at the Belleville nursing school.

As winner of last night's contest Miss Flindall will go on to compete in the Quinte Thousand Islands district contest. Last year's district winner went on to win the provincial title.

Mrs. Ed Logan, convener for the Belleville Unit of the Cancer Society told last night's gathering at Education Hall that the purpose of the Miss Hope contest was to stimulate the interest of nursing students in the society, and also in nursing the patient with cancer.

Other aims were to involve younger people in the work of the society and to increase the co-operation between medical people, the nursing professions and the Cancer Society.

Belleville unit president William Cook said interest in the Cancer Society had seen tremendous increase in the past few years.

Mr. Cook extended greetings from the Belleville unit while greetings from the Quinte - Thousand Islands District were extended by Mrs. R. Dale, convener of services to patients.

Dropouts Still Out

Representatives from Brighton, Murray and Brighton Townships failed to turn up for last night's regular monthly meeting of the Quinte Planning Board, despite orders to do so from the provincial government.

A spokesman for Murray Township said today the anarchist municipalities may have ad official announcement concerning their status with QPB within the next couple of weeks.

During that time, a report on regional planning in Northumberland and Prince Edward Counties is expected from the provincial government. Speculation is the communities want to look at the study before committing themselves to an eastern planning body.

QPB chairman Jack Bush said he wasn't sure what to expect last night.

"We didn't have any indication either way," he said.

The Quinte board is making no demands on the communities that might inhibit their return. Bush feels, dating to the time of withdrawal last April, one could expect detrimental to the municipalities involved."

Three representatives from Trenton attended the meeting last night. They have has fully reimbursed the planning board for dues during the its withdrawal with the holdout communities last spring.

Aziz, Yes Parker, No

TRENTON (Staff) — With interest now focusing on the upcoming Dec. 4 municipal elections, two town councillors have announced their intentions. Peter Aziz will seek re-election. E. M. "Ted" Parker will not.

Mr. Aziz, in a statement Friday morning, said he would seek a second term in office, standing firmly on a platform of betterment of the community and "the good of the people." He said he is firmly opposed to support of any measure that would benefit one particular individual or group of individuals to the detriment of others.

"And I mean it," he stated.

Mr. Aziz served two terms on the school board and has served on the parks board.

"I feel the experience I gained in my first term will stand me in good stead," he concluded.

In a statement Thursday afternoon, five - year veteran councillor E. M. "Ted" Parker announced he will "not be contesting in the coming election."

Citing both personal and business commitments as his reason for not seeking another term, Councillor Parker told The Intelligencer he finds his time too divided to devote his time to council duties.

"Family comes first, then business, then outside interests," he said.

Councillor Parker, who dates his public commitments back to about 25 years, believes "some new faces might help council," but readily endorses his fellow councilmen.

"If they do run, certainly I would support them," he said.

"I'm very interested and concerned with the future development of our town but sometimes it makes good sense not to be so closely associated with it for some time. This can give you a new scope."

In an Intelligencer poll conducted Thursday and Friday, Mayor Duncan McDonald and councillors Sam Ketcheson, Georgetown and Paul Tripp stated they would make their positions on the forthcoming election known sometime next week.

Only one other Trenton resident has announced candidacy for council. He is Ronald Price, merchant.

Municipal Candidates Declare Intentions

PICTON (Staff) — Several Prince Edward county councillors yesterday declared their intention to seek re-election for another term in the coming municipal elections.

Hallowell reeve George Vincent declared he has considered retirement but would seek office again if no suitable candidate comes forward.

Deputy reeve Keith Macdonald is expected to run for this office. Councillor William Rutherford may seek the reeveship.

Picton reeve Albert Pironth has confirmed he will again run for office but it has been rumored he will oppose Picton mayor Gordon Lockman in a bid for town administration.

More Members Y's Answer

Faced with declining membership revenue, lower United Appeal grants, rising salaries and building expenses, the Y board has, mounted a membership campaign.

It will continue until Nov. 20, with an objective of 700 new senior memberships for a three-month period.

If the campaign hits its target, Y will pitch another $8,000 to help lower this year's expected deficit.

An in-house campaign, with the motto "let's support ourselves, make a friend a member" is receiving the main emphasis.

However, a public campaign will be mounted next week, with booths in shopping plazas and in downtown Belleville.

"Anyone can become a member — funds are available for anyone not able to pay the full fee," he said.

This year the Y hopes to realize $53,000 from membership fees and another $25,000 from United Appeal grants. The annual swimathon to be held the end of this month, is expected to bring in about $5,000.

The remainder of the Y's revenue comes from pool rentals and fees for special programs, especially the swimming instruction classes.

The annual budget is between $482,000 and $53,000 and salaries, expected to amount to $38,000 this year, make up the major expenditure. The Y's rising expense for salaries has been offset to a great extent by the increasing use of volunteers for many of its programs.

Committee Backs Seniors' Request

The city Recreation Arena Committee has concurred with a Belleville Senior Citizen's Club recommendation which asks for an addition to the present senior citizens' dropin centre on Pinnacle Street.

The wish of the senior citizens is that any additional drop-in centre accommodation be in the downtown area—preferably in the form of an addition to the present quarters.

Concurrence with the senior citizens' recommendation came Wednesday at a joint meeting of the recreation committee with representatives from the senior citizens' club.

As a result, committee chairman Alderman Robin Jeffrey will meet with the city parking authority to discuss the accommodation needs of the senior citizens' group.

Ald. Jeffrey noted that any addition to the present recreation building on Pinnacle would take away spaces from the municipal parking lot and accordingly should be discussed with the parking authority.

Plan Behind Schedule

Consulting Firm on the Carpet

As a result, the Quinte Planning Board intends to "take some fire" under the consulting firm of Totten, Sims, Hubicki Associates, drafters of the plan.

The firm will be instructed to submit material gathered so far for perusal by board members before QPBs next meeting early in December—the date for which the final plan was originally to be complete.

At that meeting members of the board plan to meet with a representative of Totten, Sims, Hubicki to find out how much progress has been made.

The planning board is particularly concerned about the Belleville scheme since it will greatly affect the board's own conceptual plan for the entire Quinte area.

At last night's monthly meeting at Sidney Township hall, Ald. Orr said the consulting firm, in a schedule laid down last January, proposed a revised official plan by this month and the completed study by December.

"They should be jacked up on this thing," he said.

Frank Stokmans, deputy planning director of the QPB, told members there was "no way" the plan would be finished on time. His team of planners work in close co-operation with Totten, Sims, Hubicki.

Asked to speculate when the plan might be expected, Mr. Orr and Mr. Stokmans were indefinite, say it could take months.

"We must put some fire under them or they'll keep dragging," said Mr. Orr.

The alderman said he attended a meeting in Toronto earlier in the day at which representatives from the Ministry of Treasury, Economics and Intergovernmental Affairs the Ministry of the Environment and Totten, Sims, Hubicki were present.

When government officials asked Roger Truemner, chief planner for the consulting firm to submit their copy on the Belleville plan, Mr. Orr said he thought he detected some reluctance on Mr. Truemner's part.

Last night's discussion came in response to a three-page progress report submitted to the board by Totten, Sims, Hubicki. The report prompted one member to comment, "I can't make head or tail of it."

In a separate letter, the firm offered its services in drafting the Quinte-area conceptual plan, now being undertaken by the board's own staff. The letter was receive

Irish Republican Says We Have Wrong Ideas

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The strife in Northern Ireland too often is mistakenly viewed in Canada as a religious war between Catholics and Protestants.

That's the impression of Seamus O'Tuathail, free-lance journalist and member of the Irish republican movement, now touring North America to discuss the Northern Ireland situation.

"A lot of people imagine there is a medieval religious war in progress in Ireland," said Mr. O'Tuathail, during a recent Belleville stopover on his tour. "The thing I find myself doing most frequently is explaining the issues . . . are political and economic."

For historical reasons the vast majority of Irish nationalists are Catholics, loyal to Britain Unionists are Protestants. Hence, religious affiliation becomes a way of identifying personal politics.

But, claims Mr. O'Tuathail, in the present Irish situation there is "no religious or theological content in the descriptions 'Catholic' or 'Protestant'. But Canadians think if it's Catholics fighting Protestants, it must be on religious issues."

The British government has propagandized the image of a religious factionalism abroad, he charged.

"Britain has represented the situation as keeping the peace between two warring factions — and this isn't the case."

Mr. O'Tuathail, who lives in Dublin but frequently crosses the border between the Irish Republic and the violence-torn north, said his tour was "at the request" of Irish republican clubs in Canada and the United States. He has spoken in Montreal, Ottawa, Peterborough and Toronto before moving on to the U.S.

Northern Ireland's situation at present is a "political stalemate" he claimed. The Catholic minority is demanding civil rights guarantees, an end to special enforcement legislation and interment. The British government is attempting a military solution to a political situation and is trying to wear down the minority's opposition through "war-weariness".

While anxious for peace, the minority doesn't want it at any price, but with justice and equality, said Mr. O'Tuathail.

But what of the violence with which the republican movement is linked?

Mr. O'Tuathail, who says his "favorite weapon" is a typewriter, says the movement condemns the bombing campaigns — attributed to the breakaway Provisionals group as "conducive to civil war".

His definition of "official" republican actions is a "policy of defence and retaliation where you deem it politically necessary".

But do such acts contribute anything to a solution?

Mr. O'Tuathail sees it this way:

"It does this much — it maintains the morale of nationalist areas. Insofar as there's a demand, the official republican movement is willing to meet it to the best of their ability. You're dealing with a campaign of cold-blooded British murder and terror . . . To the extent you can help defend areas against their incursions you do it."

He denies actions of the Irish Republican Army might be without popular support among nationalists it claims to defend.

"The Ira couldn't continue a wet day in Ireland without the support of the people. And the basis of that support is found in British army terror."

But the "main enemy" is the absence of civil rights which creates "sectarianism and divides the people".

"I wouldn't for the moment claim the full concession of civil rights would be the end. But it would open the road to peaceful progress . . . where hitherto you've had violence."

Mr. O'Tuathail was not optimistic of an immediate settlement but agreed there was an increase in "war weariness".

"But there is no solution at the moment on the horizon," he added.

NDP Is Loser Again

The New Democratic Party in Hastings and Prince Edward - Hastings ridings has lost every deposit paid in every election it has entered since its beginnings in the campaign of '63.

Fielding candidates in both ridings, for each of the five elections has cost the NDP $2,000 in entry fees.

Ian Reilly, who in the past has served the NDP as an active candidate both provincially and federally, and this year served as campaign manager for Hastings candidate Eldridge Brethour, placed little importance on the loss of the money.

"The prime concern is to have an NDP candidate in every election to keep the party in the election limelight," he said.

Mrs. Reilly later said, "it is important that area NDP members have a name to vote for."

Each candidate must put up $200 in a federal election race.

For the NDP, the majority of the $400 this time around came from private individuals and small businesses.

A party worker said some of the money comes from union support but not nearly as much as many would like to believe.

"In some cases the particular unions do not support the party even though the NDP will do far more for them than the Tories or the Liberals," she said.

"Any time we think we are going to retain our deposit, we'll give you lots of advance notice," said Mr. Reilly.

The NDP has begun plans for the next provincial and federal elections with an unconfirmed rumor that a woman might be on the NDP ticket.

"If we can find her, we'll run her," said Mr. Reilly.

False Alarm Could Mean Jail

The Canadian government has come to the aid of frustrated fire departments in an attempt to abort circuit a perennial hazard.

False alarms — which result in more firemen's deaths than actual fires — are a problem long before the invention of the telephone.

But in Canada, fire officials had their hands tied when it came to effective deterrents.

Now, an amendment to the Criminal Code has made the false alarm an indictable offence punishable on summary conviction carrying a maximum prison sentence of two years.

Leo Culhane, Belleville fire chief hopes the legislation will reduce the number of false calls.

"These people are sick," he said. "In one local outlying area, the volunteer fire department reported four false alarms in October. When you consider the number of men and the value of equipment tied up, it's a dangerous situation."

Belleville averages about two dead-end calls a month, often from the same area, perpetrated by bizarre fun seekers. Chief Culhane says his department is fortunate in never having missed an important fire because of them.

"But if you've got $75,000 worth of equipment tied up on Front Street and there's a fire elsewhere in the city, you're just out of luck," he said.

At its monthly meeting in Trenton Wednesday, the Hastings and Prince Edward Mutual Fire Aid Association, made up of firefighters from around the area, discussed preventive measures that could be implemented locally.

Mr. Culhane, co-ordinator of the association, said researchers are working on a system to trace guilty callers. He admitted such measures would be difficult to implement, however, due to the brevity of most fire calls.

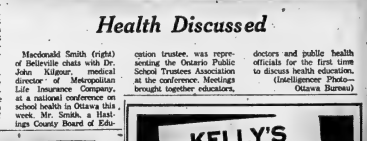
Long Debate Precedes Radio Gear Selection

WALLBRIDGE (Staff)— After lengthy committee-of-the-whole discussion, Sidney township council this morning accepted the low tender of Motorola Corp. for the supply if a two - way radio system for fire and road department vehicles.

The Motorola tender of $11,401.65 (exclusive of sales tax and maintenance charges) was more than $1,100 below the next lowest tender for Canadian General Electric equipment from Crook's Electronics. CGE also submitted a tender of its own at an even higher figure.

Although W. E. Crook told council his maintenance costs would be considerably less than those of Motorola, decision was made to opt for the solid-state Motorola system.

Purchase of the equipment will be subject to approval by the ministry of treasury, economics and intergovernmental affairs and substantial provincial grants will be available toward the expense. Had council selected one of the higher tenders it would have had to bear the full cost of the difference between the low tender and the tender chosen.



In their deliberations here that continued through Wednesday evening until 2 a.m. today, it was maintained that the need for the radio system is immediate. Council feels it will be a sizable boon in winter snow clearing and sanding operations.

There was, however, considerable uneasiness over the possibility of the need for several weeks to secure a licence to operate the radio hookup from the federal ministry of transport.

The Sidney radio system will use the frequency assigned to Hastings County vehicles, removing the necessity of the township having to wait even longer for the assignment of an individual frequency.

Health Discussed

Further Rambles

Well we took that little trip to Cedardale beach, as we had been promising after seeing the signs out Carrying Place way and thinking that here was one we had not visited.

Like Mohawk beach near Shannonville, it is a private resort so if you have a Provincial Parks season ticket it means paying extra. Of course the season is over and there is nothing to prevent one from driving along the road just short of the Murray canal at Mount Carmel and taking a peak into the wide sweep of Lake Ontario that presents itself. Here, a deserted beach, a generous spread of sand, the sky over the inland sea, grey — almost threatening as if winter were gnawing at the gates. In the park were picnic tables and the ghosts of a summer gone, the voices of children muted, only silence amid the great marine expanse. But there is a cabin in the park's centre and someone is inside and a truck stands there too.

From Cedardale over to nearby Shoal Point and here there is a strange milieu of trim cottages and people still in residence and habitations that have seen better days. A rambling brown structure stands empty, eloquent of a vacation home of earlier times. Nearby another faded residence, this one bearing signs of life: movement inside, a car and a truck outside and — evidence of a desire for privacy — a "No Trespassing" sign. And here is yet another, a red brick place with a car outside and the whole place of rather sinister and silent mien.

Back along brown, unproductive looking land where horses somehow are preparing a living and onto the route leading to Barcovan beach which we visited recently on what was one of the very last days of September sun. Last time there was the young woman walking along with her lifejackets and she had spoken of the evening operations going on. Now on a day that was overcast the whole scene looked more forbidding. Still, there was some activity. A retired couple, we should think, were washing their dog in the late afternoon and the gentleman waved as people tend to do in these remoter places where the world seems to stand still.

Away in the distance was the long tongue of land with a lighthouse on the end which last time we had mistaken for an island. Viewed from Cedardale it was clearly mainland and it reminded us of the view from the beach at Presqu'ile.

Music Hath Charm

Belleville has a number of fine musical groups, as a feature on this page has pointed out. That some have to exist on meagre returns and sustenance may be in the tradition of struggling musicians, but we are sure that the community would wish to see these young people out of the bread line at least. Their type of music is very much in the realm of the "new generation" and as such appeals to many. If it is not everyone's cup of tea, that is not the point. Rather we have here young people who are trying to make an honest go of it in this field and we wish them well as representatives of the city. We still stand by our desire to see new musical groups established, including choirs, for they have their appeal too. There is room for all sorts and meantime let's take the plea of these young people seriously.

Trenton Landmark

Trenton's old post office tower, standing there in splendid isolation, has an air of distinction and antiquity that we trust will not be ignored by the Ontario Municipal Board reportedly now pondering its future. There is talk of it being incorporated in a municipal office-enclosed parking complex. Let's hope it may be preserved in one form or another, for we need these tangible links with the past if our culture is to mean anything at all.

Tight Little Island

Another possible reason for Britain's decision to tighten up immigration regulations, to the point that Commonwealth citizens will be classified as aliens from January 1, is contained in a recent observation of Labor MP Sir Geoffrey de Freitas. He said he felt the ground beneath him outside Westminster was sinking under the weight of tourists. Indeed, the press of tourist traffic these days and the choking of narrow streets by tour buses are so great that determined efforts are being made to spread the visitors around the country.

National Unity Now More Remote

Quebec at Root of Much of Voters' Dissatisfaction

By FARMER TISSINGTON
From The Intelligencer's
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—A small news story published on election day revealed that the Southwest Quebec Teachers' Association had passed a couple of resolutions at a weekend meeting. One declared that English should not be taught to French-speaking students if the elementary grades of Quebec schools. The other urged the Quebec government to reverse its policy of allowing immigrants to be educated in either English or French.

The item attracted little attention in the excitement of election day. And yet the feeling revealed that it somehow symbolizes the reason for the surprising results of Oct. 30. It is, then, the Canada in a deep mess—Shorn of the multitude of side issues, drowned of the vague and cautious statements of party leaders and candidates, it is clear the one major factor of the election was the almost silent, English-speaking backlash against Quebec.

Resolutions such as those of the Quebec teachers can only serve to further raise the hackles of English-speaking Canada which has slowly become convinced that the special treatment accorded to Quebec by the federal government is neither right nor just. The issue was crystallized in many ridings by the attempt of the Trudeau administration to force bilingualism in the public service at a pace and rate unacceptable to thousands of unilingual government employees.

"The handwriting appeared early in the campaign when over half a dozen Conservatives won easy victories in contests bedeviled as cliff-hangers. Obviously, the extent of the feeling and reaction of English-speaking Canadians generally to the, government's treatment and attitude to Quebec was much greater than expected.

For Prime Minister Trudeau the election is a very, bitter pill, not simply because his government lost so badly, but because he boasted he had Quebec Canada closer together than ever before and that national unity was at an all-time high. The results make mockery of his words and his stance abroad.

In painful fact, the country is split worse than ever with the government surviving well over half of its total strength from Quebec and the French-speaking area of New Brunswick. Although it picked up three seats in the Atlantic area, it finds itself with absolute minimum representation in two of the four provinces. It was completely wiped out in one Western province, Alberta, and holds only token representation in the other three.

The hero is Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield who confounded the pollsters and pundits by coming so close. If there is a goat the title must rest with his so-called Quebec lieutenant, Gerard Wagner, who failed dismally in Quebec.

He was fortunate to win his own riding and lost the other seats held by the Conservatives. Only other Tory from the province, Howard Graffrey, made it since he was not crowned with Mr. Wagner. Mr. Graffrey won his riding on personal effort by campaigning almost continually since his 1968 defeat.

Disappointment must also be the feeling of New Democratic Leader David-L. Lewis whose party was hard-pressed to pick up an additional half dozen seats following the best campaign ever waged by the socialists and in the light of predictions the NDP could elect as many as 45 or 50. Clearly, the voters expressed their disapproval with Trudeau and the Liberals by supporting the only party with a chance of forming an alternate government.

Regardless of partisan considerations, the election should shock thoughtful Canadians for the widening of the gulf between English and French Canada is not an occasion for rejoicing.

The only people who really have a right to rejoice are the by the results are the repartists on both sides of the fence.

Vietnam: So Much Cost for So Little Result

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst

Among all the questions raised by the end of the war in Vietnam— return of all U.S. forces in Asia, including all support units in Thailand and the Philippines, early surrender of all prisoners, economic recovery— the future of South Vietnam as a viable state is the largest.

Will it survive at all, or under the formula provided in the new policeship a Vietnam truce? If you want to look at the record of previous East-West agreements, the answer on both accounts is no.

The nine point program, prematurely released by Hanoi and the North Vietnamese on Oct. 21, includes acceptance of President Thieu as South Vietnamese president, but also a coalition of the major political groups of the north and south.

From this grouping, national elections would be called with the emergence of a coalition government of the Communist, left, right and Buddhist neutralist.

The likelihood of this ever happening is almost totally impossible. And the man who has said so since his election in a three-way battle in 1967 is General and President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam.

He has been irrevocably opposed to coalition of any kind with the Communists.

In 1954, the Geneva Agreements set down rules much along the lines of the present nine points—also to end an indochinese war, the one which the French had fought against the Vietnamese—like the end of the Second World War.

The north became a rigid Asian Communist state. The south was formed into the present Republic of South Vietnam. It was almost immediately penetrated by Communist guerrillas and political saboteurs from the north and resistance to them before the link was dry at Geneva had begun.

In the south, the massive corruption in government and intimidation of political opponents in an alleged new Asian democracy began just as soon. Or rather it took new shape from what it had been under French colonial rule.

The overthrow and assassination of the late President Ngo Dinh Diem in 1963, partly because of his corruption and pro-density to one-man rule, ultimately resulted in the present one-man ruler Nguyen Van Thieu.

Basically he is as much a nationalist in his own way as was the late North Vietnamese Communist Chinese leader Ho Chi Minh. But like Ho, Thieu has unanticipated resistance to the dominant foreign power for nationalism.

While the war lasts, Thieu can fend off South Vietnamese political opponents who were not even allowed to vote against him in last year's presidential election.

But if peace comes, not only will the northern Communists will infiltrate where their guns could not (inside a new government in the south) but also the political exiles denied any role in government by the men who have ruled in Saigon since the 1954 Geneva accord.

South Vietnam in a new peace, as in the old war, will be a mess, politically, socially, economically. Much more than was Korea after 1953 where Syngman Rhee, the single strongman survived much longer and largely re-shaped the "Korean Republic around his own ideals.

The staggering tragedy of all this is that over one million human beings—Vietnamese peasants and soldiers on both sides—have died and $150 billion in American treasure has gone down the drain to create a most insecure and unstable future Vietnamese state.

The enormous error of this Asian war will plague us at least until the end of this century.

McGovern Still Felt to Be Waging A Losing Battle

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — As the United States presidential election campaign heads into its final week, the central question is whether everyone but George McGovern could be wrong.

As recently as several days ago he described, as he has all along, that he will be elected president next Tuesday. The national polls say just as of now he hasn't got much of a chance—he's trailing President Nixon by more than 20 percentage points.

McGovern strategists insist the gap will narrow, as it traditionally does in the final days before presidential elections, reflecting new enthusiasm which they say is already evident in a recent upsurge in campaign contributions and other indicators.

They are left hoping that the pollsters are on the eve of their biggest miscalculation since they erroneously picked Republican Thomas Dewey to defeat former president Harry Truman in 1948.

But after months of campaigning, poll-taking and free-wheeling commentary by the pundits, the phrase most often heard about the lifeless 47th race for the White House is "voter apathy."

Nixon fears it because overconfidence among his followers could lead to a dangerously low voter turnout.

McGovern is frustrated by it because, despite a fateful of heady issues, he can't seem to generate much heat among voters as he stumps the country at a brutal pace.

"I'd rather pick a green apple than a rotten one," said a sign at a recent McGovern rally near Los Angeles. McGovern, the green apple of the analogy, wouldn't have put it so crudely but to many the sign represented a succinct assessment of the choice McGovern wants the people to make.

Although "rotten" is not in the vocabulary of the Democratic challenger, it does not rest with reference to the personnel he has been calling the Nixon administration "the most corrupt" in U.S. history.

But for most of the country, as assessed by most observers, to date the people do not want either green or rotten apples and in the absence of another choice are leaning toward the known-quantity of the Nixon administration.

The feeling expressed by many who have been following the campaign with keen interest is that while Americans in general are not madly in love with Nixon, they are nervous about McGovern, whom Nixon forces have sought to paint as a "dangerous radical."

McGovern's renewed confidence of late appears to date from a series of half-hour, paid television addresses he had given with remarkable success. As a follow-up, as much as $800,000 a day in small contributions have been reported by his headquarters.

He also is aware that Senator Hubert H. Humphrey, in his 1968 battle with Nixon, gained a remarkable 11 percentage points in the polls in the last week or so before the election. He is confident, he says, that many life-long Democrats, particularly among the Irish, Italian and Jewish voters, who are indicated in the polls are turning to Nixon, will return to the fold by election day.

But despite McGovern's professed confidence, the morale of his followers in the light of current realities is often and embarrassingly illustrated in a slip of the tongue.

And at another stop, a minor official, also pledged in introducing McGovern that "we will work for you right through to the bitter end."

Musicians Seek Backing Of Public

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

In reading the editorial of Community Initiatives I cannot understand why Belleville will not support the fact that support its own musical groups.

Belleville has always been a hotbed for musical talent but lacks the support when a needed?

Belleville has good groups, such as United Power, a born band. Tack, a local recording group. Both groups have been on tour. United Power was on tour in the States last spring while Tack just returned from engagements in the prairies. I'm positive that these two groups represented Belleville quite well but how well has Belleville represented these groups?

The case for a fact that neither group has hardly enough money to live on, by living on peanut butter and bread and see how long you last.

Playing in a band isn't as glorious as it is made out to be. Instrument payments are always hanging over your head, travelling expenses, accommodations on the road as well as at home, which brings me to the impolitical part.

I was talking to one of the members of United Power and he told me that they have been trying to find a place to practice for the past few months, but nobody seems to have anything available or are willing to pay but it seems that long hair talks louder than money. This goes for housing as well. The band had enquired about a house by phone. The person said to come over the next afternoon so they could look at the house. Well, as soon as they (Power) walked in, the lady, with a terrified look in her eyes, stuttered out these famous lines, "Sassyy ma's arrrented."

When will the people of Belleville get off their butts and realize that they do have talent here? When will Belleville sponsor its own musical groups? Why look for imaginary bands and clubs when you already have good well-ambassadors?

Belleville, please, before it's too late.

Nixon May Win In Every State

WASHINGTON (CP) — Once considered one of the great losers of United States political history, Richard Nixon could be headed for a victory of historic proportions in Tuesday's presidential election.

The most bullish of the president's Republican advisers predict a majority of votes in all 50 states. Their principal fear is that voter apathy will keep Nixon supporters at home.

Democratic nominee George McGovern, looking as he will beat Nixon, has had few to share his optimism. A Las Vegas bookie has quoted 1,000-to-1 odds against him. Even his home state of South Dakota seems doubtful.

The polls say Nixon is likely to attract voters of almost every stripe, including many who had long been given up as lost to the Republican party—union members and college students, Jews and Roman Catholics, the bungry poor and the limousine liberals, independents and life-long Democrats, the solid South and the industrial North.

And all of this although Nixon has barely budged from the White House to show the colors, and has not allowed McGovern's name to cross his lips.

GRIM REMINDER

But only "nearly," because there were a few dimesters among the 400,000 people who lined the motorcade route and the 17,000 ecstatic Long Island Republicans at an evening rap talk.

One held up for Nixon to see a sign that said simply, "Remember Dewey"—a reminder of Harry Truman's come-from-behind victory over the excessively confident Thomas Dewey in 1948.

Several protesters had laboriously written out on placards a statement Nixon made in October, 1968, while campaigning for his first term: "Those who have had a chance for four years and could not produce peace should not be given another chance."

Signs saying, "What about Watergate?" and, "Government by the corrupt, for the corrupt" were there to remind Nixon of that growing, and largely unanswered, list of accusations about political spying, secret campaign funds, big-business favoritism and other irregularities imputed to his administration and his campaign organizers.

Few political observers pretend to understand why as many voters say they will support Nixon.

Undoubtedly part of Nixon's backing will come from people whose main motivation is distaste for Senator McGovern.

The Democratic challenger has had trouble establishing himself as a viable alternative, thanks to some allegedly radical policy stands, developments in Vietnam, organizational troubles and the demolition work of Republican campaigners.

Another important part of the Nixon vote is predicted to come from the homeless conservative supporters of Alabama Gov. George Wallace, who won 18 per cent of the total vote for president in 1968 but was forced out of the 1972 running in May by a would-be assassin's bullets.

However, such projections leave much unexplained, especially in light of what has been made public about voter opinions.

Surveys indicate the president is still not much loved. He has not convinced a majority that he is a great leader. He is not regarded as particularly capable in dealing with pocket-book issues. And he is still identified uncomfortably with the pin-labeled and big business.

Yet the same surveys imply that he could end up with more voter support than did Lyndon Johnson, Dwight Eisenhower, Franklin D. Roosevelt or almost any notable vote-getting president back to George Washington.

Donation Annoys MPP

Sargent Attempts To Block Rental

TORONTO (CP) — Eddie Sargent, Liberal member of the Ontario legislature for Grey-Bruce, advised his lawyer Thursday to seek an injunction to stop the Workmen's Compensation Board from completing an agreement with a developer to provide office space for the board.

Mr. Sargent took the action after reading a newspaper report that said Fidnam (Ontario) Ltd. had donated $50,000 to the Progressive Conservative party campaign in July, 1971, about a month after the Ontario Cabinet approved an agreement between the company and the board over a development in downtown Toronto.

P. A. Sanderson, Fidnam president, confirmed the donation was made but said a message relating the donation to the deal was an error by a company official.

Mr. Sargent wants to stop the deal from being completed pending an investigation of circumstances surrounding the agreement.

He said he learned that money has not yet been exchanged in the deal, although a lease has been signed.

Ian Deans, New Democratic Party member for Wentworth who is his party's representative on a legislative standing committee investigating the board, said no further investigation is necessary.

At present, candidates must itemize receipts and expenditures but are not required to state from whom the money was received.

"I think this matter is of the greatest magnitude and can be equated with the biggest scandals of Canadian history," he said.

Fidnam's donation became known when two documents were received by a newspaper. The first was a Telex message head office questioning a $50,000 expenditure.

The second message, a reply to the first, said the $50,000 was a "political donation related to UCP - WCB. The development that Fidnam is building will house the WCB and is called Upper Canada Place.

Uganda Asians Sent from Towns

KAMPALA (AP) — President Idi Amin announced Thursday night that all Asians remaining here after his Nov. 8 expulsion deadline must leave the cities and go and live in villages.

In what was officially described as a new policy statement, Amin said: "Those Asians who claim to be Ugandan citizens must go to the villages and mix up with the other Ugandans."

He said they would have to stay with Ugandan Africans "whether they like it or not."

MR. AND MRS. (PETER) INER ANDERSON

Anderson – Armstrong

Rev. Ernest Winter officiated at the recent wedding ceremony in Trenton Baptist Church when Brenda Gail Armstrong exchanged vows with (Peter) Iver Haaken Anderson. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Armstrong, Trenton, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Anderson of RR 2, Carrying Place.

Socail and Personal

Prior to her recent marriage, Mrs. Robert Morine was entertained at two miscellaneous showers given by: Mrs. T. Orr with Mrs. T. Davis and Mrs. E. Pope with Mrs. F. Benson. Nursing classmates of the bride honored her at a supper party and shower with Miss N. Hall and Miss C. Booth as hostesses. Parties were given by: Mr. and Mrs. Harry McCreary; Miss JoAnne Wong and Miss Peggy Wright; Mr. and Mrs. John Cowan; Mr. and Mrs. Doug Cowan; and Mrs. Morine; and Mr. and Mrs. M. Shickluna: the bride's mother, Mrs. A. Chaplin. A gift was presented to the bride by Mrs. L. Lennox and Mrs. R. Gronsolus from her mother's bridge group. The bridegroom's parents gave a rehearsal party for the wedding party.

AT HOME

Miss Emma Shorey will be receiving her relatives and friends at the Newburgh United Church on Saturday, November 4, 1972 from 2 - 4 on the occasion of her 100th birthday.

Rev. W. A. Dwyre officiated at the recent wedding ceremony in Holy Name of Mary Catholic Church, Marysville when Nora Bernadette, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Whalen of Marysville was united in marriage to Roy James Kiley of Kingston, son of Mr. Roy Kiley. Miss Anne Walsh provided traditional wedding music and accompanied the soloist, Mrs. Carolyn Seaxmith.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose a floor length gown of crepe satin featuring an empire waistline leg o'mutton sleeves and trimmed with rows of small white daisies. A three-tier embroidered veil with cathedral train was held in place by a cluster of daisies and satin ribbon. She carried a cascade of yellow roses, stephanotis and baby's breath.

Miss Pauline Whalen, as her sister's maid of honor, wore a long gown with a green crepe skirt and featuring lantern sleeves. She carried a basket of yellow and butterscotch daisies, and baby's breath, highlighted by a green crepe wide brim picture hat.

The bridesmaids, Mrs. Donna Bellewood, Miss Janice Smith, Miss Irene Whalen and the flower girl, Miss Julie Whalen were attired identically to the maid of honor and carried similar flower arrangements.

For the reception held at Club Canara, the bride's mother received the guests wearing a long gown of printed chiffon in shades of brown and gold accented by a cream cymbidium corsage and brown accessories.

Mrs. Dale Kiley assisted wearing a floor length gown refashioned by a white top and floral colored skirt of red and blue, complemented by a corsage of red sweetheart roses.

For the wedding trip to Niagara Falls, the bride donned a long floral orange and brown patterned skirt with an orange chiffon top. A corsage of yellow sweetheart rosea and bronze pompon mums completed her ensemble.

Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. James Kiley will reside at 70 Larsdowne St., Apt. 1., Kingston.

Euchre Played

READ — A euchre was held in St. Mary's School on Sunday night last with 11 tables in play. Prizes were won by Mrs. Kay Coffey and Mrs. Harold Power, Steve Brennan and Charlie Day Jr. The door prize went to William Buckley.

From Reel to Reel

Not only do Corby Public Library members have innumerable books available to them on loan, but there's also a film lending library from which Reid, Mrs. Barbara Skrill, head of this additional branch of the library places returned films on the shelves.

Film librarians from eastern Ontario recently expressed a pressing need for documentary films that show the world through the eyes of Canadians.

The librarians met at Corby Public Library for a film workshop and had high praise for the excellence of National Film Board productions and their variety of subjects.

William Procter, Ontario director of the NFB, outlined the board's two functions — to interpret Canada to Canadians and to other nations and to act as official film maker for government departments.

And filming outside Canada is hampered not only by the legislation governing film board operations, but also by public disapproval of the cost of sending film crews abroad.

With the renewal of diplomatic relations with China, NFB is "actively pursuing" the possibility of making documentaries on China, said Mr. Procter.

Mr. Procter said he would like to see Canadian film crews engaged in an exchange program with crews from other countries. The exchange of ideas and techniques would enrich the quality of film production in Canada and abroad, he said.

The National Film Board operates on an annual budget of $18 million, Mr. Procter told his listeners. Of this, only $12 million comes from government appropriations. The remaining $6 million comes from sale and rental of films, from royalities and from fees for productions done for other government departments.

Belleville Corby Public Library is the centre for film distribution in the Lake Ontario Regional Library System. There are 500 different films available. Film blocks have been arranged in Peterborough, Kingston, Bancroft and Cobourg to make available these films. Each block holds 20 films and are rotated every four months. Students, teachers, professionals, church groups, and several service clubs as the fish and game club have access to this film lending library.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT SHELDON MORINE

Morine – Chaplin

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was the setting for the October 21 wedding ceremony when Judith Eileen Chaplin exchanged vows with Robert Sheldon Morine. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Armour Chaplin, Belleville and the late Mr. Armour Chaplin. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Morine of Wilowdale. Bob Leslie provided traditional organ music during the ceremony.

The bride who was escorted down the aisle by her uncle, Harry Chaplin and given in marriage by her mother, selected a long white crepe glace gown with a high neckline and empire waistline gracefully falling into two front folded panels which formed a long circular train. The bodice and long satin sleeves were trimmed with guipure lace and embroidered with tiny pearls. The shoulder illusion veil was held in place with a lace headpiece. The bride carried a flowing cascade of stephanotis, pink sweetheart roses and tiny orchids.

Miss Barbara Jean Mills, the maid of honor, wore a deep purple velvet princess line gown with a mandarin neck and full gathered sleeves. A half - belt and bow accented the back of her waistline.

The bridesmaids, Miss Nancy Hall, Miss Carol Booth, Mrs. Barbara Schickluna and Mrs. Kathy Davis were dressed identically to the maid of honor. Each bridesmaid carried mixed bouquets of pink and mauve flowers.

Best man was Bob Moore. Ushers were Michael Schickluna, John Cowan, Bill McLaughlin and Michael Walker.

For the wedding trip to Pocono Mts., the bride donned a navy blue double knit pant suit with navy accessories and a corsage of pink sweetheart roses.

Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Morine will reside at 222 Elm Sq. Apts., Toronto.

Are Children Worse Off Today than Yesterday?

By DORIS CLARK

The children of the world are worse off than they were 20 years ago. Nearly a billion children live in the developing countries — 30 to 40 per cent of them die before they reach the age of five. In 10 years where perhaps 90 per cent of the casualties are civilians, 60 per cent are children.

Eighty per cent of the entire human population has never had what we would call a decent meal. Somebody has to say a loud "NO" to that situation. The silent majority is often the apathetic majority who, by saying nothing, acquiesce in all kinds of horrors.

Shall we lie down before the blind giant of technology and let it foul our air, pollute our waters, kill our cities and deafen our souls? Are these our gods? War, Hunger, Poverty, Technology? Surely not! — C.A.S. Elliott, Metropolitan United Church, Toronto.

Dear Doris: I pray every day for foot patrols to be put on roads that are not patrolled by police, especially where there is traffic and little children have to cross to get to school.

I saw three children one day waiting to cross. The girl of 10 was holding smaller ones about five on each side; then the traffic went by like mad. She looked so nervous.

I went to her and managed to get her across by raising my arms so that some cars slowed down; and then thanked God I knew they were safe for that time. I know how she felt as I am 84 and cannot hurry. The traffic is on you before you know it; they are so impatient and seem to hate anyone who has the nerve to try walking. — Heart In My Mouth.

Dear Heart: I agree. In many places there are now uniformed men at busy crossings at school hours; and they do a big job. But a pedestrian who cannot hurry is in danger even when she is crossing with a green light, simply because a speed-happy driver in the lane nearest the sidewalk she aims for may zip through if he sees her light change to yellow.

A recent fatality happened just that way. All the other cars were waiting, but this young fellow just didn't see the walker nor reflect that the waiting drivers must have a reason.

Dear Doris: Continuing education is a subject we are all nuts about here where I work. Most of us take courses at night in the winter and feel strongly that as long as one lives one should continue to learn.

One of my particular hobbyhorses, too, is the changes we are facing in the '70s, some of them happening so rapidly it is difficult to keep up.

I've no patience with folk who close their minds to change and innovation. To me it is the most exciting part of life. — Nanoua.

Dear Nanoua: Cheers! I think so too. I do think you and I are lucky to be in jobs which require of us to keep up with what goes on, simply because we must write down our thoughts and facts for others to read. I have found journalists and writers to be particularly alive and alert; and conversation can be exciting when we get together.

I publish your remark in the hope that those who read will rush off and sign up for the nearest Current Affairs group or hobby class.

Royal Furniture

HALIFAX (CP) — Furniture that once belonged to Edward, Duke of Kent, father of Queen Victoria, has been donated to the Nova Scotia Archives here. The small drop-leaf table and eight chairs made in the mid-18th century were probably used at the country house at nearby Prince's Lodge where he lived with Julie St. Laurent while he was stationed in Halifax from 1794 to 1798. George Walter MacKay of New Glasgow, N.S., whose family inherited the furniture, donated it to the archives.

Mirror of Your Mind

by JOHN CONWELL

Can a hobby quiet anxiety?

YES; if someone collects stamps, repairs antique furniture, studies the stars, or engages in any one of a hundred pastimes that is a complete change from his routine, he might be able to lessen his anxiety. If he is worried about being anxious, however, he should see his doctor. A hobby for the severely anxious person will in time give him something else to arouse his anxiety unless he corrects what is destroying his peace of mind.

Must every tot be a little jealous?

NO. A tiny girl, for instance, if she has been properly "briefed" for a new arrival, can accept and love her tiny brother who's just home from the maternity hospital. That doesn't mean her parents should leave the infant alone with his sister. She is apt to poke him one when she only means to caress him — not because she wants to harm him, but because she doesn't understand how fragile a baby can be.

Is 'happily ever after' just a myth?

LIVING happily ever after can be a real rather than a fairy-tale ending for happily married couples. They know the fortunes of married life can take wide swings in a very short period of time; yet happily married people learn to make adjustments in accepting what happens to them. They know the key to marital happiness is the ability to contribute to the happiness of each other; in other words: giving rather than receiving.

Woman's Husband Taken By Another . . . Man

Dear Ann Landers: I lost my husband to another man. Before you jump to conclusions, let me explain. We are both 32. Arthur and I had a good marriage until a few years ago. Our children are grown and on their own. Arthur is what you might call peculiar, but he is not queer. The other man is his bachelor brother.

The minute Arthur gets up in the morning he telephones Brother to ask if he had a good night's sleep. Then they plan what they're going to do that evening.

The two of them act like teen-agers. I am not included in any of their activities. Brother has dinner with us every night, unless he and Arthur decide to eat out. Brother rarely speaks to me and I have given up trying to be friendly. I consider him an arch-rival who has taken my husband away.

Please give me some advice before I crack up. Or have I cracked up already? — Impossible Situation.

Dear I.P.: Your signature describes your dilemma. What you fail to understand is that no one can be taken over unless he wants to be. Your husband is a willing partner in this grossly immature involvement.

Would your life be better or worse without him? This is the question you must ask yourself. A woman of 32 is too young to cry up and blow away. Base your decision on what is best for you. Arthur has already decided what is best for him.

Dear Ann Landers: Here's a word of encouragement for Hooked In Lansing who will soon be a teen-ager and is still sucking her thumb.

When I was six years old my folks tried everything to get me to stop. Nothing worked. The doctor told Mom to leave me alone.

I am 18 now and will be married in October. I quit sucking my thumb three months ago when I announced my engagement. It happened almost overnight. I don't know if it was my pride, love, being loved, or a combination of all three. If I could kick the habit anyone can. Please tell Lansing I'm rooting for her. Ann — Unhooked In Oakland

Dear Ooh: Nothing helps like having someone say: "I did it, you can, too." This is the concept of Alcoholics Anonymous, Weight Watchers and Recovery, Inc. Thanks for the encouragement.

Dear Ann Landers: This is for that broad who thinks people are stingy if they don't take passengers along "as a favor" since they were "going anyway." Listen, lady, the average automobile depreciates at the rate of seven cents a mile. You didn't say how far it was to Florida, and I can imagine what you meant by "a few personal belongings." Maybe a small sewing machine, a hair dryer, a couple of wig boxes, and a bird cage.

When I was in high school my dad gave me orders. If I carried passengers to football games or barn dances, they had to chip in for the gas; and if I blew, they had to kick in for that, too. In other words, no free rides. They are darned good rules to live by.—Fair In San Antonio

Dear Fair: I suspect you're about my vintage. In those days (antediluvian, of course) a buck was a lot harder to come by and a car was a big deal. I agree that a person who travels several hundred miles as a passenger should offer to share the cost of the gas and oil but short trips should be favors.

TIT-FOR-TAT

WELLINGTON, N.Z. (AP) — Canterbury University students were outraged by a tobacco company's promise to donate a penny to the 1974 Commonwealth Games for each pack of cigarettes it sold. They countered with an offer of a penny for every contraceptive sold from campus vending machines.

Club Activities

MARMORA CHAPTER IODE

MARMORA — Mrs. L. Paiero was hostess for the October meeting of Marmora Chapter IODE held recently.

Thank you letters were read from Provincial President, Mrs. E. P. MacKay and Provincial Secretary, Mrs. E. P. Dimmert, who were present at the recent 30th anniversary Mrs. Sid Demorest gave a financial report and also substituted for secretary Mrs. Vaughan Glover. The education committee chairman, Mrs. Gordon Bennett suggested that two large games be purchased and sent to the Chapter's adopted Indian residential school at Davis Inlet. Other games may be left with Mrs. Bennett at Marmora Insurance Agency before Nov. 15. It was decided that tickets would be sold on a Christmas grocery basket again this year.

Following lunch, members enjoyed games of bingo arranged by Mrs. George Greening and Mrs. F. V. Walters.

Dief Says NDP Fears Election

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP) — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker said Thursday night the New Democratic Party is "afraid of another election" and will do everything it can to support the Liberals in Parliament.

Mr. Lewis, he added, "in his own heart and mind realizes the NDP would have no chance in another election and therefore will do everything he can to keep the Trudeau government in office."

Asked whether he agreed with Prime Minister Trudeau's decision to remain in office and face Parliament, the former Progressive Conservative leader said that it all depends on the actual strength of the Liberals in Parliament.

If the Conservatives have a larger number of seats, they should be called on to form the government, Mr. Diefenbaker said.

Results up to Thursday night indicated that the Liberals and Conservatives were tied with 109 seats each.

Mr. Diefenbaker said he personally has no confidence in any government led by Mr. Trudeau.

"He has evaded Parliament, he has treated it with contempt, and now, having done everything he could under the rules to destroy Parliament, he suddenly develops an affection for Parliament and speaks of it in such endearing terms."

Is Trudeau Humbled?

OTTAWA (CP) — If Prime Minister Trudeau was humbled by the results of Monday's election he isn't saying so publicly.

A questioner at his Thursday night news conference said the prime minister had been accused of arrogance by opposition spokesmen during the election campaign.

He was asked whether the Monday night's election results "humbled you at all?"

Mr. Trudeau said he has many sins, but that he confesses them to his priest.

He invited his questioner to judge him by his conduct.

Good Fight Now Says Margaret

OTTAWA (CP) — Margaret Trudeau attended her husband's news conference Thursday night, where he announced his minority Liberal government will stay on and face Parliament, and seemed to enjoy it.

Mrs. Trudeau sat high up in the chairs in the news theatre in the National Press Building, smiling easily and chatting occasionally with reporters near her.

She listened attentively to the give and take of the news conference following Prime Minister Trudeau's initial statement.

How was she feeling, she was asked?

"Fine, fine. We're in for a good fight now."

NEW EDMUND

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — Barry MacGregor will appear as Edmund in the Stratford Festival production of King Lear from Sept. 11 to the season's end Oct. 21. MacGregor takes over the role from Daniel Davis who is leaving the Stratford company to play a film role. MacGregor also performs in this year's festival productions of As You Like It, She Stoops to Conquer and Lorenzaccio.

Pepin Explains

OTTAWA (CP) — Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin emerged beaming from a cabinet meeting Thursday after learning that revised figures have given him a five-vote victory in his Quebec riding of Drummond.

"It was just a trick to get all those obituaries in the press," he said of the Monday night election count which showed him trailing his Social Credit opponent by 108 votes.

"I have been officially declared elected. . . . I feel quite good."

He admitted, however, that the situation could change again when a final judicial recount is held—an automatic occurrence in every riding where the victory margin is fewer than 25 votes.

A Poppy for Every Lapel

Ken Edgecombe, chairman of the Belleville Poppy Committee, here, scoops a handful after handful of paper poppies into carrier boxes, getting ready for the fund drive beginning this evening. Poppies will be on sale in all public areas. Profits are used to form a benevolent fund for war veterans. Last year, $4,000 was raised through the sale of poppies and approximately $3,000 from wreaths. Remembrance Day is Saturday, Nov. 11.

Poppies Reminders of Sacrifice

Some 50,000 paper poppies carrying the message of remembrance for those who gave their lives in war, have been ordered for Belleville's Remembrance Day, Nov. 11.

The Belleville Poppy Committee, a service group drawn from local veterans' organizations, annually handles the ceremonies surrounding the day and relies on donations to the poppy fund in their bid to aid war veterans.

"A penny, a nickel whatever can be afforded," said a spokesman for the committee. The ultimate aim is for all to wear the poppy and to remember."

When final receipts were tallied following last year's poppy drive, the committee was $4,000 richer, which in turn was spent in the ensuing year as a benevolent fund for veterans.

The price of the poppies is the largest of the minimal costs incurred in the fund-raising project which spends its profits providing food and in some cases, shelter to the needy. Secondary bursaries are also arranged through the fund. Volunteers constitutes the week's force involved in the campaign.

For this year's drive, a major change has been made in terms of reference for the Poppy Day.

Traditionally the poppy has been the calling card for "remembrance". In an effort to update the image of the poppy, the theme reads, "If you can't remember . . . Think."

Mrs. Dorothy Howard, a spokesman for the women's veteran association, Branch 587, Royal Canadian Legion, said "many of the young and the not so young remember the war that took place before they were born.

"What we ask is that if they can't remember, then at least think of the sacrifice of others to protect the future.

"Think of what your today cost in lives yesterday," said Mrs. Howes, past president of her association.

More than 100,000 graves-stones, bearing the Canadian maple leaf marking Canadian graves remain in Europe as a constant reminder of the wars.

Young people receive heavy emphasis from the poppy committee that each year delivers poppies to all schools so that each and every child will have the opportunity to wear one.

The poppy committee sponsors education-orientated programs through the schools including a poetry contest dealing with remembrance and a public speaking contest in the spring.

Loyalist Committee's Action Is Challenged

PICTON (Staff) — Application for a site development at Loyalist College estimated at $67,000 has been submitted by the building committee without a recommendation from the board of governors and college president Herbert Young has been requested to prepare a report explaining that action.

The submission was challenged by board member Donalee Loader, who asked to go on record as being in opposition to the procedure.

Mr. Loader said the site development was favored but no cost figure had been mentioned.

"Now we don't know what plans we've drawn up. I'd like to question this. The committee should have the authority to move but I question the procedure followed," he declared.

Mr. Loader remarked five board members apparently cannot handle board business when others fail to attend regular meetings but three members of a committee can submit more than a half-million-dollar recommendation.

Board chairman Ross Donelan stressed the submission was an application only, not an authorization to spend the money.

He said he did not feel anyone was attempting "to short-circuit the board's approval."

Mr. Loader countered that if the board of governors at last night's meeting were to decide against the submission it would be too late, since application already has been made.

Board member Wilfred Wilkinson suggested Herbert Young, president of the college prepare a written report explaining how the submission was made for discussion at the next regular meeting.

Commuters Swell Loyalist Enrolment

PICTON (Staff) — Loyalist College, striving to meet the changing needs in this area assists in serving the post-secondary needs of Prince Edward county students.

John Donelan of Napanee, chairman of the college's board of governors said at a meeting in Picton last night 10 per cent of the graduates of Prince Edward Collate Institute last year now are studying at Loyalist. There are 55 full-time students from Prince Edward enrolled at the college and eight full - time and three part - time teachers there are county residents.

Mr. Donelan said that 130 full - time post secondary students attend Loyalist as well as 40 apprentices and 380 retrainables. Extension course students also attend classes on campus and there is a total of 1,200 pupils enrolled full time. The college is responsible for a total of 4,500 students enrolled in several capacities.

In an effort to meet new needs of this area, two new courses have been introduced. The first is a training course for persons interested in working with the mentally retarded while the second is a registered nurse's assistant course.

An early childhood education course also is offered and now has an enrolment of 70 students.

Ex-servicemen this year can study rehabilitation courses training and skills, thus better equipping them for civilian life.

Loyalist students in the communications arts course now are broadcasting live from radio station CHQ-FM for five days daily, five days a week.

Mr. Donelan noted the role of the community college and suggested it meet the needs of secondary school graduates apart from those attending universities.

At a recent meeting between Prince Edward school trustees and the Loyalist college board of governors, extension courses now offered in the county were discussed.

Mr. Donelan said governors were able to show the college comes into the area to offer courses not ordinarily available through the local school board.

He commented that county residents can receive the maximum educational opportunities available to them through the courses.

Mr. Donelan noted he disagrees with the concept of Loyalist as a community college but while it was first established, legislation designated it in this category.

The chairman said a building program at the school has been progressing steadily over the last four years to meet growing area needs.

Construction began in a rented area of Centennial secondary school and later construction of a temporary building was justified. Application was made soon afterward for funds for a permanent building.

Mr. Donelan predicted the size of the college and its facilities by September, 1973 will satisfy its immediate needs. He added, however, that "by no means" does it have all that is needed as yet.

Addition to Kente Backed by Board

AMELIASBURG (Staff) — The Prince Edward County board of education has unanimously backed construction of an addition to Kente School in Ameliasburg township and building could begin early in 1972.

Reports from Ameliasburg's three representatives to the board and verbal reports from trustees contained this information and were discussed at a public meeting in the township hall Wednesday night.

The board of education twice has made presentations to the Ministry of Education and recently senior ministry officials rejected a second building application. There are strong indications, however, that the project will be approved in 1973.

Jerald Anderson, an Ameliasburg school trustee said that he considers the present system of busing secondary school students from the township to Belleville is proving efficient and might as well be continued. He was referring to a proposal forwarded about three years ago concerning construction of a kindergarten-to-grade 13 complex at the Kente school site.

Mr. Anderson felt students studying in Belleville are enjoying greater opportunity than they would at a high school in their own township.

The proposed addition, according to trustee Harmon Montgomery, has provisions for shop and home economics areas, more classrooms, a larger resource centre, additional gymnasium facilities and more staff facilities.

Happy Hours school for the mentally retarded also has grown overcrowded, and Prince Edward school trustees are considering an addition.

Prince Edward county board of education business administrator R. A. Short said today no cost figure for the proposed addition is available. Trustees are discussing with department of education representatives what can be justified in light of present student population at Kente School this year has an enrolment of 625.

Mr. Short said consideration is being given in re-arrangement of students in the smaller schools and may affect the final addition at Kente. Among the elementary schools in Ameliasburg township are Massassauga with a population of 150, Redmerville with 85 pupils and Milldred Corke with 64.

Home economics and shop facilities have been discussed in connection with the new addition. Ameliasburg students remain the only ones in Prince Edward county who do not receive home economics or shop instruction.

Radio Recovered

They report a man was observed taking the radio after shattering the store's front window shortly before midnight.

The stolen property — valued at $42.95, — was found behind the Avalon Motel on North Front by a guest this morning. The guest turned the radio in to the motel owner who then notified police.

The store window will cost $300 to replace.

Police are still looking for the robber.

Better Life A Phone Call Away

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Daily, George Garrow waits for what could be the gift of a lifetime.

Mr. Garrow, 45, is a victim of disease that lost him both kidneys.

He now waits for a donor who could realize the organ transplant which — if successful — would give him a new, easier lease on life.

At present, survival is a matter of vital routine. Three times a week Mr. Garrow has his blood system linked into a dialysis machine, containing an artificial kidney.

Then, for the next six hours, the equipment, monitored by his wife, Isabel, he waits while his blood circulates through the substitute, artificial organ and is repurified.

The apparatus is the only one at present in the city — although not in the Quinte area, say the Garrows. There are others, involved in the same process — and the same situation: Waiting the momentous donation that could return them to a more normal way of life.

There are more people stricken with disease — and the loss of one or both of the vital organs — than is commonly realized, says Mrs. Garrow.

Hence the low rate of donations — compared to eye banks, she believes.

"If only people were aware of it, aware of what a donation could do — the life it could give another person," she ponders, as she bustles about the dialysing apparatus before beginning her husband's treatment.

It's a year ago this week since Mrs. Garrow, popularly known as "Mickie" joined a stock clerk at Northern Electric, watched the machine being installed in her home — its arrival the results of her determination to assist her husband.

Earlier, she had spent about two months — including her annual work vacation— learning the intricacies of its operation at Kingston General Hospital before hospital authorities deemed her qualified and released the machine to the Garrow household. This freed Mr. Garrow from repeated journeys to Kingston for hospital treatment.

The need, for such treatment first became apparent in 1970 when Mr. Garrow — then an equipment tester at Northern — had his kidney ailment first diagnosed. A year later it became critical while when doctors decided both organs had to be removed. At that time their were operating at only 10 per cent efficiency — sufficient to cause blood pressure and heart problems, says Mr. Garrow.

Since then, it's been a matter of waiting for a replacement organ to be donated for transplant.

Twice, says Mr. Garrow, he has been close to reaching his hopes.

The first opportunity came when he was in hospital, recovering from an operation linking an artery and vein to assure free circulation prepatory to dialysis. At that time, doctors told him they believed a kidney — matching his blood and skin tissue types — would be available. But he had developed what appeared a slight case of pneumonia and physicians were wary of operating.

Then, four weeks ago, the phone call he daily listens for came.

A youth had suffered a fatal head injury and — if his family consented — his kidneys would be available, the Garrows were told.

They rushed to Kingston — and waited. Finally, they were told one member of the family objected. The operation was off.

Although bitterly disappointed, Mr. Garrow says he could readily understand the personal feelings — at a time of personal distress — behind the decision.

So R was back to Belleville — and more waiting.

"You get used to waiting. You get accustomed after awhile. You have to," says Mr. Garrow.

The Garrows — parents of two children, Steven 12, and eight - year - old Mary-Catherine, also have had to adapt to a new way of life.

For one thing, Mr. Garrow has to retire early. The regularity with which he must undergo treatment restricts his activity.

He admits he finds himself "discouraged at times" — particularly with events involving his children when treatment bars his participation.

Yet without the dialysis treatment, he could only survive 10 days, perhaps two weeks at most.

And, up to a few years ago, he emphasized, people were dying because it wasn't available.

It was a big change in our lives. But now we take it for granted. We know it's got to be done.

Around home he's "started to be a good cook."

There are the days when time does hang heavy, Mr. Garrow says.

"But I hate to leave the house, because you never know when you might get a call."

Five Can Govern College

PICTON (Staff) — Low turnouts for several recent meetings of the Loyalist College board of governors last night prompted a decision to appoint a quorum of five members, one of whom must be the chairman or vice-chairman, to conduct business when attendance is poor.

It was observed board members had been at the meetings from a wide area and for several meetings only five or six arrived.

An original motion by the management committee seeking board appointment of an executive committee comprised of the chairman, vice-chairman and the chairmen of the standing committees of the board to act when a quorum was unavailable was amended.

Several board members asked if an executive committee's decisions would be subject to approval by a full-meeting of the board and were told minutes of their sessions would have to be ratified.

Board member Wilfred Wilkinson observed if the original motion concerned him because board operations could fall into the hands of three persons. Also, by appointing an executive committee, the board would be establishing a precedent.

Mr. Wilkinson said he would support an amended resolution calling for a committee of five persons "since the idea of three persons running a board, especially the chairman and the vice-chairman, doesn't appeal to me."

Trailer Burns

HALLOWELL (Staff) — A Hallowell township woman and her family were left homeless yesterday when fire destroyed their 33-foot house trailer at RR8, Picton.

The trailer, owned by Mrs. Charlotte Troyvalchuck was valued at $5,400. The owner was at work when the blaze broke out at about 9 a.m. and her children were attending school.

The Big Machine from Belleville

Big coal stacking and reclaiming machine now in operation at Vancouver's Roberts Bank superport is a product of Belleville industry. Built by Stephens-Adamson division of Borg Warner (Canada), the $1.9-million mechanical complex stands 177 feet high, straddling a 1,500-foot long conveyor-belt linking railroad to dockside. Operated by one man it can stockpile 4,000 tons of coal an hour and — in reverse — can load 3,000 tons an hour from shore to ship. It has increased stockpiling capacity of purchaser — Westshore Terminals Ltd. — from 560,000 tons to more than one million tons.

Wayne Loses War; Kings Claim First

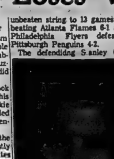
By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Wayne Cashman's pugilism on ice has had him in trouble before, but it's doubtful his absence has as effectively emasculated Boston Bruins as it did Thursday night.

Cashman, the aggressor, took a unanimous decision in his fight with Los Angeles rookie Don Kozak and was rewarded with a five-minute major penalty.

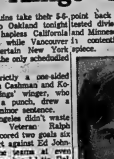
His manhandling of the Kings' player apparently aroused Kozak's team-mates because they wasted no time in rapping four goals into the Bruin net en route to a 5-2 win that moved the surprising victors atop the National Hockey League's West Division.

In nailing down their sixth straight win, the Kings moved into a lofty position that hadn't held since March 23, 1968.



Elsewhere Thursday, Montreal Canadiens stretched their unbeaten string to 13 games by beating Atlanta Flames 6-1 and Philadelphia Flyers defeated Pittsburgh Penguins 4-2.

The defending Stanley Cup champion Bruins take their 5-6-5 point record into Oakland tonight against the hapless California Golden Seals while Vancouver Canucks entertain New York Islanders in the only scheduled games.



It was strictly a one-sided fight between Cashman and Kozak. The Kings' winger, who didn't land a punch, drew a two-minute minor sentence.

But Los Angeles didn't waste any time. Veteran Ralph Backstrom scored two goals six seconds apart against Ed Johnston with the teams at even strength to break a 1-1 tie. Dale Tallon smashed the margin to 3-1 but Bob Berry and Real Lemieux tallied with Cashman still in the penalty box to make the win in front of 10,468 Los Angeles fans.

The win gave the Kings 14 points and moved them one point ahead of Chicago Black Hawks who are one point up on Philadelphia. Atlanta is another

A major penalty also keyed the Montreal victory at Atlanta. Following a scoreless first period, the Flames' Kerry Ketter drew a high-sticking major infraction 47 seconds into the second period.

Before he returned, the Canadiens opened a 3-0 lead on goals by Marc Tardif, his first of two in the game, Frank Mahovlich and Chuck Arnason.

Ketter scored Atlanta's only goals Phil Myre with 39 saves while Ken Dryden, who left shutout on Keith McCreary's score at 15:10 of the third period, faced only 22.

Bill Clement scored the winner and set up team-mate Bobby Clarke with an insurance score as Philadelphia vaulted over Atlanta in the

Ali To Meet Irish

BOSTON (AP) — Muhammad Ali, former world heavyweight boxing champion, is booked to fight in Boston Dec. 13 despite his reported denial. The Associated Press learned Thursday night.

"I don't know how that story got out," a spokesman for Ali said in a telephone interview from Deer Lake, Pa. "Muhammad Ali is fighting in Boston Dec. 13 for promoter Sam Silverman."

The spokesman, C. B. Atkins, arranges fights and various other bookings for Ali, who is keeping busy while awaiting a return bout with champion Joe Frazier. Atkins is employed by Herbert Muhammad, Ali's manager.

Earlier Thursday, Ali was quoted at Deer Lake as denying he will fight Jack O'Halloran next month in Boston Garden.

"I am not fighting Jack O'Halloran," Ali was quoted as saying. "I am fighting Bob Foster Nov. 21 at Stanleine, Nev."

Atkins said that Ali is working out at a training camp at Deer Lake near Reading, Pa., for his bout with Foster, the world light heavyweight champion.

Windsor In Wings

WINDSOR (CP) — If Nick Milett is thinking about moving the American Hockey League franchise he owns from Cleveland to Windsor, he is apparently keeping his thoughts to himself.

Officials of the AHL, the Cleveland Barons and the Windsor Arena agreed Thursday they were unaware such a move was being considered.

Milett has not been available for comment since a Dartmouth, N.S., radio station reported early this week that a shift of the Cleveland franchise was in the works.

Radio station CFDR said it had learned that Windsor and Milwaukee were being considered as new playing sites for the Barons.

AHB president Jack Butterfield said in a telephone interview from West Springfield, Mass., that he knew Milett was considering moving the franchise somewhere, but did not know Windsor was being considered.

Montreal Can Set New Trend

TORONTO (CP) — Jim Worrell, Canada's representative on the International Olympic Committee, said Thursday Montreal's preparation for the 1976 Olympic Games can set a trend that will allow less affluent nations to play host to the Games.

He told the Empire Club of Toronto that Montreal should "alter the trend toward gigantism" and take the Games out of the political showcase and return it to a sports festival for athletes.

"Montreal is not in competition with Munich, Tokyo or Mexico City," said Worrall. "We should not try to outdo those great spectacles and make them look small."

"It (the 1976 Games) should be the Games that alter the trend toward gigantism. I have had letters from East Africa that indicate even Uganda feels it can hold the Games if Montreal is successful in bringing the Games back to their original purpose. . . .

"What is required is an official commitment of support from the federal government, whichever one it may be. It is absolutely essential as a special insentus to our first attempt.

"Montreal could save the life of the Olympics . . . the flavor, the color, the atmosphere. . . .

Loy Fires Texas

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Bobby Loy emerged—at least briefly—from one of baseball's with a blazing putter that helped him shoot a seven-under-par 65 for the first round lead Thursday in the $125,000 Texas Open golf tournament.

"I just seemed to have it all together," the stocky, 22-year-old long-time club pro said. "It seemed that when I needed a good shot I could pull it off, so that's what you've got to do in this game of golf."

Scoring 6s on the 7,011-yard Woodlake Golf Club course were Ryder Cup star J.C. Snead, veteran Charles Sifford, George Johnson, Australian Bob Shaw, Dale Douglass, Ron Streck, Leland Gibson and Gary Groh.

Ben Kern of Toronto and Billy Casper were in another large group at 69. Lee Trevino, the British Open champion and the pre - tourney favorite, he had to rally to salvage a 70 while Gene Littler, attempting a comeback after a cancer operation, had a 75.

Nordiques Fire Philadelphia

By THE CANADIAN PRESS
Quebec Nordiques turned on the firepower for 57 seconds in the second period Thursday night, then shuffled out a Philadelphia rally en route to a 6-3 win over Philadelphia in World Hockey Association play at Quebec City.

Power play goals by Michel Archambault and Robert Guindon sandwich a score by Rejean Giroux nudged the Nordiques into a 5-0 lead which Philadelphia never was able to threaten despite three third-period goals.

In other games, Los Angeles Sharks and Ottawa Nationals played to a 5-5 overtime tie and New York Raiders defeated Minnesota Fighting Saints 4-3.

Tonight the Raiders move to into Winnipeg against the Jets and Quebec Nordiques entertain Houston Aeros.

Archambault and Guindon tallied first-period goals for Quebec in front of 8,283 fans. Rejean Houle and Jacques Richard gave Quebec goal after Bryan Campbell put Philadelphia on the scoreboard. Don O'Donoghue's first two goals of the season gave the Nordiques a commanding lead.

Sharks' Gary Veneruzzo and Steve King exchanged third-period goals, but neither club was able to break the stalemate in the 10-minute overtime that was halted briefly by a fight between Steve Warr of Ottawa and Steve Sutherland.

Warr was challenged one another late in the first period and drew minor penalties. The scrap, witnessed by 2,448 at the Ottawa Civic Centre, had the

Finley Fined For Series Handouts

NEW YORK (AP) — Commissioner Bowie Kuhn has put the touch on Oakland Athletics owner Charles O. Finley for $2,000 and the baseball boss wasn't even a hero in the World Series.

Finley's habit of rewarding various players with $5,000 bonuses for their Series accomplishments violated baseball law which prohibits incentive bonuses, according to the commissioner.

Series hero Gene Tenace and outfielder Joe Rudi both received the instant payoffs from their boss following the second game of the Series.

Shortstop Mike Hegan also received a pay increase following the American League playoffs.

Kuhn said that Finley's fine was not intended to affect the commitments made by Finley to the players. That statement left Finley mystified.

"The commissioner rules the players can still get the money but I'm supposedly violating a rule and I'm fined," he said Thursday.

Finley said the bonuses were given for the performances of the players during the regular season. He insisted that he had explained to the commissioner that the bonuses were not for playoff performances.

The Oakland owner, who locked horns with Kuhn earlier this year when the commissioner stepped into negotiations with holdout pitcher Vida Blue, said he still hadn't "paid one penny" of the $5,000 raises he promised his three players.

"Certainly, I'm going to pay them what I promised publicized on the outstanding performances they had during the year," Finley said.

PGA Bounced From Quarters

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — The Professional Golfers' Association (PGA) may have an opportunity for a fresh start in 1973—they're being kicked out of their headquarters in 1972.

"They're not good neighbors. They're quarrelsome," declared Arthur Ormsby. "Mac-Arthur, one of the world's wealthiest men, has come on a time when your patience runs out."

MacArthur gave notice Thursday he was terminating the PGA's lease at the end of the year at the three-course PGA National Golf Club. MacArthur built the club and set it face wing for the PGA in 1965.

However, PGA president Warren Orlick said in Birmingham, Mich., he had not received official word of the lease termination and added: "To my knowledge, we haven't done anything to warrant termination of the lease."

The PGA's original 10-year lease runs through 1974.

"I've had trouble with the PGA since the day we met," said MacArthur, who has built Bankers Life and Casualty Co. into an institution with $500 million in assets.

"I don't think the PGA has ever lived up to membership that I terminated negotiations on a new lease two years ago. I think it's time the members knew," said MacArthur.

He charged that Frank Cardi, a candidate for PGA president, is running on a platform that includes cancellation of the lease.

Orlick countered that there was no effort on the part of the 16-man PGA governing body to break the lease and that he personally had approached MacArthur a new lease proposal in March.

MacArthur said the PGA had been paying his $40,000-a-year lease for office space. He doesn't support the course year-round.

"We do have a year-round membership of very fine people who pay their annual dues and support the course year-round. They're entitled to some consideration."

Orlick said MacArthur's termination attempt will be discussed at the PGA executive meeting Nov. 10-17 in Beverly Hills, Calif.

COLD DUCK?
You must be kidding!
Nobody kids about a great wine in a champagne bottle with a wired-on cork, and a fancy foil capsule. This pink, pink wine with millions of crazy bubbles deserves all that fuss. And a name like COLD DUCK. After all, what else could you call it? After the first sip, you'll call it delicious.

Albert Buys Hockey School

By ERIC EMERSON

Does Tam O'Shanter have better jobs in hockey schools? Albert College officials obviously believe they do.

The Belleville school has purchased the rights to Tam O'Shanter after their Toronto facilities were destroyed by fire and the hockey clinic will operate exclusively here.

"We'd like to get away from the concept of hockey schools run by NHL players," says Tam O'Shanter director Larry Hughes. "Just because they can play the game, doesn't necessarily mean that they're qualified instructors."

The newly - based Belleville organization stresses more ice time and a more rounded curriculum in place of big name instructors. They operated the school at Albert College last summer for four weeks and plan to increase the number to six this year.

The organization isn't simply geared to that six - week period, however. "Our real idea isn't just to limit it to the summertime," explains Hughes, "we hope to operate year round in conjuction with the other-recreation programs in general." As part of this year - round participation, the school is planning to hold a minor hockey tournament at Christmas for peewee and bantam teams. Clubs from Belleville will be invited as well as a number of out-of-town entries.

While the Tam O'Shanter instructors aren't as familiar to hockey fans as Bobby Orr or Brad Park, they are established names in the field. Head instructor Bill Purcell coached at York University for nine years after 10 seasons in the pro ranks. He was voted top coach in Canada at the National Coaching Clinic held in 1967 at Montreal and is currently instructing as part of the Hockey Canada program.

Another major figure connected with the organization is Wally Kormylo who trains power skating. Kormylo has taught power skating for 22 years and has been associated with NHL teams in Chicago and St. Louis as well as a number of American universities.

Compulsory attendance during the week-long period that each boy puts in is required for the one - and - a - quarter hour sessions of power skating and hockey instruction as well as the hour - and - a - half of scrimmaging, lectures and either weight training or karate. It totals seven and a half hours per day.

In addition to the compulsory hockey sessions, a number of other athletic fields are open to boys attending the camp. Instruction is given in sailing, swimming, soccer, tennis, golf, horseback riding and archery for those people interested.

Doug Jodoin, dean of men at Albert College has been chosen to head the six-man group of phys-ed instructors who will be looking after the optional athletics. "We're aiming to make the school a total living experience, not just a means of making money. That's why we got involved with it," said Jodoin.

The ice instruction which was held last year at Trenton Community Gardens, is conducted with groups of 40 boys working with the four hockey instructors for a 10-1 ratio. "We're attracting for an enrolment of 200 boys per week this time," says Hughes. "we had about 185 per week last summer and we found that we could handle that quite comfortably."

Rates for a one-week period will be about $140 for boys boarding at the school. Local boys who wish to attend will be charged roughly $65 for the complete benefits of the program, but without room and board.

While there won't be any big names on the instruction roster, there will be a few among the alumni ranks. Peter and Frank Mahovalich, Dave Keon, Mike Walton and Eddie "Acid Air" among the pros who have attended the school since it began operating in 1958.

Tiremen Nip Napanee

Mark Coates and Russ Herrington played a major role in Belleville's Western Tire Juvenile's defeat of Napanee. Both Coates and Herrington contributed a hat trick to Western Tire's tallies.

Peter Ackerman, John Bosas and Jim Richardson of Belleville which came off a 8-4 loss to Trenton Wednesday night, netted the others for the juveniles.

Up and at It

Unbeaten Cats Clash Tonight

The two fighting fellows, the Belleville Bobcats and the Peterborough Lions of the Metro Junior "B" hockey league, will battle each other tonight to decide which cat retains its noloss record. The Bobcats hope to maintain their 4-0-2 record against the Lions at Belleville Memorial Arena.

Bob Moore, who has been outstanding in net so far this season, could prove to be the Bobcats bulwark. As Coach Murray Hunter said, "the big key to this game will be the goaltending."

With only John Masterson out of the line-up for the Cats, and centre Paul Lavender-fit, though only sparingly, the Lions should have a tough time against Rick Meagher, Darrell Cole, and the Bobcats two juvenile call - ups, Mark Coates and Paul Smrke. Peterborough did not see these players when they played Belleville in exhibition hockey.

Teachers Pay Penalty Price

The Teachers of the Quinte Hockey league managed 22 minutes of penalties for themselves last night as they were beaten by Central 3-2. Though Teachers John Holgate netted one with less than five minutes remaining, the tallies of Eric Maher, Ted Schwazer, and Steve Moore made Holgates effort too late. Teachers' other goal was scored by P. MacAllister.

In the other Quinte league game last night at Memorial, Bill Goodfellow, Larry Marshall, and Paul Macklin tallied against Rod Lawrence. Reids goals came from Ted Watie, and two from B. Woodike.

Loyalist in OCAA Volleyball

By AL ZABAS
Staff Sportswriter

Stone knees and great dedication are required of the girls on the Loyalist women's volleyball team, the most recent member of the Ontario College Athletic Association's volleyball league. Coach Sharon Cornell herself a new Loyalist arrival from Queen's University, put the girls through their paces Thursday night in preparation for Saturday's 10 game, two match season opener in Oshawa. Loyalist's team will be tested against one of the best in the OCAA this Saturday morning when they face Ottawa's Algonquin College, last year's finalist in the OCAA south eastern division. In the afternoon, Loyalist takes on Oshawa's Durham College, a team they beat five games straight in exhibition play.

"We are lucky," said coach Cornell, "the team we have to beat we play first. The girls won't get nervous waiting for the big match."

Since September 20th, however, the girls have not had the opportunity to worry with three weekly one and a half hour practices, Monday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings after classes.

The practices consist of a 45 minute workout and a scrimmage. Push ups, rolling out of saves, serving, volleying, setting up spikes, spiking and various other equally arduous drills comprise the workout, in preparation for an eight meet season, only three of which will be home games.

Coach Sharon Cornell, whistle in hand, supervises the team during the scrimmage, plotting positioning and strategy.

Dedication is essential to play volleyball at Loyalist, for the inconveniences and denials the girls have to endure are many. The first team practice was held outdoors — the Loyalists gym hasn't been to complete, and of the 24 girls that tried out for the team, 13 now remain, the rest having dropped out discouraged by the pace. The girls have to juggle their personal lives, rearrange working hours, tangle with on the - job training programs to participate.

"Transportation is a definite problem, too," said coach Sharon, "some of the girls have to hitch hike back home into town." As the evenings get darker and colder this will, by no means, be a pleasant task.

"But the girls enjoy the game, they're involved in making the team play as a unit, so they come out."

Their 17-point totals give them a comfortable margin over Kingston's Pete Kennedy and Gary Milroy of Orillia. Kennedy, who started the season with a pair of hat tricks against the Quintes has seven goals and nine assists, while Milroy has counted only three times, but has 13 assists to tie Godson for the lead in that department.

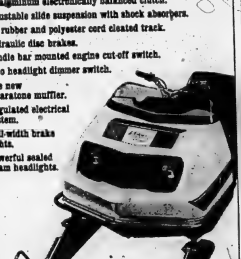
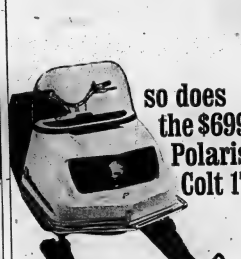
LAG Line Leads League

New York Rangers have the GAG line and Buffalo Sabres have the French Connection, but how about the Belleville Quintes' LAG line — Lorne, Al and George.



The trio certainly hasn't been lagging in the OHA Senior A scoring statistics. Lorne O'Donnell and George Godson are currently tied for first place in the individual scoring statistics, while Ferguson shares the goal scoring lead.



Ferguson has been the line's triggerman with 10 goals, the same number scored by Orillia's Mike Dragon. Both players will have a chance to add to that total when the Quintes travel to Orillia for a Friday night game against the Terriers.

Belleville currently has a 4 1 1 season record, good for a fourth place tie with Owen Sound, while the Terriers' 6-2 mark has them deadlocked for first with Galt Hornets.

The $2099 Polaris TX 500 comes equipped with:

The race-proven Star engine.
High performance fixed jet carburators (1 per cylinder).
All-aigminum electronically balanced clutch.
Adjustable slide suspension with shock absorbers.
16" rubber and polyester cord closed tires.
Hydraulic disc brakes.
Handle bar mounted engine cut-off switch.
Hi-lo headlight dimmer switch.
The new Polaratone muffler.
Regulated electrical system.
Full-width brake lights.
Powerful sealed beam headlights.

so does the $699 Polaris Colt 175

Which proves that you don't have to spend a bundle to get a snowmobile that looks beautiful, performs like a racer, handles like a dream, starts easily and stops quickly.

The Polaris Colt 175 does all this for just $699.00. (The same kind of value goes into every other Polaris model too.)

That's why most second-time snowmobile buyers are switching to Polaris. They know what to look for in a snowmobile: features. And Polaris has them all, as standard equipment on all models.

The famous Polaris Star engine. The first engine designed specifically for snowmobiles. It has proven itself by winning race after race, year after year. The engine has an oil-aluminum clutch which is so perfectly tuned that it is electronically spin balanced to 12,000 RPM. It adjusts smoothly and automatically to the torque requirements of varying snow conditions.

The Star engine starts easily too. Just one or two pulls will usually do the trick.

And stopping is just as simple. Thanks to the Polaris hydraulic disc brake. It gives you fast, safe stopping power at all times, from all speeds.

Which brings us to the Polaris slide suspension system. You can say goodbye to those uncomfortable, unsafe rides over rough and bumpy terrain. A Polaris will literally glide over even the worst trails. Which means that you are in control of the machine at all times — even at high speeds.

But to really appreciate what Polaris has to offer you have to see them for yourself. Your local Polaris dealer will give you the full story on these and other Polaris features.

Then the choice is yours. $2099. $699. Or somethin in between.

Whichever you choose, you'll be getting the best there is.

Hurricanes Un-Ram-able?

HAMILTON (CP) — Coach Fred Jazvac of Hamilton Hurricanes plans to meet Regina Rams' running attack with a strong defence and counter with a good ground game himself when the teams meet Nov. 11 in the Canadian junior football championship at Saskatoon.

"Yes, I've already had a look at some of their game films," said Jazvac when asked if he was familiar with the Rams.

"They have an excellent ground game and they like to use this to control the ball. I guess that's what impressed me most about them—their ball control."

But the Hamilton coach hopes he has the defence that can contain the Rams' rush.

"We've met some great running teams before. The Scarborough Rams, for example, had a good running game, but we stopped them. We have an outstanding defence. I think the defence is our strongest unit and I think, I hope, we can stop Regina."

The defence, led by tackles George Sorbara and Bob Shuhany, blanked Oshawa Hawkeyes in the Hurricanes took a 19-0 victory in the Ontario Junior Football Conference semi-final playoff.

The Hurricanes then ousted the defending Scarborough Rams 22-14 in the two-game, total-point conference final. The Rams won the first game 11-6 to hand Hamilton its only loss of the season and the Hurricanes won the seconds game 15-8.

Hamilton and Scarborough each had 10-0 won-loss records in regular-season play.

Then, it was on to Ottawa where the Hurricanes took the Eastern Canadian title last weekend with an 11-7 win over the Sooners.

In 10 season games and four playoff games, the Hurricanes scored a total of 399 points while their defence allowed only 110.

A large part of the regular-season scoring was accounted for by receiver John Lavery, 10 touchdowns and three singles, running back Terry McNutt, 10 touchdowns and placekicker Rick Calapska, nine touchdowns.

"We're still basically a running team and our first-string runners right now are John Kelley and Rick Chalupka," said Jazvac.

The coach explained that despite his work through most of the season, McNutt has been relegated to bench-warming by the emergence of Kelley, one of the heroes of the victory over Ottawa where he ran 73 yards for a touchdown.

Kelley had been laboring in the Hurricanes defensive backfield most of the season until Jazvac decided to try the speedster on offence in the playoffs.

Chalupka was the club's leading grinder during the season with 1,011 yards on 180 carries to lead the Ontario conference's Western Division.

Lavery was second among division receivers with 16 catches for 542 yards and also second among the punters with a 37.6 yard average on 74 kicks.

At quarterback is Joe Fabish who took over from Brad Hall midway in the season and completed 31 of 65 pass attempts while giving up four interceptions. Hall completed 24 of 47 during his tenure and had 10 intercepted.

Wins Jazvac, a Hamilton school teacher in his first year as head coach of the club, the Hurricanes are going to the national final for the first time in their 19-year history.

The trip to Saskatoon, however, has posed some financial problems for the club which had poor fan support during the season. Club president Rick Horn said earlier in the week the team still needed to raise at least $4,000 to cover expenses for the playoffs and a fund drive was being mounted in the community.

Judge Stumped

Judge Hewak was unable to come to a conclusion on another controversial aspect of the card, a claim by Detroit fighter Jim Christopher that his life was threatened unless he threw a preliminary bout.

Christopher, knocked out by Canadian heavyweight champion George Chuvalo of Toronto in the seventh round, said three days after the match that he had been warned to take the dive.

Christopher, a one-time sparring partner of Chuvalo, said he did not know the man who made the alleged threat but he did not believe Chuvalo, who was looking forward to a match with former world champion Muhammad Ali in Vancouver, was involved in the plot.

Judge Hewak said there was no evidence to back up the story Christopher told, nor was there any evidence that he had deliberately fabricated the yarn.

The judge said he was led to speculate that someone may have suggested, rather than threatened, that Christopher handle himself in a way to keep the risk of possible injury to Chuvalo at a minimum.

"Assuming this was the case, then it may account for Mr. Christopher choosing not to continue past the second round."

Judge Hewak said two other bouts on the card-knockouts by Muhammad Ali Kamaric over Jesse Fagan and Narlis Ahmat over Ben Poe — ended in the second-round dives. Kamaric is from Regina and Ahmat from Toronto. Their opponents were both from Detroit.

The Manitoba boxing commission had handled the promotion in a "shockingly" loose fashion although this was due in part to lack of experience, the judge said.

The commission members weren't familiar enough with the provisions of the act and regulations. Otherwise, they would have started more quiet matches and less risk of fraud.

Commission member Don Rowand, Ray Dorey and Norm Cotton suspended all involved in the card except Sparks and his trainer.

Judge Hewak said Jack Keller of Regina, promoter of the card, had a limited knowledge of the sport and was unaware of the act's requirements, more out of ignorance than a desire to defraud fight fans.

He said the boxing commission should affiliate itself with the Canadian Boxing Federation and preferably an international association. It could subscribe to current boxing publications to check the records of proposed contestants.

Warriors Winning

OAKLAND (AP) — Cazzie Russell, Rick Barry and Nate Thurmond combined to score 63 points as Golden State Warriors defeated Portland Trail Blazers 118-104 in the only National Basketball Association game played Thursday night.

The victory was the fourth straight for the Warriors and gives them a half-game lead over Los Angeles Lakers in the Pacific Division.

Russell, who sparked a third-quarter rally that brought Golden State from 19 points behind, tallied 23 points.

Barry and Thurmond each had 20 points, with Barry getting 10 assists.

Sidney Wicks got Portland off to a fast start with 16 points in the first quarter, but was unable to score in the second period. He got hot again in the third quarter and finished the game with 30 points.

IT ISN'T TRUE
That only higher income families can afford to buy their own home. If you are in the $5,000, to $7,000. income bracket you can have your own two, three or four bedroom condominium unit. Monthly payments as low as $110.00 which includes interest, principal and taxes.
Let us show you our furnished model.

BEAT THE RISE IN INTEREST RATES
See our many houses financed with mortgage bearing 8¾% interest. With a down payment of 5% the purchase of one of our units could save your nearly $20.00 monthly on payments. We have new houses in the West side in a furnished sub-division. Even the roads are already paved. Possession by 15th of December. East side houses available in November.

TWO NEW SUB-DIVISIONS
Now is the time to select your lot for spring construction in one of our new areas. One is on the West side the other in the East. Each has a number of lots with large frontages. Act fast if you are serious about a bigger lot.

Bangladesh Constitution Copy of That of India

By RAM SUNDAR
CP Correspondent

BOMBAY (CP) — There is quiet satisfaction in India that the new nation of Bangladesh will have a democratic constitution on the Indian model.

As the Bangladesh Constituent Assembly began its historic session in Dacca recently, political and diplomatic observers in many Asian capitals were intently interested. Two gallitos people lied in India, while another 15 million moved about from place to place within Bangladesh because of fear.

The second most notable thing about constitution-making in Bangladesh is its commitment to democratic principles.

The 153-clause draft constitution bill presented by Law Minister Kamal Hussain says that this country proposes to be one of the new Asian nations which has democracy, socialism, secularism and nationalism.

The draft provides for an independent judiciary, fundamental rights, freedom of religion, the right to property, free media and free and free speech and prohibition of forced labor.

The draft bill says it is the fundamental responsibility of the government to provide the people with the basic necessities of life—including food, clothing, education and medical care.

It promises a "radical transformation" of rural areas through the promulgation of an agricultural revolution.

The Parliament of Bangladesh will have 300 members, with at least 15 seats reserved for women.

Huge Indian influence in the country has said that the work of drawing up the constitution will be completed as soon as possible so that Bangladesh can have its first democratic general election. This is another promising aspect, especially in the light of allegations made by some political parties that Sheikh Mujibur Rahman and his Awami League party are only interested in monopolizing power in their hands.

Observers do not see any difficulty in the Constituent Assembly adopting the draft constitution without any major changes. But trouble is not entirely ruled out.

Already, Maulana Bhashani, the leader of the pro-Peking leftists in Bangladesh, has threatened to launch an agitation if the Constituent Assembly "rushes through" with the draft constitution.

Bhashani has questioned the right of the former East Pakistan members of the Pakistan National Assembly to constitute themselves as the Constituent Assembly of Bangladesh.

Perhaps the biggest surprise made by Bhashani in his demand that Bangladesh should be basically an Islamic state rooted in Islamic law. This is seen as an attempt to stir up religious feelings against the constitution-makers.

Bhashani told a public rally that "if Prime Minister Rahman ignores the interests of Moslems, there will be another Vietnam in Bangladesh."

'Truth in Advertising' Advocated by President

TORONTO (CP) — To spread "the gospel of truth in advertising" is the most important job of the board of the Association of Canadian Advertisers (ACA), says Alfred Hodges, its new president.

Mr. Hodges, vice-president of corporate relations for Sterling Drug Ltd. of Aurora, Ont., is the chief disciple in an effort by the ACA to carry the message of self-regulation for Canada's advertising industry.

Truth in Advertising is a study conducted by the Toronto School of Theology for the ACA and the Institute of Canadian Advertising in an attempt to set some guidelines by which advertisers evaluate the veracity of their advertisements.

"I feel the onus is on advertisers to make this thing work," he said in an interview Thursday. "After all, we're the people who put up the money and advertisers are in a position to insist that advertisements be written the way they want them."

Mr. Hodges hopes that through the Association of National Advertisers in the United States, the message of the Truth in Advertising study may find its way to the U.S. Federal Trade Commission (FTC).

"Our own president (of Sterling Drug Ltd.) has volunteered to write about Truth in Advertising to Sterling in the United Kingdom and Australia, both of which have advertising organizations who have expressed interest in the concept."

Additionally, Mr. Hodges will be carrying the message of the study to the ACA membership across the country, with regional meetings throughout the year.

Mr. Hodges said he does not expect any lessening in problems with provincial and federal governments.

He mentioned recently-announced Quebec regulations on advertising to children that are expected to pose many problems for advertisers.

"Certainly since the (federal government) sessions closed at the end of June there has been a lessening, but if the proposed Competition Act is brought back into Parliament, it will probably continue to pose problems for the advertising industry."

He said that after having talked with Robert Andras, minister of consumer and corporate affairs, he decided that the minister seems to be interested in developing a spirit of co-operation with advertisers and seems to have a desire to make the competition bill workable.

Mr. Hodges defended advertisers from the continuing accusation that they design advertisements to mislead the public.

"I don't believe any advertiser knowingly is out to mislead or deceive the public. Our job is to sell merchandise and we want customers coming back."

He admitted that criticism in recent years has produced some benefits.

"I don't think that all government legislation is bad for us."

The ACA is also involved in other areas of advertising's "social responsibility," such as too many commercials on television and the way in which they are presented.

He said he is concerned that one-third of Canada's national advertisers do not belong to the ACA and wants to try to have them join.

This would provide greater strength in withstanding attacks against advertising and also in establishing a larger number directly involved in the ACA's programs to better advertising by self-regulation.

Mr. Hodges, who joined Sterling Drug in 1947, was previously in the advertising department of the Windsor Star and Chrysler Canada Ltd. of Windsor.

Midget Growing

OTTAWA (CP) — Barry Burgess is a midget—21 and 4 feet, 2½ inches tall.

A hormone deficiency stopped his growth when he was seven. But thanks to medical treatment he has grown three inches in the last 16 months. His goal is at least four feet.

The key to his new growth is Dr. Kamal Kowapil, a specialist in glandular disorders, along with injections of human growth hormone from cadavers.

The hormone which sets growth is secreted in the pituitary gland, a small gland located in the brain, just behind the eyes.

As yet, the hormone cannot be made artificially and animal hormones cannot be substituted.

The treatments are given over a six-month period. Between each, there is a six-month gap, during which the effects are noted and assessed.

Doctors say only about five per cent of dwarfism is "pituitary people" benefit from the hormone treatment because an individual's metabolism may be responsible for his size.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — Prices on the Toronto stock market rose moderately higher in active mid-morning trading today.

The industrial index, considered a major indicator of market trend, was up .77 to 208.52, golds 1.96 to 180.64, base metals .85 to 83.38 and western oils 1.41 to 249.22.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 1.16 million shares compared with 760,000 traded by the same time Thursday.

Beverage, merchandising, pipeline and oil refining stocks were prominent in the early market registering the most gains while communications, steel, utility and general manufacturing issues were off slightly.

Gains of more than one to 3 1/2 points included Canada Cement Co. Ltd. up to 35, International Utilities ¼ up to 22¼ and Bow Valley ¼ up to 23⅝.

Losses of one point or less included Dupont of Canada 1¼ to 81¾, Interprovincial Steel and Pipe up to 15, Algoma's Central ¼ to 11¼ and Foodex ¼ to 6¾.

Iso Mines advanced 55 cents to $2.95, Copperfields 33 cents to $2.95 and Teck Corp. A 25 cents to $5.00. Barymin dropped 50 cents to $2.50.

Canadian Superior climbed 1 to 53¼, and Francana ¼ to 12¾.

Text of Statement By Prime Minister

OTTAWA (CP) — Following is the text of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's statement Thursday night in which he announced his Liberal government would remain and face Parliament as a minority:

At the beginning of the election campaign, I said that we were anxious to talk to the people of Canada and to listen to them. I think I can say, The ballots cast on Monday reflected the view of a good many Canadians that the government in the past four years—fifty years—was not satisfactory.

Observers have not been able to identify with certainty any single issue. Indeed any package of issues which led to that result. That vote is for me and for and to my colleagues better than any other mechanism could do that there have been failures.

What the vote has not done, however, is to express any clear degree of approval for any single party. The Parliament of the governing must continue through the period of minority. Several recounts until the final tally at known.

Under the Canadian constitution, the government is responsible to Parliament. The continued existence of my government will therefore depend on the will of the House of Commons. This is the essence of the parliamentary form of democracy.

The voters of Canada have sent to Parliament a new House of Commons. It is now our responsibility to make that House of Commons work. Whether it will work depends on all members and all parties—for no single party has nearly enough support in the House to exercise its will without the co-operation of others.

I wish to say tonight, however, that it is my intention and that of my colleagues to exert every effort to make the House work and to exhibit to the Canadian people that the flexibility of the parliamentary system justifies its continuation as a superior kind of system.

It's my decision therefore, to advise the Governor-General to call Parliament into session as soon as reasonably possible following the return of the final election writ. And it's my intention to refer from the duly-elected representatives of the people confidence in our proposals to deal with those issues of serious concern to all Canadians.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, Nov. 4

Aries (March 21-April 19): Attend unfinished business first, however trivial; willingly persist, repeat words and figures.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Be the middle man, broker, peacemaker, messenger. Keep everybody talking while calmly pursuing bits and pieces of career plans.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): For once you don't really have to turn the wheels—others supply power and direction. Go along for the ride.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Intensely wary the promotion of harmony deserves your cooperation with others. Emotional expression runs deep.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Three beautiful words can undo weeks of preparation. Be prepared to bear strong statements without direct reaction.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): If you have more zest for doing than your fellows, use all energies toward agreed goals. Much incomplete business awaits attention.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be up and out early to do what's most convenient towards productive personal self-interest.

Scorpio (Oct. 3-Nov. 21): Select activities which you do best alone. Avoid experimental or unfamiliar methods.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): This is a time to check off on what on material activity. Take stock of where you're going in your spiritual life.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Join hands for firmer collaboration. Build for better understanding.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A bargain can be found in long sought supplies and equipment used for increased earnings. Learning to use it is something else.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Answer criticism if you must, but in mild, restrained terms or decks rather than words.

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have three fingers on one right hand that, every time they get a little cold, turn white and feel much colder than the other fingers. If I hit something or hold something tight, the same thing happens. After a few minutes the blood returns.

I first noticed it about nine months ago. What can be causing such a thing? I haven't gone to a doctor because it doesn't seem serious. What could it possibly be?—Mrs. R.L.

As I've mentioned so many times in the past, I don't like to diagnose a condition just from a description of it. And neither does my other doctor.

So I'm not going to try to say what your trouble is, but only what it might be. It has the signs of Raynaud's syndrome, a situation involving spasm of the small blood vessel (or some of them) in the extremities—fingers or toes. The vessels tighten up, restricting the blood flow.

There are several causes of this condition, and what your doctor might do about it would depend on what he discovers in examining you.

He probably would tell you to stop smoking. If you are a smoker, Tobacco has a strong effect on these peripheral blood vessels.

Or he might find indications of a glandular deficiency, and treat that.

Or for another possibility he might find pressure in your neck from a cervical rib or from one of the muscles in the neck, with pressure on nerves causing the trouble.

But as for what you can do for yourself—protection of those fingers from cold is about all. Finding the underlying cause is a task you'll have to leave to your doctor.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I would like to know if high blood pressure can be caused by taking birth control pills.—Mrs. D.M.

The pill may cause high blood pressure (or aggravate it, if it is already present) in a small percentage of users—about two to three per cent. Stopping the pill lets the pressure revert to its former level.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a friend in her early 60s who has a growth on the corner of her nose. It looks like a mole, but it keeps getting bigger and bigger.

She has had it for two or more years and it is red, and she says it troubles her very much.

Could this growth be cancer? What could she use to make it go away? She has tried alcohol, methiolate and linament but no luck.—S.C.

The thing meets two of the seven danger signals—a sore that does not heal and a lump—so it could be cancer.

Of course the thing could be a cyst, or a benign tumor, or some such thing, but didn't you think it is high time that you urged her to have it examined by a doctor?

Note to B.W.: Some eyebills tests remain "positive" even after the disease has been cured. Your doctor says your case has been adequately treated, so, yes, it is safe for you to marry.

Contract Bridge

By B. Jay Becker

(Top Record-Holder in Masters' Individual Championship Play)

You are South, neither side vulnerable. The bidding has been:

West	North	East	South
1♥	Pass	2♣	?

What would you bid now with each of the following four hands?

1. ♠K J 10 9 3 ♥Q 6 4 ♦K 7 6 5 3 ♣8 3
2. ♠A K 7 6 3 ♥7 ♦Q J 8 5 2 ♣K 6 5
3. ♠A Q J 9 8 7 ♥5 ♦Q J 8 3 ♣6 4
4. ♠K 8 7 6 5 ♥A Q 7 2 ♦8 ♣Q 6 3

1. Pass. It's certainly reasonable to assume that West has about 14 points for his opening bid, and that East has 10 or more for his response. That doesn't leave much for your poor partner to have, and in fact he could be pointless.

To bid two spades, or double for takeout, would therefore be highly dangerous. The roof could cave in with either action, and, if you were to continue friendly relations with partner, it is better to pass. It is true you had what seemed a good hand when you first looked at it, but it's been shot to pieces by the enemy bidding. You can't afford to make a deal ear to the values East-West are telling each other they have.

2. Double. The same sentiments about partner's hand apply here also, but the difference is that this time you have considerable distributional values in addition to your high cards. There is a distinct possibility of competing successfully against the opponents, even though you know they outnumber you heavily in high-card strength.

Thus, your partner may have: spade Q9852 heart 9653 diamond 103 club 42. In that case you should do well to get four spades, going down one or two, rather than let the enemy bid and make four hearts.

3. Four spades. You don't expect to make four spades, though you might if you got lucky. The real purpose of this wholesale bid is to hamper the opponents' communications so that they can't quietly talk things over at a low level. Occasionally this strategy will pay exceptionally good dividends when the opponents either double hastily or wind up choosing the wrong contract.

4. Pass. Here, as in the first hand, you take your medicine and pass. The 15 high-card points you started with have shrunk considerably in value, as plainly indicated by the East-West bidding. Your K-J of hearts in front of the heart bidder are worth much less than they were before the bidding started, and the same can be said with accuracy about the rest of your hand. This is no time to try to be a hero, for you are clearly outgunned. To bid two diamonds at this point would be highly unrealistic.

Tomorrow: A long shot.

CP News Roundup

GI All Gone, Children Stay

Within a year, they say, monthly income has dropped to the piaster equivalent of $35 from $250. Many have half-American children to support.

"Sometimes here, two, three days, I never see one American," said Le Anh, 28.

She lives in a dark, one-room alcove off a dirt alley a few blocks from the hotel with her 68-year-old mother and three children, two half-American and one half-Korean.

Le Anh said the American contractor she lived with asked her to get an abortion the second time she became pregnant.

"He tell me first baby," Le Anh said. "Go to doctor. I no do. I say first you, I love baby. I need baby."

U.S. Marines came ashore at Da Nang in 1965. The last American combat unit in South Vietnam left Da Nang in August.

The old woman who runs the hotel bar said that more than half the 20 girls who worked for her as prostitutes have children fathered by Americans.

Country-wide, official estimates on the number of such children range from 5,000 to 20,000. Some are in orphanages but most live with their mothers.

"Americans go home but their babies stay, and this is no place for them," the old lady said.

"Round eyes, straight noses and light hair make them different from other children. They should go to America, but Americans say no."

Asked whether the prostitutes use any type of birth control, she said: "No, they think it will hurt their future babies."

Took Bribes

TORONTO (CP) — A Montreal cigar company official testified in county court Thursday that Cuban trade officials accepted bribes to purchase "off-specs" polyethylene produced by Union Carbide Canada Ltd.

Henry Marvin, of Allied Cigar Company Ltd., made the allegations after admitting he had not "volunteered" the information the first time he appeared to testify in the fraud trial of John Vanderkop.

Vanderkop, now living in Holland, was formerly export manager of the Toronto operations of Union Carbide. Prosecution followed a company complaint. The Crown is attempting to prove that Vanderkop, during his 10 years as manager, indulged in payoffs, tariff breaking and other export transactions without company knowledge or approval.

Tip Problem

OTTAWA (CP) — R. A. Gingerich, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, said Thursday a reduction in the Ontario minimum wage for persons receiving tips would "penalize employees."

Commenting on reports that the Ontario government may set a lower minimum wage for employees receiving gratuities, he said in a news release that tips are not included in the employees salary when calculating vacation pay, pensions and severence pay and are therefore considered "an unsure source of income."

Tighter Controls

OTTAWA (CP) — Immigration department officials have moved to tighten checks on would-be illegal immigrants, a department spokesman said Thursday.

The new system involves having a special inquiry officer on hand at Toronto and Montreal airports to ensure that visitors entering Canada are bona fide tourists.

Warn Smokers

VICTORIA (CP) — The British Columbia government announced Thursday that, effective immediately, all printed cigarette advertisements in the province must carry health warnings and that all cigarette packages must carry warnings by Dec. 1.

Plan Hearings

OTTAWA (CP) — The International Joint Commission (IJC) Thursday announced two public hearings to discuss water pollution problems in Lake Superior and its basin.

Not Champagne

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec Court of Appeal rejected a bid Thursday by Chateau-Gai Wines Ltd. to reverse a 1968 ruling forbidding the company to describe its sparkling wines as "champagne."

The appeal court upheld the validity of a Quebec Superior Court judgment and confirmed the $75,000 in "moral damages" in favor of 15 leading champagne producers in France.

Blunt Reply

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (Reuter) — Senator George McGovern rudely derided a young Nixon supporter Thursday night when the youth told him, "Senator, Nixon is going to beat you so bad, you will be sorry you ever left South Dakota."

Turn Back 60

TORONTO (CP) — Immigration officers at Toronto International Airport applied stringent screening procedures Thursday and forced 60 tourists to withdraw their applications to enter Canada.

The tough screening is aimed at stopping the flow of would-be immigrants who are arriving as tourists.

On Thursday, the tourists who arrived from New York, opted to withdraw their applications when they were told they would be ordered deported if they refused, an immigration officer said in an interview from Ottawa.

Move Ballard

TORONTO (CP) — Harold Ballard, 69, president of Maple Leaf Gardens, who was sentenced Oct. 20 to two concurrent three-year terms in Kingston penitentiary, will be moved to a minimum security prison for health reasons, the director of the penitentiary's reception unit said Thursday.

James Phelps said in a telephone interview from Kingston that as an "educated guess" he believes Ballard will be transferred to nearby Collins Bay or Joyceville prison where he can receive treatment for a heart condition.

Probe Burial of Indigents

Undertaker's 'Trial' Is Held in Secret

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario undertakers' board of administration exercised Friday its power to bar the public and press from a hearing of charges against one of its members concerning burial of welfare indigents.

Since the charges were laid last month, the board of administration has refused to name the undertaker or specify the charges. The charges, however, are reported to concern the burial of three indigents.

Barry Swadron, lawyer for the board, was asked to present the board with the argument that since the charges involved alleged misuse of public money, the public and the press should be allowed to attend the hearings.

But the five-man board decided to "exercise its unfettered discretion to continue the hearings in camera." Mr. Swadron said later.

The lawyer for the undertaker said identification of the man would damage his business even if he was cleared.

The board has the power to suspend licences of Ontario undertakers under the Embalmers and Funeral Directors Act.

Three charges were laid under the act against the undertaker following a six-week investigation by Donald Steenson, the board's registrar. They relate to the undertakers' code of ethics, in this case, improper burial.

At the time the affair was made public, North York Controller Mel Lastman told Metropolitan Toronto council that some indigents were buried in a manner "unfit for dogs."

"Can you direct us to the nearest welfare office?"

Britain Awaits Pay-price Controls

LONDON Reuter) — Speculation abounded today over what form of wage and price controls Prime Minister Heath might introduce Monday to curb inflation.

The prime minister is considered certain to disclose a package of statutory measures when he addresses the House of Commons on Britain's economy. But there has been no official indication as to its contents.

He met for three hours with his cabinet Friday to put the finishing touches on measures already worked out on a contingency basis before government talks with industry and the trade unions failed Thursday night to produce a voluntary agreement.

Finding such an agreement had been a top government priority and the breakdown of the talks was felt by observers to leave compulsory controls as the inevitable next step.

Many observers considered the most likely action would be a temporary freeze on wages and prices—or at least limits on increases—which would last several months until a more elaborate system of statutory controls could be devised.

Heath is not expected to have trouble getting the package through Parliament, although strong opposition can be anticipated from the Labor party under former prime minister Harold Wilson.

Tin Mine Seized

VIENTIANE, Laos (Reuter) — Pathet Lao forces have occupied the southern tin mine of Phon Tiou, depriving the Laotian government of a major foreign exchange earner, diplomatic sources said today.

U.S. Plans Billions In Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States government is considering a five-year $7.5-billion program of post-war economic assistance for Indochina, including $2.5 billion for North Vietnam, U.S. government sources have revealed.

Officials who disclosed this said there would be $1 billion for South Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia. The aid effort would break down into four programs—for relief, reconstruction, development and stabilization—they said.

Other countries and international agencies, including the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund and the Asian Development Bank all would be expected to join in a multi-national effort to heal the scars of the Indochina war, these officials said.

Helicopter Rescues Men Aboard Hulk

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — An attempt was to be made today to get a line to a converted Great Lakes freighter that broke away from a tug towing it across Lake Superior Thursday. The 537-foot barge, A. H. Nettleton, went adrift in rough seas with winds ranging as high as 46 knots and 30-to-40-foot waves Thursday night. Five men were aboard the tug Sarah Spencer as United States Coast Guard helicopter Friday. The men were flown to hospital where they were treated for exposure and released, a Coast Guard official reported. The Nettleton was being towed across Lake Superior with a cargo of grain when the cable attaching it to the tug, the Clive L. Moore, snapped. The 125-foot tug was unable to change direction to pursue the barge.

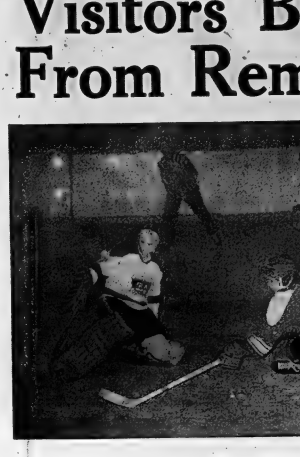
CBS Strike May Affect Football Shows



NEW YORK (AP) — Supervisory personnel filled in today for striking technicians during System cameramen, technicians and engineers who are on strike over failure to reach agreement with the network on a new contract.

A CBS spokesman said early today the walkout Friday and not interrupted prime-time programming Friday night and the only changes expected involved coverage Sunday of two professional football games.

CBS anchorman Walter Cronkite and network correspondents, all members of another union, were crossing the picket lines, the spokesman said.

South Vietnam Will Be Made Third Largest Air Power

SAIGON (AP) — The United States rushed more planes to South Vietnam today in the war's biggest aid effort. It will make the South Vietnamese air force the third largest in the world with more than 2,000 aircraft.

North Vietnam assailed the Nixon administration for the big buildup, saying: "The acts definitely reject Nixon and other U.S. officials' statements that peace in Vietnam is within reach."

Radio Hanoi said: "The Nixon administration is exposing its own face as tricky warmongers. The peace veil that they have been using is only a trick to cover their actual efforts to consolidate the Saigon government which is degenerating and use it to implement the Vietnamization policy and prolong the war in order to impose a neo-colonialism on South Vietnam."

Despite a partial U.S. bombing halt above the 20th parallel, Hanoi said that U.S. air strikes below the parallel against Vinh and Dong Hoi cities and a number of villages in the southern panhandle killed and wounded hundreds of civilians and caused heavy property damage.

The North Vietnamese foreign ministry issued an official statement condemning the United States.

U.S. military sources said the South Vietnamese air force will have received as many as 600 new aircraft by mid-November. These include F-5, A-37 and A-1 fighter-bombers, Chinook helicopters and four-engine C-130 transports. The shipments began Thursday.

A-1 fighter-bombers began arriving today by ship and were being unloaded at the big U.S.-built Newport docks just outside of Saigon.

Dismantled F-5s were being hauled into Bien Hoa air base, 15 miles northeast of Saigon, by giant C-5A transports.

More equipment was flowing into Saigon's Tan Son Nhut air base. Thirty of the big Chinook helicopters were at the base, being assembled.

The F-5 fighter planes are coming from Iran, Taiwan and South Korea. The U.S. defense department said these countries have agreed to supply the F-5s from their inventories under a barter arrangement, because the South is in short supply in the United States.

McGovern Charges Betrayal by Nixon

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon said Friday that a basic agreement has been reached for a ceasefire throughout Indochina.

George McGovern, Nixon's Democratic opponent in next Tuesday's presidential election, said that Nixon has betrayed U.S. hopes for a Vietnam settlement ... by pursuing a course that "is not a path to peace, but a detour around election day."

In his speech Friday night, Nixon talked of a breakthrough he said he had accomplished in Vietnam peace negotiations.

"We have reached agreement to have a ceasefire throughout Indochina, not just Vietnam, but in Cambodia and Laos," he said in Providence, R.I.

This assertion went beyond the nine-point draft peace plan disclosed by the North Vietnamese. That statement referred only to a ceasefire in South Vietnam.

"We see now that when the president's most important adviser announced that peace had come, it was actually a deception designed to raise our hopes, before we went to vote on Tuesday."

Entry Dodge Foiled

OTTAWA (CP) — Immigration Minister Bryce Mackasey announced Friday that visitors to Canada are permitted to apply for landed immigrant status without first leaving the country.

He told a news conference the new rule is intended to protect "would-be illegals" people abroad who have been sold airplane tickets with the promise that they could come to Canada as visitors and qualify as immigrants later.

The change suspends a provision in the 1969 immigration law that allowed visitors to stay in Canada while their application to immigrate were processed.

The provision gave visitors an advantage over those who apply for immigration from their home countries.

Mr. Mackasey said it also established "unscrupulous people" to take foreigners' life savings in return for a trip to Canada.

In Toronto Thursday, immigration officials turned back 44 people from India who had arrived on a flight organized by Indians agents.

Mr. Mackasey denied that the new rule stems from Monday's election results, or from the campaign in which immigration became an issue.

He said he had been aware since he took the immigration portfolio last winter that it was a controversial matter.

But abuses had increased recently because foreigners anticipated tighter immigration regulations in legislation promised for the fall.

The minister said the suspension of the right to apply for immigration from within Canada is temporary, but would last at least until the new law is passed.

He could not predict whether the new law would retain the provision. But it would have to contain measures to stop the backlog of appeal cases that have been under the present law.

Prime Minister Trudeau listed immigration as one of the areas where the Liberals "got a message" during the election that cut the number of Commons majority to a minority tie with the Conservatives.

Mr. Mackasey said he was not impressed by any backlash.

"The backlash that is nothing more than bigotry in disguise deserves nothing," he said. There would be backlash even against immigrants who enter Canada in the usual way, after applying from abroad, he added.

He did not know how many people will be affected by the new rule. He said that of the 120,000 landed immigrants accepted last year, 40,000 had applied from within the country.

The new ban took effect Friday. No visitors who did not apply by noon Friday will be accepted as landed immigrants, he said.

Two Youths Complain of Theft And Finish up Charged With Murder

WHITBY, Ont. (CP) — Two youths who complained to police that they had been beaten and robbed of $600 were charged with non-capital murder Friday.

Three other youths were then charged with robbing the murder suspects.

Provincial police in this community last east of Toronto said the charges were a sequel to the death of Golden Brown, 70, whose body was found at the foot of his cellar stairs in New Liskeard, Ont., last September.

Mr. Brown kept his money in his house, police said, and they believe he was robbed of $1,000.

The youths who complained to police said they had been drinking with four other youths and that they drove to a side-road north of Pickering, where they were beaten and robbed.

Charged with non-capital murder in Mr. Brown's death are Kevin Grant Lang, 16, and a 15-year-old, both of New Liskeard.

Charged with robbing the murder suspects are Wayne Kenneth Wilson, Carl Wilson and Gary James Peterson, all of Whitby. Peterson was arrested in Vancouver and returned to Toronto Friday night. A fourth Whitby youth is also being sought in Western Canada.

Spoiled Ballots Number Is Record

OTTAWA (CP) — It appears that more ballots than ever before were rejected in the Oct. 30 federal election—largely because of confusion over the new ballot form.

Checks in a number of ridings across the country show that the totals for rejected ballots, while no higher in some, rose drastically in others over the previous election in 1968.

In Quebec, the separatist Parti Quebecois urged voters to abstain from voting or deliberately spoil their ballots as a rejection of federalism.

Although some voters complied, a cross-Canada survey by The Canadian Press indicates that the spoiled-ballot increase was not restricted to Quebec.

There were exceptions, such as the New Brunswick riding of Saint John-Lancaster where fewer spoiled ballots turned up than in 1968, the overwhelming officers in many ridings reported sharp increases.

Chief Electoral Officer Jean-Marc Hamel said in an interview the spacing of candidates names—some followed by large white spaces—could have been a major factor. Most returning officers agreed.

Instead of putting their X or other mark in the white circle at the side of the new, black-bordered ballot, many voters apparently followed the old practice and placed it immediately after the printed name.

Some marked it both places. Although these were not restricted to an X in this election, but could use any distinguishing mark they chose, ballots were declared void if marked anywhere but the circle.

Most ridings had more eligible voters than 1968 but the proportion of rejected ballots still was far higher in many cases.

In the Manitoba riding of Lincoln, the total soared to 2,060 from 324 in 1968. Vancouver Centre had 1,253 rejected ballots, up from 269. O-hi-ton also up sharply included Calgary South 1,847 from 247, Peterborough 797 from 212, Niagara Falls 1,003 from 261 and Malpeque 261 from 83.

A sampling of Quebec ridings, which included a number of provincial constituencies where a heavy separatist vote was recorded in the province's 1970 election, showed roughly similar increases. In Jonquiere, the PQ anti-campaign had no significant effect.

Some Quebec returning officers said the PQ drive may have helped the vote but the increases seemed largely the result of confusion over the new ballot.

The total in Drummond, which Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin won in official counting by just 1,000 votes, was 1,400 compared with 324 in 1968.

Other Quebec comparisons: Beauharnois-Salaberry 381, Chicoutimi 2,720 from 435, Laprairie 1,002 from 408, Montreal-Ahuntsic 4,264 from 1,293, Montreal Bourassa 4,811 from 1,027, Trois-Rivieres 1,370 from 704.

Selkirk NDP Victory Slim

WINNIPEG (CP) — The official count of federal election results in Selkirk constituency completed Friday night, gave New Democrat Doug Rowland a margin of only 13 votes over a Progressive Conservative opponent.

Because of the narrow margin, a judicial recount is required automatically.

The official count gave Mr. Rowland 18,046 votes compared with 18,033 for Conservative candidate Dean Whiteway. Liberal and Social Credit candidates were well behind.

Election night figures gave 19,163 votes to Mr. Rowland who first entered the Commons in a 1970 byelection, and 17,723 to Mr. Whiteway.

Sargent Can Not Obtain Injunction Against WCB

TORONTO (CP) — Eddie Sargent, Liberal member of the Ontario legislature for Grey-Bruce, said Friday his lawyers have advised them there little chance of getting an injunction to stop a deal between the Workmen's Compensation Board (WCB) and a developer.

Mr. Sargent added his lawyers Thursday it he could bring a citizen's action against the Progressive Conservative government of Premier William Davis "after reading reports that the cabinet approved a contract between the WCB and the Fidinam (Ontario) Ltd. for new offices.

The report said the approval came a month after the company had given $30,000 to the provincial Conservative party.

P. A. Saunderson, president of Fidinam which is a subsidiary of a Swiss investment company, has confirmed the donation, but denied it was linked to the contract.

Mr. Sargent said his lawyers have told him the only way he could stop the deal would be to prove fraud and that he would suffer a direct personal loss by the agreement.

"They all say that we as taxpayers are not directly involved and therefore cannot sue," said Mr. Sargent, who added that the law should be changed to allow citizens more opportunity to sue the government.

"I am going to have another meeting with my lawyers to see if there is any other way of stopping the deal."

He said he plans to set aside his $18,000 member's salary to fight the agreement.

Hydro-Quebec Workers Are Planning to Strike

MONTREAL (CP) — Hydro-Quebec's 8,500 employees served notice Friday they will strike Monday if no solution to their contract dispute is found during the weekend. Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer said his department will not intervene.

The employees, members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, told Mr. Cournoyer and Hydro-Quebec President Roland Giroux by telegram Friday they would strike Monday at 8 a.m. if no settlement is reached by then.

Mr. Cournoyer said Friday night his department does not have the power to act now and if these two sides can't settle it with the help of a mediator it's just going to help if we jump in anyway's assistance."

The union memo came after talks between the two sides involving Yvon Dansereau, special government mediator, ended Thursday night.

CUPE spokesman Paul Morisseau said that when the talks concluded, the two sides were "three points further apart than when they started.

Talks may resume this weekend, Mr. Morisseau said, but "one thing is for certain—we'd walk out Monday if no agreement has been reached."

Union Heads Charged With Threat to Strike

TORONTO (CP) — Gus Simmone, business manager of Local 562, Lathers International Union, and Kenneth Weller, the union's international representative, were remanded in provincial court Friday and Dec. 1 on a charge under the Ontario Labor Relations Act of threatening to call an unlawful strike.

Local 562 also is charged by complainant Fred Leger, a business representative of the Carpenters District Council of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

Judge Tupper Bigelow remanded the case to consider a motion by certain the charge. No plea has been taken.

Lawyer Alan Minsky said the charge should be quashed because when the Ontario Labor Relations Board gave its consent to the carpenters union to prosecute, it failed to state in its written judgment the time, date and place of the alleged offence.

Mr. Minsky also argued that the board gave the carpenters district council and its local two named individuals consent to prosecute Local 562 and two officials and that Mr. Leger was not one of those given the consent.

The case involves a jurisdictional dispute a year ago on the construction site of an office building being erected by Camsion Ltd.

Camsion held an agreement with the carpenters union and Northdown Drywall and Construction Ltd. was the sub-contractor doing some of the lethrwork.

The carpenters union claims that when it filed a grievance with the general contractor for not using carpenters on the job, Local 562 threatened to pull all Northdown projects unless Northdown ordered their work off the Camsion project and hired carpenters.

Lathers Disagree

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says Local 562 of the Lathers International union sent its members to work for a Toronto construction company after Local 721 of the same union struck the company.

Parents to Get Pointers

Parents of children with learning disabilities can help at home to augment the schools' program — if they know how.

To teach parents to teach their children, a workshop will be held at Quinte Secondary School Nov. 9 at 7:30 p.m.

The Association for Children with Learning Disabilities and the Council for Exceptional Children are uniting to conduct the workshop. It is planned as an exchange of ideas between parents of children in all grades and the experts who teach them.

John A. Pringle, crown attorney and chairman of the Quinte ACLD program committee is co-ordinating the workshop.

Mrs. Gladys Sine, Stirling special education teacher, will discuss gross motor training, and another special education teacher, Mrs. Beverley Brooks will discuss visual perception training.

Mrs. Dorothy Blakely, well known specialist in teaching exceptional children, will handle auditory perception training and Charles Sloan, English department head at Moira Secondary, will discuss adolescents with special needs.

Trenton social worker, Mrs. Breg de Groot will be in charge of the workshop on social skills, recreation and relaxation, emotional and behavioral approaches.

J. Russ Williams co-ordinator of special services with the Prince Edward County Board of Education will discuss and display teaching aids and learning material.

Learning materials, games and teaching aids that parents can make and use at home and parents' ideas that have worked will be displayed by Trenton p a r e n t s Mrs. June Fenlinan and Mrs. Mary Alice Tobin, public health nurse and former special education teacher-aide.

The Quinte ACLD librarian, Mrs. Faye Butchart, will display resource literature and the ACLD lending library.

Board to Support Service Corridors

Railway lines that now pass through the cores of Belleville and Trenton may be moved to outlying areas.

But officials from surrounding townships would prefer to see them become part of a transportation corridor.

The suggestion arose out of a discussion Thursday by members of the Quinte Planning Board in response to an Oct. 11 federal announcement to introduce legislation that would help move railways out of central urban areas.

The board resolved to advise member councils to request that the ministries of transport and urban affairs notify them as soon as the legislation is passed in parliament. Studies could then be undertaken for consideration by the Canadian Transport Commission which, under the scheme, would be empowered to order the railways to move.

Trenton councillor Paul Tripp was a leading proponent of immediate action. His town, he said, would benefit immensely by relocation of Canadian National holdings.

"We've got derelict buildings, freight sheds and miles of unused siding. One area on the Bay of Quinte now tied up by CN would be good for a housing development."

Inconveniences like the CN ore train from Marmora that now divides Division Street would also disappear, he said.

His sentiments were echoed by Belleville Alderman Art Keegan who was particularly concerned about the increasing number of level crossings in the city. He said the Canadian Pacific main line running north - west out of Belleville could also pose a problem for future planners.

"It's not bad now but it will be a big problem 15 years from now."

Sidney Reeve Jack Bush would like to see railway lines become part of a corridor housing hydro lines, gas pipelines and roadways.

He noted that Ontario Hydro plans to cut a 650-foot wide swath across Sidney and Thurlow Townships in the near future and wondered if future transportation needs could be incorporated in the same scheme.

The board passed a resolution to investigate the possibility of a transportation corridor through the Quinte area.

Frank Stokmans, the board's deputy planning director warned that railway relocation could cause a holdup of the conceptual plan now being drafted for the Quinte region. Expected within a year, the plan "would be delayed if we have to wait for relocation studies," said Mr. Stokmans.

Lone dissenting municipal representative was Belleville Alderman Ben Corke.

His recommendation to register a letter for eight months, possibly prompted by the dubious situation on Parliament Hill, was later withdrawn. But he let it be known members they had no power to deal with such matters.

Future Forecast Is Aim of Conference

A day to dream dreams and plot the shape of the future is coming up for Belleville citizens next weekend.

Hospital College and United Community Services is inviting residents to a s k a l a l o k at Quinte, 1984 and decide together what development should take.

A dinner and address on Saturday will be the lead-in to a day by which will be held Nov. 10 at 6:30 p.m. at the Four Seasons Hotel. The next day, Nov. 11, will be devoted to workshops at Loyalist College on education, environment, the family, government, health, housing, industry, leisure and religion.

Alderman Robin Jeffrey, with Tweed's Barbara Allen, Trenton's Oggie Larry, James Reynolds, Belleville city manager, and Donald Rodgers of Sterling will handle the workshop on government.

Mrs. Vera Murphy, Marianne Adams, Dr. R. W. Edwards and Dr. R. T. Potter will debate health issues.

Industry will be discussed by Pat Houston, Fred Bemis, Fred Ethier and James Wiseman.

The panel on leisure is comprised of recreation director Lorne Williams, librarian Olive Delaney, coordinator of community schools David Smith and Mrs. Marwin Wilson.

Rev. Laurie Sutherland of St. Andrew's Church, Dr. J. G. Demeza of the Ontario School for the Deaf, Rev. Donald Himmelman and Rev. David Murphy will discuss religion.

The sponsors hope for a large representation of the public to join in the discussion on the way Belleville should grow in the next 12 years.

Registration costs $10 and covers the Nov. 10 dinner, Saturday luncheon and coffee breaks. Attendance at Loyalist on Nov. 11 only is $4. Res

Legion Building In Napanee

TWEED (Special) — Construction has started on a second floor addition to the Napanee Royal Canadian Legion branch which is expected to cost between $20,000 and $25,000.

When completed, the addition will almost double the Legion's floor space with adequate facilities for a new upstairs lounge, and two separate halls.

Legion president Harry Benn says the Legion plans to apply for permanent liquor licence when renovations are completed about January 1.

Nurse Improved

A nurse who was struck by a car Tuesday morning while on her way to work is conscious and in satisfactory condition at Kingston General Hospital.

Sharon Clelland, 21, of 136 Bleecker Ave., sustained a fractured skull and pelvis. She was crossing Dundas Street at the intersection of Dufferin on her way to Belleville General Hospital.

Driver of the vehicle was Lewis Zandbergen, 20, of 429 Bellecker Ave. He has been charged with failing to yield the right of way to a pedestrian.

Death's Dark Vale

Not just in places like the Middle East and Ulster, where two more innocent children have died in a bomb blast, not to mention Vietnam, but in the usual round of urban homicides in cities on this continent. In recent days for instance: a blind woman in Rochester, N.Y., bludgeoned to death and her husband critically unconscious by an intruder; in nearby Buffalo, a man killed by FBI agents when he attacked them with an ice-pick; in Montreal, a 37-year-old woman found battered and dying on the sidewalk near her home after an evening out with friends; in New York, a distinguished German-born professor of Columbia University, robbed and fatally stabbed in broad daylight by three youths.

True, the slaying in Buffalo was in self-defence, but isn't this sort of thing, nevertheless a symptom of the general malaise that grips the U.S. domestic scene.

And there was the airline ticket agent, 30-year-old Stanley Hubbard, shot dead at Houston, Texas by a group of men who hijacked a plane to Cuba. Hubbard was father of a six-year-old boy who lived with him and often spent the day at the terminal. It was said the youngster "was always talking about his daddy . . . he loved his daddy." But he was not at the terminal that day, and after the slaying was taken to family friends while awaiting the arrival of Hubbard's estranged wife from Florida.

Some people carry a heavy burden in this world and with incidents like this it is being added to every day. In human terms we tend to take such tragic events for granted, but for those affected there are trauma, pain, suffering and darkness. There is a popular ballad of the moment. It is called "Alone Again—Naturally," and in it there is this line, "It seems to me there are more broken hearts . . . left unattended." Doesn't this say it all?

Meanwhile, an editorial in The Nation, a New York publication, alluding to the death of the professor, went on to say that the social tragedy of such crimes is no less disturbing. Mugging — armed robbery in the street — is the most feared of crimes. Not the most important, but the one that spreads a contagion of fear. It is what people mean when they inveigh against "crime in the streets." It carries heavy undertones of racism and reaction, and has added in large measure to the affliction of the cities . . ." And no one, but no one, is really safe, the editorial suggests, for muggers prey not only on the seeming affluent but on the poor in their own neighborhoods as well.

In Canada we are comparatively free of such occurrences. It will be part of the responsibility of the Government in power (to which some are now saying, "What Government?") to ensure we remain that way.

Little Spain

Little Spain? Yes, we have been asking if anyone knows the exact origin of this term used to describe Prince Edward County and we have been offered an explanation — believed authentic — by a gentleman in his eighties who lives alone in Thurlow township.

Of United Empire Loyalist stock, our informant, who prefers to remain anonymous, says that in the days of the militia, as far back as the late 1700s, there was a British army poem or ballad which spoke of "Over the bay (of Biscay) to Spain." Evidently it came with some of the militia of the time serving in Canada and was adapted to read, "over the bay (of Quinte) to Little Spain."

This was in the days, our informant suggests, when there were military units at York (now Toronto), Kingston and possibly even around Belleville. Some doubtless had served under Wellington in the Peninsular war.

The Thurlow reader says he heard the Little Spain legend from his grandparents who in turn got it from an uncle.

Telephone Nightmare

Party Leaders Have Fellow Citizens of the Same Name

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Be thankful for small mercies, that you do not live in Ottawa and your name is not Pierre Trudeau, Robert Stanfield or David Lewis.

Some people are not so lucky.

Not that it would not be nice — in some ways — to be any one of them, enjoying their power and privileges.

But not so nice if you just have the name and none of the benefits that go with being THE Pierre Trudeau, or Stanfield, or Lewis.

Like Pierre Trudeau who is a bookkeeper with the Ontario Liquor Commission and lives not far from The Man himself.

But he is not THE Pierre Trudeau.

Just happens to have the misfortune of having the same name.

It got a bit much at three in the morning when a gang of giggling party-girls decides to phone their PET just for the hilarity.

Or when in comes a long distance phone call easting urgently for the Prime Minister and Pierre Trudeau has to explain that while yes, he is Pierre Trudeau, he is not THE Pierre Trudeau.

Some of these times, says Pierre Trudeau, he is going to say yes he is THE Pierre Trudeau "and then see what happens," and what happens."

Not long ago a group of freshmen from Carleton University came to his home and asked him to go back to the campus with them because they needed Pierre Trudeau for an initiation caper.

Enough was enough, and as Pierre Trudeau in self-defence is changing his Ottawa telephone listing in his wife's name which, fortunately, does not happen to be Margaret.

Then there is the case of Ottawa civil engineer Robert Stanfield, not to be mistaken for Conservative leader Robert Stanfield, which happens more times than enough.

Few nut calls for Mr. Stanfield, nor party-goers calling in the middle of the night to gag it up.

Only serious calls from people wanting to talk politics.

But Robert Stanfield is not having any of that.

He never allows the conversation to get political, in fact, he tries not to let it get past the point of making clear that he is not THE Robert Stanfield.

He had been getting long distance calls from all across Canada, so many, in fact, that he changed his name in the phone directory from David to plain Harry Lewis.

But still the calls did not stop, and so he got an extension installed by his bedside so that he would not have to run downstairs, late at night, every time the phone rang.

Like Pierre Trudeau and Robert Stanfield, David Lewis too received Christmas cards, personal letters and frequently telegrams.

Finally he met Frank Howard, New Democratic MP for Skeena, sold him a car, and asked him for a favor.

"Frank," he said, "please give me the phone number of the other David Lewis," and got it.

So David Lewis phoned David Lewis and asked, "Is this the other David Lewis? Is it. Well, this is David Lewis here."

"The other David Lewis?" came back David Lewis.

"Yes, the real David Lewis, but not THE David Lewis," David Lewis replied.

Then explaining his problem he asked that Mr. Lewis place the initials MP behind his name in the phone book.

Mr. Lewis, that is THE Mr. Lewis, told the other Mr. Lewis that his wife would take care of it, and she did.

But still the phone rings — although perhaps not so much — and the telegrams and letters keep coming.

The problem for Pierre Trudeau, Robert Stanfield and David Lewis really never will be solved completely until THE Pierre Trudeau, Robert Stanfield and David Lewis leave town.

Terrorists May Be Losing Their Grip on Ulster

By CY FOX

LONDON (CP) — Reports about the battle being waged by British security forces in Ulster against the underground Irish Republican Army (IRA) are again suggesting a sense of optimism among government representatives about their chances of success in the conflict.

Ever since British soldiers rolled into IRA-controlled "no-go" areas of cities such as Belfast and Londonderry earlier this year, the authorities have been insisting, in the face of pessimistic indications to the contrary, that ultimately the Northern Ireland crisis was bound to take a turn in favor of the army.

The official argument was that, with the IRA power over civilians in their neighborhood greatly lessened, the possibility of intimidation also would fall and residents thus would be more prepared to tell security forces about the whereabouts and activities of the guerrillas.

Just how much, however, the British were warming that the presence of troops in defiantly-proud Roman Catholic areas like the Bogside of Derry would heighten local bitterness and thereby compound the government's problems instead of easing them.

Now, following developments such as the capture of weapons and termed high-ranking IRA officers in the Ardoyne district of Belfast, the British are once again beginning to sound cautiously confident.

The security authorities have lately been expanding their system of telephone contacts under which civilians can communicate to the police information about wanted men and related matters.

This kind of initiative may at best be paying off to a degree. And there are reports as well of discord among the officer corps of the IRA's militant Provisional wing.

But internal dissensions possibly would encourage some disgruntled elements to become informers.

But despite all these reports about the current situation, the IRA remains a formidable force.

Moreover, the Ulster Defence Association (UDA) has opened up new battlefront for conflict with a recent strike across the border into the Irish republic as part of its self-described effort to defend the Protestants of the North against IRA gunmen and bombs.

The UDA declares its intention to hit at any rallying centres for what it calls the IRA "scum" in the South.

Along with the deaths of two young girls in still another Belfast bombing, developments of this kind hardly strengthen hopes for a lasting peace in Ulster.

Yet the British government has announced its plans for a referendum, expected to take place early next year, on the chronically controversial issue of the border dividing North and South.

Unionists in Ulster, whose party held power there before London took over direct rule last March, are apparently confident that an overwhelming majority vote in Northern Ireland will favor the continued status of the six counties as part of the United Kingdom.

Minority Rule Was Good -

By DON O'HEARN
from The Intelligencer's
Queen's Park Bureau

As a jurisdiction which has had some experience with minority government, we in Ontario can look at the present situation in Ottawa with a closer interest and perhaps a bit more wisdom than most.

There are some of us who have felt that the years between 1943 and 1945, when the Drew administration was in minority, saw perhaps the best Government Ontario has had in modern times.

It was forceful, thoughtful and imaginative and basically set a pattern which was followed for years to come.

The consequence has been that, in the past, there has not always been the concern here about minority government that has been in other parts of the country.

We have lived with it and found that it worked.

There were certain circumstances in our Ontario experience, however, which made it distinctly different from the present national situation.

The most important of these was that the CCF, which was the main opposition (with 34 seats to the government's 37), didn't want a new election.

An inexperienced group which had been returned in such strength somewhat accidentally, it was afraid of its ability to withstand the beating in a would take a strong and quick election and therefore didn't put on any powerful pressure to upset Drew.

This meant, in turn that he could govern quite easily; that his administration was relatively stable.

Along with this Drew brought in progressive measures while the CCF didn't have any strong policies of its own. So in crucial situations it was able to go along.

And the other elements in the Lame, the Liberals and LPPers, weren't any more anxious for an election than it was.

Most particularly there was nobody holding the balance of power, and anxious to use it, that David Lewis has at Ottawa.

Mr. Lewis has certain policies he is adamant on and which the older parties can't go along with — particularly his corporate tax-cut.

It is true they probably can, or could, skate along a while without a direct confrontation involving confidence.

But as long as the NDP leader holds this balance of power we can hardly expect comfortable (or long-lived) government.

Japan's Self-Defense Units And A Filipino Enigma

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst

We are deeply concerned these days with the growing power of large institutions to control the habits and motives of men. None did so more ruthlessly, when it existed, than the now-defunct Imperial Japanese Army.

At the time of writing, a small team from the Japanese foreign office is working closely with Philippine police authorities to flush an Imperial Army officer out of the jungles of the Philippines before he kills anyone else or burns more village homes. In his misguided view, the Second World War is still being fought.

The appeal to get the 50-year-old former lieutenant to surrender is as bizarre as the circumstance—a loud "hailer" was placed close to where he is hiding along with a sign telling the man the war is over.

It's as though we were back in August, 1945 when far-flung Imperial garrisons from all over South East Asia, many of them locked in jungle defence, were advised to surrender on the same kind of ad hoc basis.

What was it about the Japanese armed forces of the old empire that it held its officers and rank-and-file in such thrall? It was, of course, total blending of military spiritual and national traditions, cemented by the authoritarianism of the old Japan and more virulent than defeat since Japan beat Imperial Russia on land and sea in 1905.

Because of the many describable destruction by Japan's military, the Peace Treaty of 1951 between Japan and the United States called for the abolition of Japanese military forces in perpetuity. Yet Japan today, is one of the best-armed nations in Asia.

The forces are not called army, navy or air force and more, but the Japanese Self Defense Forces. The Navy, for example is called The Maritime Defense Force. But it's a navy all the same.

How did this happen? During the Korean War, American occupation forces and local Japanese law enforcing agencies feared the possibility of internal Communist infiltration of a still-shattered Japan. The Americans approved the formation of an internal self-protection squad.

Since the cold war did not go away in Asia during the 1960s, but increased with the Communist China's and American hatred, that agency became a regular military establishment. An added factor was—and is—a substantial U.S. naval and air bases in Japan. The new Japanese military have worked closely with the Americans.

Despite this ominous development, almost all observers of the new Japanese military establishment, except Communists, are convinced the new Self Defense Forces have no overtones of the old Imperial Forces.

The officer corps, made up mainly of young men born since Japan had the Second World War, choose the military as one of several alternate professional careers. In fact, the new military competes heavily with Japan's expanding industries for recruits.

Nor does Japan have an empire to police, only multi-national companies which have a peaceful commercial empire of their own.

'Hallowe'en Charmers

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Someone in my office asked if I were out "treating or tricking" at Hallowe'en.

I said "No," but I had a lot of fun "shelling out" to the some 26 little darlings who came to my door.

Most of them did not wear masks but had appropriate makeup to suit their costumes — which was a great improvement on those weird and ugly masks.

Who wouldn't rather see the sweet smiling faces of children in pleasure of the occasion?

A little later in the evening a group of teens came. One was at the door, the other two stood down on the steps. I said "Come up" — but they did not move.

Their reply was "We were here before, we came now with our friend because she was alone." What a nice lesson!

They were not trying to cash in on a second treat. Needless to say we were delighted to visit they accept a second one.

Thank you children for coming and being the lovely young citizens you are.

Members of my family who were visiting me from Toronto enjoyed you as much as I did.

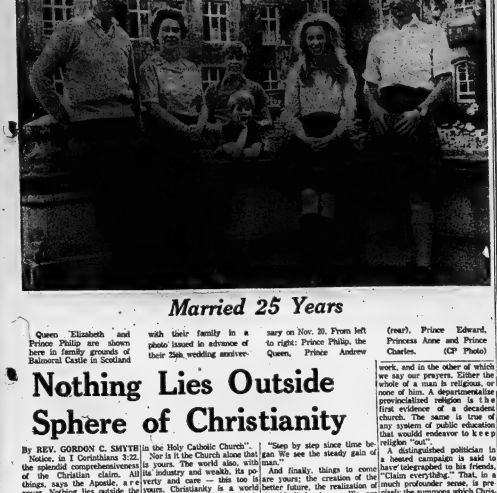
Sunday School

Oshawa Journal



In Wolfville, N.S., the other day Dr. James Perkin, head of religion studies at Acadia University, offered some thoughtful comments on the quality of teaching in Sunday schools.

The Halifax Chronicle-Herald made the point that:

"There is little doubt that the criticism is merited. Declining attendance may be taken as an indication that many consider the programs of Sunday schools and church schools as contemporary preference calls them, irrelevant. Some religious denominations especially are not enthusiastic about Sunday school work and are not doing the kind of promotional work that is needed."

Too many Sunday school teachers are inadequately trained. Believing that young people should have some religious instruction does not make an effective teacher. Many children come from families that never mention Christianity let alone go to church. Since Sunday school is often their first experience with religion and future attitudes depend largely upon the influence and effectiveness of their teachers.

Despite the weaknesses the Sunday School is one of the few organizations that exists to bring youth close to Christian principles and build moral fibre where there is none. It needs all the help it can get.

Nothing Lies Outside Sphere of Christianity

By REV. GORDON C. SMYTH

Notice, in I Corinthians 3:22, the splendid comprehensiveness of the Christian claim. All things, says the Apostle, are yours. Nothing lies outside the sphere of the Christian religion.

All life is holy. There is no distinction of sacred from secular. Paul, Apolos, and Cephas (Peter) represented what we call the sects of the Church; but these sects are not alternatives from which one has to choose. They are all yours.

The sects are, as it were, cross-sections through the life of the growing Church. Each is true when seen, as it were, crosswise, but each is partial in its relation to the expanding growth. They are all yours, if you are Christ's. You are not ensnared in the pettiness of denominationalism. You repent the great confession, "I believe in the Holy Catholic Church".

Nor is it the Church alone that is yours. The world also, with industry and wealth, its poverty and care — this too is yours. Christianity is a world religion. The Christian is, in the true sense, a man of the world. And life also, with all its work and play, its joy and pain — this too is yours.

"I am the way," said Jesus. The first title given to the Christian religion was "The Way". Christianity is a way of life. And death also is yours, with its pain and mystery. This is the victory that overcomes death, even your faith.

And things present are yours; the world is not your friends. The Christian is an optimist, not with that easy assurance which refuses to see evil, but with that understanding of life which judges its judgment that, — "Step by step since time began We see the steady gain of man."

And finally, things to come are yours; the creation of the better future, the realization of the idealist's dream. We are saved by hope. "Greater works than these shall you do, because I go to the Father." said the Master.

The most pressing peril that besets religious people, I feel sure, is not that of flagrant sins or intellectual denials, but the peril of pretentious dullness: the danger of mistaking a great subject for a small one, and of side-tracking one's religion by some special twitch of experience, as though it were a way station instead of a terminus.

Life is not like an ocean freighter, divided by watertight bulkheads into different sections, in one of which we do our work, and in the other of which we say our prayers. Either the whole of a man is religious, or none of him. A departmentalize provincialized religion is the first evidence of a decadent church. The same is true of any system of public education that would endeavor to keep religion "out".

A distinguished politician in a recent campaign is said to have telegraphed to his friends, "Claim everything." That, in a much profounder sense, is precisely the summons which Christianity makes on life. All things are yours. The whole of life is holy.

Religion is not a province, but a commonwealth. It comprehends both the Church and the world, both life and death, both the present and the future. The world is one, all of it is sacred; and it is all yours, if you are Christ's, as Christ is God's.

Nichiren Shoshu Buddhists Chant Their Fond Wishes

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Buzzing, buzzing, buzzing.

"We are saying 'Nam Myoho Renge Kyo' very fast over and over again," someone whispers.

Buzzing, buzzing. It is the chant of the Buddhist sect, Nichiren Shoshu.

Sixteen people are sitting on the floor of a fashionable Los Angeles apartment, facing a small scroll with Oriental characters, the Gohonzon.

A bell sounds. Everyone stops. Three girls leap up and begin singing Yaakee Doodle Dandy.

Then another young girl bounces to the front of the room.

"This just really blew my mind," she says. "I wanted a brand new car and I didn't have any money and I didn't know how I was going to get this car, so I chanted for it."

She takes a breath.

"I have this friend in Korea and he wrote me a letter and asked me if I would drive his new car for him while he's gone for eight there and he's going to be there for 18 months and I get to drive a new car!"

The experiences go on. One girl chanted for a humming bird to feed at her father's bird feeder, since that's what he wanted. He had been wailing six months, but after she chanted about it, sure enough, the bird appeared, she says in a burst of giggles.

The room erupts in laughter.

It is a Nichiren Shoshu Buddhist meeting, one of many nightly meetings taking place in major American cities. The faces are young, black and white, with long hair and shorts.

Nichiren Shoshu is one of thousands of Buddhist sects throughout the world. It was first introduced to the U.S. 12 years ago, and now claims an American membership of 200,000. Its chant, Nam Myoho Renge Kyo (roughly translated), "I devote myself to the mystic law of cause and effect," was first taught by a 13th century Japanese Buddha, Nichiren Daishonin.

Members say they chant for anything that will make them happy.

Guests at the meeting ask, "How can this thing work?" You don't even know what you are saying when you chant."

"Who cares?" comes the simple reply. "Just chant."

"Although you drive a car, you probably don't know anything about the mechanical system or the scientific theory behind the car. You don't need to study the engine before you drive. All you have to understand is that the key will start everything.

"Nam Myoho Renge Kyo is the key to the entire philosophy of Buddhism."

Willie Davis, star Los Angeles Dodger outfielder, agrees.

"The basic goal is world peace, but in chanting for world peace I also chant for the World Series," he says. "You have so much faith in yourself that you control your own destiny.

"The Dodgers finished the season well out of series contention.

Alan Mack, a 41-year-old senior salesman for IBM, is another avid adherent.

"I started chanting on a whim," he says. "I figured I had nothing to lose and everything to gain if even a small part of what they said at the meeting was true.

"It was a good investment," he added.

There has been a steady stream of 'coincidences' in Mack's business life for which I can see no rational or logical explanation other than my practice of Buddhism."

Swimmers Receive Special Awards

Two water babies came into their own Thursday evening as Belleville Y's Men's Club honored a pair of young women who have garnered the second highest distinction offered in swimming.

Becky Holway and Cathy Wood, both 17, received the Royal Lifesaving Society's Distinction Award at a dinner in their honor.

In the opinion of the Y's swimming consultant, Mrs. Enid Rowe, both women had qualified for the distinction some time ago, but were forced by the requirements of the Royal Lifesaving Society to await their 17th birthdays before taking the gruelling examination.

As they went forward to receive their awards Mrs. Rowe chuckled that "this is probably the first time they have seen each other when they weren't wet."

Both young women have been Y swimming instruction volunteers since they were 12. Both still instruct: Miss Holway for the last two years at the Y day camp and Miss Wood as water front instructor at an Anglican Church summer camp.

Wil ibey go on to capture the top lifesaving award?

Both Miss Holway and Miss Wood have their eyes on it. There are no instructors in the Belleville region to help carry them to such heights. And the time involvement is a serious factor for the secondary school students.

The eastern Ontario region has only one qualified examiner for the top Royal Lifesaving Society qualifications. He is, of course, Belleville's own Mr. Swimming, Murray Workman.

Anniversary Celebrated

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Elliott of Belleville were honored Oct. 22 with a dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Elliott on the occasion of their 35th wedding anniversary.

Mr. Elliott and the former Olive Sears were married Oct. 23, 1937 in St. John Hill United Church by Rev. J. F. Everson. They have two sons and four grandchildren.

Hosts for the anniversary party were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Elliott, 84 Lewis St. and Mr. and Mrs. Murray Elliott of Oshawa.

Members Attend Agriculture Meet

Representatives of the women's divisions of 18 fairs in district 3 of the Ontario Association of Agricultural Societies met Oct. 26 at Club Canara for the annual conference.

Mrs. Harry Rollins and Mrs. Fred Wilson were in charge of registration and Mrs. Janet Hamilton, district president, welcomed the delegates.

Mrs. Hamilton gave a summary of fair projects and Mrs. Dawn Lewis gave the junior fair report for the convener, Mrs. Leslie La Fort, who was absent.

Paul Bernard of Bernard Interiors was the guest speaker and gave an illustrated talk on groupings of wallpaper, draperies and carpets.

Two handicraft exhibits were set up for the delegates to view and judge. Mrs. Marianne Niles of Trenton displayed woven skirts, wall hangings, shawls in the room divider and Mrs. Eva Marcile, RR 1, Deseronto showed lamps, wall pictures, jewelry and Christmas decorations.

Mrs. Hazel Wilson conducted the election of officers for the coming year. Past president, Mrs. Ronald Hamilton, RR 6, Trenton; first vice-president, Mrs. James Whiteford, Cherry Valley; second vice-president, Mrs. Doris Campsall, Parham; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. W. A. Hume, Campbellford and junior convener, Mrs. Lillie La Fort, Shannonville.

Fullet Sex Life Needed For Aging Seniors

HAMILTON (CP) — There were more women than men at a conference on aging here eThursday night and all the questions by the more female women after a leading woman doctor said a full sex life is one of the greatest needs of the aged.

A man asked how he could let women know he was available.

The 208 delegates, many in their 70s and 80s from all over Canada, were told by Dr. Hertz Stephenson, past-president of the Ontario Medical Association, that:

—Premature baiting of sex can hasten the aging process.

—Sex can restore lots of social prestige that old age brings.

—Persistence of sexual need is normal for older people, even among 80-and 90-year-olds, particularly for those who enjoyed a full sex life when younger.

—The normal male's interest in sex decreases only slightly after the age of 60. But there is no corresponding decrease in interest in the normal female.

Dr. Stephenson, 67, of Toronto and married to a doctor, is the mother of six children aged 10 to 22. She said her conclusions are based on her observations of "thousands of marriages."

She said women who had not had satisfactory sexual relationships were not likely to want such relationships after the menopause.

And women can more successfully suppress their sexual instincts.

"Although some may get witchy doing so.

"Witchy? Did you say witchy?" a woman called out.

"Yes, witchy," the doctor replied.

She said the sexual ignorance of both is the primary cause of sexual incompatibility in marriages and she would like to see courses in sex given to men.

She said the elderly held three common but erroneous notions about sex among the elderly:

A woman does not run a greater risk of cancer when she sublimates her sexual urges.

—A man with his prostate gland removed does not become dead sexually. It's just ain't true. Many have full and happy sex lives after the operation."

—A man who has had a heart attack need not cease his sex life.

"It's nonsense to think he'll die in the middle of sexual intercourse." She said the strain of sex is the equivalent of climbing 12 stages.

Dr. Stephenson gave statistics showing there are 156 women for every 100 men at age 70 and 136 women for every 100 men at age 80.

"Let's face it, there are a hell of a lot of widows around," she said.

In a sorrowful voice an elderly white-haired woman from the audience asked: "Why do men get so soon?"

Before the doctor could answer, an elderly male voice piped out: "Because you were us out!"

Dr. Stephenson called for a program of sexual re-education for the elderly.

Old people are on the verge of being discovered by society, Dr. Vivian Rakoff, head of the department of family development of psychiatry, said.

He added the era of youth worship is just about exhausted.

"Soon being old will be rather the in thing," he said.

Dr. Rakoff Hill of Montreal University said people should not expect to div ision they reach it because they probably won't. A woman aged 50 now can expect to live 29 more years and a man 26.3 years.

Lifesavers Unlimited

Belleville Family Y's swimming consultant, Mrs. Enid Rowe, (left) Thursday night saw two of her former pupils receive the second highest certificate offered by the Royal Lifesaving Society: Becky Holway and Cathy Wood, framed in the life preserver, received the Society's Distinction Award for swimming proficiency.

NSA Marks 4th Anniversary

Thirty-four members and six guests attended the October dinner meeting of the Bay of Quinte Chapter, National Secretaries Association (International) at the Sun Luck Gardens, Belleville.

The guest speaker was Mrs. Barbara Williams, president of the Canadian Division, NSA whose topic was Parliamentary Procedure. Mrs. Williams used Part 11 of L o o k of a Leader, an NSE instructional slide set, to illustrate her address.

Based on the authority of, Roberts Rules of Order, the information was interesting and fun to learn. Mrs. Williams proved that essential knowledge which is often considered dull and heavy-going can be studied and mastered if approached in the proper manner.

Mrs. Williams stressed the importance of member participation at m e e t i n g s. She pointed out how the knowledge of basic rules of procedure would enable each member to "have her say" in the proper manner, thus contributing to the success of the meeting and the health of the organization. She illustrated that a meeting can be conducted easily and efficiently by adhering to parliamentary procedure, and emphasized some important factors. The chairman should h a v e the agenda set out in the proper order, have a calendar handy for ready reference, know beforehand which committee chairmen have reports to make, and be ever mindful of her responsi b i l i ty to bring out the opinions of those present with a maximum of goodwill and a minimum of friction. Members have a responsibility to voice their opinions.

Mrs. Williams closed her presentation by giving to each woman p r e s e n t a "Mini-Guide" of parliamentary pointers. Mrs. Evelyn McIlquham t h a n k e d the speaker.

After a short intermission, the business meeting of the Chapter was chaired by the president, Miss M a r j o r y Goss. The 1973-74 budget was presented by the treasurer, Mrs. Marlene Phillips, and discussed. Miss Bonnie Bailey, corresponding secretary, read a letter from the Watertown Chapter, NSA, in New York State, expressing pleasure in the attendance of four members of the Bay of Quinte Chapter at the September meeting in C l a y t o n, New York. Miss Burley also announced a 1-day seminar for secretaries to be held on November 11, in Hamilton.

During the reports of the standing committees, it was announced by Mrs. Dorothy Hamilton, chairman of the civic committee, that a group had addressed 20,000 envelope labels for the T.B. Christmas Seals campaign.

The program chairman, Mrs. Joan Newman, outlined plans for the November and December meetings.

Guests for the evening were Mrs. Shirley Baptiste, Belleville; Mrs. Evelyn Beames; Mrs. Helen Fox, Trenton; Mrs. Alma Mabee, Trenton; Miss Deanna Mentzel, Trenton; and Mrs. Dorothy Watson, Belleville.

W.I. Area Convention Held in Peterborough

MADOC — The 40th annual Trent Valley Area convention of the Women's Institute was held on Tuesday and Wednesday, October 24 and 25, at Northminster United Church in Peterborough.

Trent Valley Area president, Mrs. Gordon Macklin, of Cobourg, presided over the meeting of 253 members. The roll call was answered with the following seven District Presidents speaking on the theme, "Vision with Action": Hastings East, Mrs. Fred Wellman, RR 2, Stirling; Hastings North, Mrs. Ellen Barker, McArthur's Mills; Hastings West, Mrs. Roy Tucker, Stirling; Northumberland East, Mrs. J. P. Whitehorse, Brighton; Northumberland West, Mrs. J. C. Brisbin, Baltimore; Peterborough, Mrs. M. Cornish, RR No. 1 Indian River; Prince Edward, Mrs. George Vincent, Bloomfield.

Mrs. Ted Puddephatt, RR 3, Campbellford, reported on the work done on "Family and Consumer Affairs".

Miss Helen McKercher, Director of Home Economics Services, Department of Agriculture and Food, was the guest speaker of the morning. Miss McKercher is the only honorary president of the Women's Institutes of Ontario. This being the 75th anniversary of the Women's Institutes, she reminded the membership of their purpose: to develop people. The guest speaker also suggested that the members start now to learn the metric system and be fully prepared when it comes into use in 1975.

Gifts were presented to Mrs. Clarence Mann of Peterborough, retiring Federated board member, and Mrs. Gordon McCulloch of Campbellford, retiring Area secretary-treasurer.

Mrs. Percy Carman of Harmora reported on the work done and studies made concerning agriculture and Canadian industries.

The afternoon session was chaired by Mrs. Clifford Reid, 1st vice-president, of RR 4, Belleville.

Mrs. Reginald Payne presented a report of the monies spent, trips taken and public relations report.

Mrs. T. H. Gresham, convener of resolutions, presented two new resolutions: t h a t dwindle, imitation thread used for hemming garments which unravels too easily be corrected and that alcoholic beverage edvertisements be banned because of the influence on Canada's youth.

Mrs. H. Noblett, Ottawa, president of the Federation of Women's Institutes of Ontario, was the afternoon's guest speaker. Mrs. Noblett urged the members to support the work done by the Royal Commonwealth Society for the Blind.

Mrs. C. H. Dallison, RR7, Brighton, gave a musical selection.

Mrs. Alex Bell of Wooler reported on the Education and Cultural Activities in the past year.

The following slate of officers were elected: past president, Mrs. Clifford Barber of Belleville; president, Mrs. Gordon Macklin, RR 4, Cobourg; 1st vice-president, Mrs. Clifford Reid, RR 4, Belleville; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. Douglas Reid, RR 3, Belleville; 3rd vice-president, Mrs. Francis Tobin, RR 1, Madoc; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Gordon Sherwin, Baltimore; assistant, Mrs. A. Kairns, Belleville; public relations officer, Mrs. Reg Payne, Warsaw. Others appointed were: Mrs. Peter Cockburn, RR 1, Picton; Mrs. Percy Carman, Marmora; Mrs. Earl Onderdonk, Carrying Place; Mrs. Ralph Sills, RR 2, Roslin; Mrs. Alex Bell, RR 1, Wooler; Mrs. W. Hennessey, RR. 4, Havelock. Board directors will be as follows: sub-division 1, Mrs. Clifford Barber, edution in Kingston General dock. Carrying Place, alternate. Sub-division 6, Mrs. Shirley Bird, RR 4, Brighton; Mrs. T. H. Gresham, Colborne, alternate.

Or Wednesday morning the guest speakers were home economists, Miss Elaine Struthers, Hastings County; and Miss Karen Fitzsimmons of Northumberland; Miss Christine Hoffman of Peterborough County; and Miss Jacqueline Graham of Prince Edward County, projected thoughts of the future. The life would be lived quite differently. The family structure they visualized showed mother and father as an equal partnership while nursery school managed their toddlers. They also envisioned the "five together, the one-parent family; and the communal family.

In the afternoon the convention was pleased to hear Mr. Jim English of Trent University explain what was happening with today's students.

The convention closed with a tour of the university.

Urges Communication

By DORIS CLARK

"Something to Think About — It takes a child two years to learn to talk, and a man 50 years to learn to keep his mouth shut." — So says Newfoundland's News and Views.

And here I am, urging people to communicate, especially browbeating them into it when I can. I know a psychiatrist who suggests a 20-minute talk session daily, between the two cars during which what comes out is friendly or not; the man likes being let the other fellow know how and what you are thinking.

Yet I do agree that it would not be in the interest of winning friends and influencing people if we did say every last thing we thought — not to mention the pollution the air would get. And how could we hear what anyone else was giving out about?

There is a time for speech and a time for clamming up. The trick is to decide when is which.

Dear Doris: I wrote before and told you about my good luck in meeting all eight of my children visited me this summer.

Their families came too, and I repeated Isaiah four, verse 20 about what God endured! It was fun but exotic. — Widow Mead.

Dear Mead: Isaiah dropped many pearls of wisdom — and does help us to keep serene if we can reach back into memory for quotes of ancient philosophy.

If you are finding that playing hostess to an assortment of children and grandchildren requires something like endurance, I say thousands of other women in your age range nodding their heads as they read this letter. No doubt about it — as we age, energy is not quite as abundant; nerves not quite as long-suffering.

Raising children is for young people, but I'll just bet you wouldn't give up a single minute of your times with any of them.

Dear Doris: I am 15 and in love. This guy is the sweetest guy I've ever seen. We went steady for a month and broke up because of the boy next door. He brought a few records home and I like them. Someone told my boy friend (ex) about it and I could.

I knew he still loves me but it would hurt his pride to come back to me, and it's awful jealous. We planned on taking off on my birthday to the States to get married. We didn't want things to get messed up.

I'm thinking seriously of taking them. I can't live without him. He plans on beating up my next door neighbor and he could, too. — In Love.

Dear In Love: Hold everything! Including your virginity, your boy friend's fist and

PAPAL BAN ILLOGICAL

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Pope Paul's decision not to allow women to enter any part of the formal ministry of the Roman Catholic Church was termed "illogical" by Most Rev. G. Emmitt Carter, Roman Catholic Bishop of London. "I see no reason for women not being formally invested," he said.

any possible resort to drugs or matrimony.

You can mess things up better than anything I could think up by taking action right now. Pretty soon there will be others for you to date and you'll wonder what all the fuss was about.

• • •

(To keep all is to forfeit all. Let Doris help you to understand and live happily with your own cares about. Send your letter in care of this newspaper.)

Second Glance

By Viva Richmond Graham

WITH AUTUMN'S GIFT OF LEAVES

'As they comb the ivy on the wall
The lively fingers of November's breeze
Inadvertently sets adrift errant leaves
That merrily glide in the air, then fall,
As if grateful, grateful for
A freedom, long longed-for.'

And as if to celebrate the occasion, small children, gleefully scamper through and roll in their golden depths accompanied by rollicking members of the canine and feline world. It is an uplifting sight to behold — and a gift to mankind, only Autumn bestows . . . however fleetingly.

For with summer's finery now so definitely laid away for another year, so are small pleasures of our neighborhood withdrawn — let us say as far as the feline world is concerned:

Jiggs, one of his senior members no longer seeks the rigors of the tossing leaves, but is content to lie within the bounds of the coziness of a comfortable chair rather than explore his favorite haunts about the yard. As chill taints the air, much the same may be said for the younger members: Pur, Whitey, Zeke beau, Smokey, Susie.

There is perhaps an exception — for there is a newcomer. A tiny, lively, gray kitten — with an innocence of the most joyous kind — and given the name of "Peanut".

One notes there is something applicable about culinary names for pets of the cat kingdom. Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Gnaedinger of Melrose (RR1 Shannonville) have two little strays which they have adopted and named "Honey" and "Marmalade".

As if in keeping with our subject, here is a letter in today's post from a young correspondent, mother of a two-year old son, who writes in part:

"We had a cat-neighbor who lived across the street and visited formally with us once a week for 16 years. This beautiful gray cat was highly intelligent, which fact he exhibited in remarkable ways. He was raised with a collie dog whose habit was to await their mistress' arrival in a certain prescribed place on a rut in front of the door. This the dog did every day. After he died, the cat who visibly mourned him, took his exact position to welcome his mistress. . . .

She then speaks of her own Collie dog that was five years old when the baby was born.

Ann Landers
This Teenager Wants More Parental Discipline

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a teen-ager who feels cheated by my parents. "Out of what?" you might ask. The answer is discipline.

I know this sounds silly but it's true.

My parents thought they were being nice to me by letting me do whatever I wanted. But they were wrong. Way I went to the Lomes of friends and saw them being told what to do, what time to come home, asked questions like "Exactly where are you going and with whom?" I felt cheated. Let down. I wondered why my parents didn't care enough about me to get tough.

I try to do the right thing but it isn't easy when I know I don't have to answer to anybody. I have no respect for my parents because they have no power over me. Kids respect power.

Please tell parents to set up rules and insist that they are obeyed—or else. And tell them that when kids break the rules to lay it on. Parents who love their kids don't have to worry about not being loved in return. —On My Own in Oregon

Dear On Your Own: You've said succinctly in one letter what I've been trying to say in hundreds of columns and three books. Thank you.

Dear Ann Landers: This problem is not of grave importance, but it bothers me a great deal and I need to tell someone about it.

I celebrated my 75th birthday last week and my son's wife and his children had a dinner party for me. It was pleasant, as always, but it was like every other dinner. They talked among themselves and I was excluded from the conversation. No one asked me what I thought about anything. I just sat there like a lump on a log. I felt like an outsider. Is there any more dearest kin and I love them very much. Is this the way it is with other grannies? Please tell me the truth. Ann.—Speechless

Dear Ann Lander²: Eighteen months ago my mother ended and my sister and I chose to marry 20 years of an unhappy marriage by divorcing my father. It was a quiet divorce. You must be asked a question before you can express an opinion? If you have something to say you should speak up. Or better still, ask your grandchildren questions about topics that interest you. My grandchildren have taught me plenty!

Mom married a wonderful man six months ago. It does our hearts good to see her treated like a human being. Because of all the years Mom and Dad were fighting, as clamming up and not speaking to each other, or sending messages through us kids, I developed a terrible fear of marriage. I kept cutting out your columns about man-and-wife problems so I'd know what to do. You made so much sense I was sure it would come in handy when I was older.

Now I have a scrapbook that goes back nearly 10 years. I have profited from your advice and this letter is to thank you. Live with Mom.

—Marsala Girl

Dear Buff: I'm flattered that you would cut out and save my columns for 10 years.

STUDENTS TUTOR

HALIFAX (CP) — About 100 students from Dalhousie, St. Mary's and Mount Saint Vincent universities here will once again offer tutoring services to city school children. Pupils in Grades 4 to 9 in north-end schools will be helped in Operation Outreach. Project manager Mike Lynk says the program brings the university to the community, but often the university students learn more from the encounter than do the school children.

Harvest Bazaar Held

A Harvest Happening bazaar and tea was held recently at Holloway Street United Church with a record attendance.

General convener was Mrs. Ellen Moore, assisted by Mrs. Ruth McMillan.

Receiving the guests were Mrs. Mary Kellogg, Mrs. Hazel Wilson, Mrs. Hazel Dixon, Mrs. Jean Hanenlink, Mrs. Pauline Potts and Mrs. Eileen Moore.

Mrs. Vera Morphy, assisted by Mrs. Jean Thompson and Mrs. Muriel Yorke, conveyed the decorating committee and carried out the harvest theme in the foyer using gourds, centred with a basket of autumn leaves, wheat sheaf. Of much interest was the antique green vase filled with Japanese lanterns, milk weed pods and wheat, enhanced by a large table bouquet in orange, beige and brown shades.

The autumn scene was set up on the education hall stage with a cedar rail fence, corn, hay and fall vegetables forming the background for the booths.

The bake table was convened by Mrs. Marilyn Watson and Mrs. Jeanette Outzgdyke, the apron booth by Mrs. Bertha Coulter and Mrs. Alice Kilbank, the home-made candy by Mrs. Kathleen Poole and Mrs. Jill Empey and the Christmas booth by Mrs. Mary Vanderwoort and Mrs. Margaret Oliphant.

Conveners of the country store were Mrs. Kay Dickens and Mrs. Masha DeMille. Mrs. Ruth McMillan, Mrs. Trenna Moore and Miss Clara Adams convened the plant booth and Mrs. Ruth Bailey, Mrs. Thelma Townsend and Mrs. Marjorie Ptolmey conveened the sewing and knitting booth. Conveners of the white elephant table were Mrs. Marjorie Miller and Mrs. Anna Simpson.

Pouring tea were Mrs. Eva Brown, Mrs. Rena Robertson, Mrs. Jaraimy Denyes and Mrs. Gladys Green.

The tea room was decorated with floral arrangement of yellow and bronze mums and the tea table, covered with a green cloth, held a centrepiece of grapes, apples and pears in a fall cornucopia.

Tue tea tables were centred with bouquets of vegetables. The tea room hostesses were Mrs. Dorothy Taylor, Mrs. Muriel Yorke, Mrs. Nellie Campbell, and Mrs. Vera Morphy. Conveners were Mrs. Amy Vader and Mrs. Chris Strawbridge.

Those in charge of the kitchen were Mrs. Muriel Chilchill, Mrs. Flossie Bird and Mrs. Thelma Barickel.

Mrs. Mabel Rowe and Mrs. Pearl Holmes were ticket conveners and Mrs. Lynda Payne and Mrs. Sharon Skilly were in charge of the nursery.

Hull's Advice Working

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Winnipeg Jets have been taking the advice of their coach, Bobby Hull, and firing at opposition goalies whenever the opportunity arises.

They've had relative success in the World Hockey Association, but Friday not even Hull's influence could help them against New York Raiders' Peter Donnelly.

The Jets were on target 49 times, but the Raider rookie goaltender was equal to the task and the New Yorkers won 9-6.

While the Jets' emphasized shooting, the Raiders concentrated on accuracy and beat veteran Ernie Wakely on nine of just 34 shots.

In the only other game, Alberta Oilers scored three second-period goals en route to a 6-3 win over Houston Aeros to share top spot in the WHA's Western Division with Winnipeg.

Philadelphia Blazers move into Boston for an afternoon game today with New England Whalers while night contests have Quebec Nordiques at Cleveland Crusaders and Los Angeles Sharks visiting Chicago Cougars.

The Raiders and Jets meet in Winnipeg again Sunday when Alberta entertains Ottawa Nationals. Houston visits Los Angeles, Chicago is at Quebec and Philadelphia plays Minnesota's Fighting Saints.

The Jets fired 16 shots at Donnelly in the first period and 20 in the second but were unable to overcome the Raider rookie despite three third-period scores.

Ron Ward scored twice and picked up assists while Bobby Sheehan also scored two and added an assist to push his league-leading points' total to 21.

Norm Ferguson, Wayne Rivers, Ken Block, Brian Bradley and Brian Perry notched other New York goals in front of 4,162 fans. Milt Black, with two, Danny Johnson, Chris Bordeleau, Brian Cadle and Norm Beaudin scored for the Jets.

Oilers' Doug Barrie and Dennis Kassian broke a 1-1 tie in the second period as Edmonton. After Ted Taylor's goal narrowed the count to 3-2, Bob Wall scored the winner.

Brian Carlin opened the scoring for Alberta midway through the first period before Poul Popiel scored the first of his two goals to even the score before 2,709 fans.

Gravelle Gets Three

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Brockville Braves managed to stay one point ahead of Smiths Falls Bears in the Central Junior Hockey League Friday night as both teams won their games.

The Braves downed second place Ottawa Rangers 7-4 to hang on to their third-place spot, and the Bears beat Nepean Raiders 3-3 to stay in fourth place.

Rick Sprackiin and Dave Elsie each scored two goals for the Brockville, win Al Silmser, Steve McCombie and Dave Mollon scoring one each.

Rich Bordeleau scored twice for Ottawa and Norm McLoud and Kirl Molton scored single goals.

John Gravelle scored three goals for Smiths Falls, with Don Robertson adding two more to round out the scoring.

Maurice Lamoureux and Don Langill scored for Nepean. Games Sunday match the Bears against league-leading Pembroke Lumber Kings, while the Braves travel to Hull to meet the Festivals.

Orillia Edges Past Barrie

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Orillia Terriers tuned up for their Sunday meeting with the West German National Team on Friday night by trouncing Belleville Quinte 10-1 in an Ontario Hockey Association Senior A contest.

Kingston Aces edged Barrie Flyers 2-1, Brantford Foresters defeated Oakville Oaks 4-2, and Galt Hornets trimmed Owen Sound Downtowners 6-5.

Grant Moore and Garrie Marsh led the Terriers with two goals each. Mike Draper, Claire Alexander, Bruce Dyken, Jim O'Brien, Gary Milroy and Doug Dannville added the others.

The victory, coupled with Barrie's loss to Kingston, enabled the Terriers to move into sole possession of first place.

At Kingston, the Aces broke a five-game losing streak in gaining their third victory of the season.

Bob Collins' goal with a little more than a minute left in the game gave Kingston the victory.

John Mercer also scored for Kingston and Connie Mandula had the other.

Second period goals by Terry McKnight, Dave Johnson and John Gignac, plus an insurance goal in the third by Don Fraser gave the Foresters the victory over the visiting Oaks.

Gil Nicholson and Hank Monteith scored for Oakville who outshot Brantford 28-23.

At Owen Sound, the Hornets exploded for five goals in the second period before 800 fans.

League action tonight has Brantford in Galt and the Aces in Barrem 1 a e

UNICEF Cards on Sale

Of the 10 Canadian designs selected for a collection of 40 available from the United Nation's Children's Fund, only eight are being offered for sale in mini-packages in Canada. One design, that of a dove by Howard Alstad, was excluded for sale in the Canadian collection because of similarity with a previously chosen dove card from Germany.

A ninth, depicting a Danby painting of a village blacksmith shop is available only in lots of 100. The winning designs were donated free by the artists. The Canadian selection includes an ink drawing by Allan Fleming; a tempera by Kenneth Danby; water colors by Alma Duncan and John Elpick (the Duncan Leaves in Snow watercolor card is similar to her Maple Leaves in Winter design on a recent Canadian postage stamp) an embossing by Howard Alstad and the lithographs by Hudson Bay Eskimos Lucy, Tye, Pudlo, Eidoloue and Eckaloo Goo.

Canadian artists lead the world in designs for UNICEF greeting cards this year and according to Mrs. J. C. Lynch, publicity chairman for cards distribution in the Trenton area, this choice will aid in the publicity necessary to reach sales goals. Last year, she said, Canadian UNICEF sales for the first time topped the $1-million mark.

While UNICEF annually raises thousands of dollars from its Hallowe'en boxes and Miles for Millions walkathons, it is sale of Christmas cards, boxes of notepaper and art book-calendars that forms the major portion of funds raised for needy children the world over.

Not only are the cards imported in four languages, used for Christmas exchange, they are also sold in many countries by commemoratis Buddhist, Moslem and Jewish holidays. In Japan, they're exchanged during the Japanese New Year and in communist countries, are sent on birthdays and anniversaries.

The UNICEF card program was founded in 1948 when a 9-year-old Czechoslovakian girl Jitka Samovka, painted a picture of children dancing around a Maypole and sent it to the UN agency as her way of saying thank you for the milk she'd been given. Her painting was used on the first UNICEF greeting card. In 1971 there were 82 million sold and the selection has grown from a handful of designs to an ever-changing selection of dozens.

The total amount realized through sale of cards multiplies seven-fold by the time it reaches the children. Almost every one of the 132 contributing countries matches the amount raised by card sales in each respective county. The country benefitting from UNICEF contributes 2½ times the sum it is given.

Funds are used to provide food and medical care for 140 million children in 113 underdeveloped countries. Since the program began, the UN agency has raised more than $534 million, with a present annual world income of $80 million.

Price of the cards has risen along with the funds. Mrs. Lynch expects some people will notice the increase, but believes "people buy them just because they are from UNICEF."

Prices range from $1.75 for boxes of 10 Eskimo art cards and envelopes as well as the popular, traditional styles and scenic designs, to $3 a box of 10 cards for the Prestige selection that includes the maple leaf design, an old American sailing ship and a sparkling star tree by a Finnish artist.

an abstract blue disc, and reproductions of five designs from the 8th century Book of Kells.

As well, distributors have selections of note cards, notepaper, a simple wall calendar, selections of the most popular UNICEF designs of recent years, and an art innovation.

A large diary-calendar book of reproductions of works by artists such as the Canadian William von Moll Sarcray, and world masters, Rembrandt, Galsborough, and Goya, and sculptures by Romans, Chinese, Egyptians and Hittites, have been printed back-to-back. When the calendar is used up, those pages can be detached, leaving a complete art book.

Local volunteer distributors, under organizer Mrs. R. J. Oliver, hope soon to display a selection of UNICEF '72 at a downtown store.

Distributors are Mrs. Oliver, 198 Dufferin, 392-6729; Mrs. H. R. Armstrong, 228 McGill, 392-5326; Mrs. F. W. Deacon, 106 Shuter, 392-3701; Mrs. B. Friesen, 114 Prospect Hill, 392-4789; Mrs. Lynch, 6 Manor Crescent, 392-7862; Mrs. C. D. Murphy, 19 Patrick St., 392-7889; Mrs. F. M. Murphy, 1 Broadner Blvd. 392-3801 and outside Trenton, Mrs. Ivan Lockhart, 23 Sidney Cresc., Frankford, 398-6677 and Scanlon's Pharmacy, 1 Main St., Brighton, 475-2313.

Scholarship Presented

Hunters Off and Gunning

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Big game marksmen fan out through Quinte district wilderness this weekend, ready for Monday's opening of the annual deer hunt.

It's a district that last year drew more gamesmen than any other hunting area in Ontario — and this year it's an open season on moose.

This year, about one in five may bring home a deer — if advance estimates of provincial government wildlife officials are borne out.

During the 1971 season almost 4,300 deer were shot in the Tweed district of the natural resources ministry — a 22 percent success racing for the number of hunters in the region.

Although deer populations don't show any apparent decrease this year, similar hunter success is expected this year," said a ministry official at Tweed.

Last year, 19,500 hunters were recorded throughout the district — the highest concentration in the province.

This year, it looks as though the record could be repeated.

A Belleville sports store operator reports sales of hunting equipment and clothing is on par with last year.

Up to yesterday, said Ms. Burris, license sales were running about 10 per cent more than last season.

As usual, there are two different closing dates in the Quinte area with Highway 7 the official demarcation line.

South of the highway the season ends Nov. 11, and extends into two weeks ending Nov. 18 in the sprawling bushland of the district's northern area.

Moose-hunting also is permitted this year in the north — where the district's small moose population is scattered.

The big game animal has always been present in the northwest end of the Quinte district in numbers more "representative than plentiful," says a wildlife official. It sparsely inhabits such areas as Herschel and McLure townships in Hastings county, the north end of Wellemkon Lake and west of Mazinaw Lake in Lennox and Addington County.

In the Quinte area, open seasons are declared only every two or three years, depending on estimates of the moose population.

Moose licencers, unlike those for deer hunting, cannot be sold by local issuers. Permission must be obtained from the ministry in Tweed.

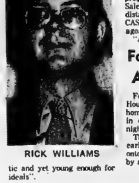
Still a Top Shot..At 83

Now 83, Walter Wright of Stirling still is a marksman who rarely misses on the deer granges. Hunting for more than 40 years — he's off for another season this weekend, as is his son, Jim, now 43, who learned first hunting lessons from his father as a youngster. The older Wright, former baker and storekeeper, still does all the cooking for hunt companions at Plevna camp.

Teacher Seeks Election

Loyalist College psychology teacher Rick Williams, has thrown his hat into the election ring, announcing his candidacy for alderman in the upcoming municipal election.

The 24-year-old associate master of psychology, came to the city two years ago from Toronto to take his position at the college.



"Aldermen already on council are not electing or acting out of how worthwhile," he said.

Mr. Williams, educated at Queen's University where he obtained his B.A. and University of Toronto where he got his M. A. claimed, "the aldermen on council seem primarily self interested and are moving with little or no sense of purpose"

"... they are accepting short term, expedient solutions," he said.

"Belleville, and the country in general is moving too fast for these short term solutions," said Mr. Williams. "We have to look where we are going."

Concerning his age, Mr. Williams, 24, commented, "I am old enough to be realistic and yet young enough for ideals".

Council, he said, "is not just a post for being a good citizen. Council is a place where inventive, imaginative people work for others."

Mr. Williams, who has lived in the area for two years, is responsible for Queen's law students setting up a free counselling bureau in Belleville.

In his bid for a seat on council he intends distributing a leaflet to every home in the city, fully outlining his commitments and intentions.

Hides Aid Indians

If you're a deer hunter, both provincial and federal governments are after your hide again this year

It's the second successive hunting season that deer — and moose — hides are being sought from Quinte - district game hunters.

The hides, collected by the natural resources ministry are tanned and then distributed by federal Indian affairs agencies to northern Ontario Indian handicraft groups.

The hides — once mostly discarded by hunters — are a windfall for Indian craftsmen who transform them into buckskin mocassins, bags, vests and other clothing items.

Launched in the Quinte area last year, after its success elsewhere in the province, the project brought in 550 hides.

In token exchange, donating hunters this year will receive a small handcooker, useful for warming drink while snowmobiling or ice fishing.

The hides can be handed in at any ministry office or several collection centres.

This year also, the ministry is asking Quinte - area hunters to submit the lower jaws of any deer killed in the Tweed district. The jaws provide valuable information — including ages — on the district's deer population.

Hunters are asked to give their names, addresses, sex of the animal and the township where it was shot.

The Belleville area collection centres for both hides and jaws are the Frankford Game and Fish Club and the Elmwood Dr., home of conservationist George Woods' house, two miles east of Belleville.

Dog Causes Accident

Two young Bellevillians escaped serious injury when a car crashed into a small bridge at Corbyville early Saturday.

Provincial police said the driver, Paul Neill, 17, 27 Stanley Park Dr., was shaken up, while a passenger, Richard Shoebridge, 18, 82 Wallbridge Cres., was treated for minor injuries.

Police said the driver told them the accident — which caused $1,000 damage to his car — happened when a dog ran in front of the vehicle.

Salvationists Hold Service

TWEED — Five officer cadets from the Salvation Army's Toronto training college are conducting services here this weekend.

They were to conduct meetings and services here Saturday and Sunday and a service at the Bancroft senior citizens' home Sunday afternoon.

Advertisers to Meet Here

Those camouflaged people who teach us how to spend our money are coming to Belleville.

The Canadian Advertising and Sales Association is holding a quarterly board meeting here Tuesday with delegates expected from both coasts.

Most of the discussion will centre on marketing practices but resolutions may also be forthcoming.

Billboard advertising — or rather the banishment of it — will be an important topic. Legislators in Richmond Hill and Victoria, B.C., have proposed a ban on outdoor advertising as part of anti-pollution measure, a move marketing people naturally oppose.

A decision by the recently - elected New Democratic government in British Columbia to rescind the ban on cigarette advertising in that province may also draw comment.

CASA is made up of 35 member clubs stretching from St. John's, Nfld., to Vancouver, B.C.

Two are located in Belleville for men and women.

In fact, Carolyn Emerson, president of the Women's Sales and Ad Club, says the kickoff party began when CASA came here three years ago.

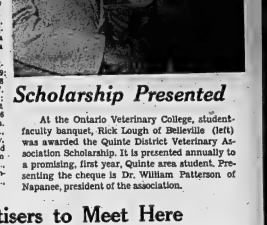
Four Juveniles Apprehended



Four juveniles from the House of Concord training home in Toronto were taken in custody in Belleville last night.

The youths were in a car, earlier reported stolen in Toronto, and reported to Ann St. by a cruiser crew, police said.

Hitchhikers Take Car

Two hitchhiking Toronto juveniles were released on bond to their parents after police said they were stopped at Brockville Friday night driving a car stolen in Belleville.

The car earlier had been reported missing from the Quinte Mall parking lot in north Belleville.

For the most part, Tuesday's meetings will take place behind closed doors. But at noon, a luncheon, sponsored by CJBQ, is scheduled for the Hotel Quinte. And dinner is an evening affair at Sun Luck Gardens.

Guest speaker will be CASA president Lynn Helpard, a Montreal media supervisor. He'll hold a press conference prior to his evening address.

One subject sure to be of concern to local delegates is the annual convention being held next June in Kingston. Brian Onley, past president of the Kingston Men's Sales and Ad Club, now a teacher at Loyalist College, will reveal plans for what has become the largest yearly gathering of advertising personnel in Canada.

Hunters, Anglers Meet

MADOC (Special) The Madoc District Hunters and Anglers held their annual meeting in the Madoc Orange Hall on Tuesday night.

Members of the club reviewed some of the projects carried out during the year, the most recent being sponsorship of the Hunter Safety Course. Nineteen students, under the leadership of Ken Livingstone, completed the course and became eligible to obtain their first hunting licences.

Lloyd Hicks and Joe Foley reported that last Sunday's rifle shoot was one of the largest yet, with 17 shooters competing.

It was announced that a buck trophy is again up for competition during the hunting season. Last year Ted Merawa won the trophy. Members are being encouraged to turn over all deer hides to the Ministry of Natural Resources. These hides go to the Indians for the handicraft industry in Northern Ontario.

Chairman of the nominating committee, Lloyd Hicks, presented a slate of officers for 1972-73.

The next regular monthly meeting will be held Nov. 28.

Warden Honored

More than 300 attended the Warden's Banquet last night in the Legion building.

The banquet, said Carman Gibson, warden of Hastings county "has become a tradition with us."

It is one time in the year when past councillors and wardens, staff of the county and their families can all get together, said Mr. Gibson, guest of honor at the party.

Members of both provincial and federal government were also in attendance.

Mr. Gibson steps down from office this year and during the evening to commemorate his term, he and his wife were presented with a dining room suite from the county and a portrait from their immediate family.

Climax of the Year

Warden Carman Gibson serves punch to his wife and county administrator Carl Bateman and his wife during the warden's banquet last night held in the Legion building. During the evening Mr. Gibson was presented with many gifts as reminders of his term of office with the county.

Ottawa Holds Argonaut Key

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The blurred Eastern Football Conference picture will come into focus this weekend, but not before late Sunday afternoon—and a Western team could help do the clearing.

But whatever happens today when Ottawa Rough Riders entertain Winnipeg Blue Bombers, it still will take the result of Sunday's Toronto Argonaut-Hamilton Tiger-Cat contest to sort out the Eastern standings.

And no matter the outcome of Sunday's game at Hamilton, the team making the third and final playoff berth in the East will have the worst record in league history to gain a postseason spot.

The Rough Riders need a win over Winnipeg, which already has nailed down the Western Conference championship, to hold any hope of finishing atop the EFC standings.

The Ottawa-Winnipeg game will be carried nationally on the CBC television network starting at 2 p.m. EST. The Hamilton-Toronto contest will be seen in Eastern Canada on the CTV network, also at 2 p.m.

A Winnipeg victory today would be a moral victory for the Twats who would clinch first in the East on the basis of their tired wins during the season over Ottawa.

But Hamilton's rookie coach, Jerry Williams, aimed during workouts this week at an Ottawa victory "and I'm confident they will win against Winnipeg."

"The (Ottawa) have a situation where they face a team that does not have to win while we're facing a team (Argos) that has to win."

An Argo win Sunday would leave that team with a 4-10 season's mark, identical to Montreal Alouettes who already have concluded their season's play. A Toronto win, however, would nail down third place in the east on the strength of a 2-1 edge in games with Montreal during the schedule.

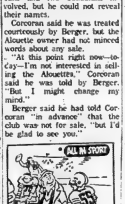
The only other team to make the playoffs in EFC history with only four wins was the 1962 Alouettes who had a 4-7-3 mark and 11 points, three more than the 7-7-2 representative. The Als of 1960 were the team with the lowest point total to qualify, with a 5-9 record and 10 points.

Corcoran Can't Acquire Als

MONTREAL (CP) — Sam Berger, owner of Montreal Alouettes, made one thing clear to a prospective buyer Friday—at this point the Canadian Football League club is not for sale.

Jim (King) Corcoran, the quarterback who said he would form a syndicate to buy the team when he left here in July, got this message from Berger.

Corcoran was in Montreal to work on a CBC television program.



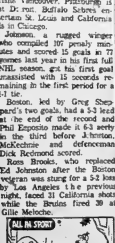
Now a quarterback with a Chambersburg, Pa., semi-pro team, Corcoran said he had come here with considerable backing of a syndicate in Washington, D.C.

He said two Washing on men, builder Dake Sind and lawyer Don Chalkers, were included in the group. Corcoran said three more at least are other Americans and two Canadians involved, but he could not reveal their names.

Corcoran said he was treated courteously by Berger, but the Alouette owner had not minced words about any sale.

"At this point right now—today—I'm not interested in selling the Alouettes," Corcoran said he was told by Berger. "But I might change my mind."

Berger said he had told Corcoran "in advance" that the club was not for sale, "but I'd be glad to see you."



"Somebody named Bobby Fischer sent in this play, Coach. We got any guys named Rook or Bishop?"

Joey Jolts Bruins

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

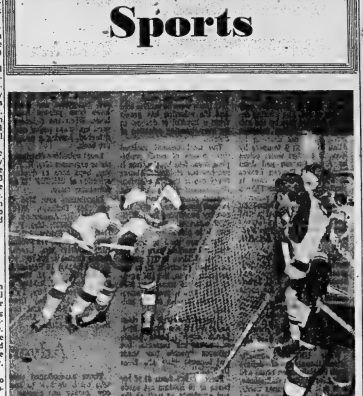
California Golden Seals have looked to Joey Johnston to give muscle power, but he has never been accused of showing a deft scoring touch.

So it will be with some satisfaction the 23-year-old from Peterborough, Ont., can point to Friday's performance against Boston Bruins when Seals he talks contract with California owner Charles Finley.

Johnston scored three goals. He also assisted on Wal McKechnie's tying score when the Seals came from a 4-2 deficit 6-6 tie with the Bruins in one of two National Hockey League games on the West Coast.

In Vancouver, the Canucks scored five unanswered goals in the second and third periods to rout New York Islanders 7-2.

The Islanders are back in action tonight at Los Angeles with the upstart Kings who lead the NHL's West Division. Elsewhere, Detroit Red Wings are at Montreal Canadiens, St. Louis Blues visit Toronto Maple Leafs, Pittsburgh Penguins are at home to New York Rangers, Buffalo Sabres meet the Flyers in Philadelphia and Minnesota North Stars are at home to Chicago Black Hawks.



Toronto is at Atlanta Sunday for its first meeting with the Flames while the Rangers move into Philadelphia. Bigger wins Vancouver. Pittsburgh is at D. DC. Buffalo Sabres entertain St. Louis and California is in Chicago.

Johnson, a rugged winger who compiled 305 penalty minutes and scored 15 goals in 73 games last year in his first full NHL season, got his first goal unassisted with 15 seconds remaining in the first period for a 1-1 tie.

Boston, led by Greg Sheppard's two goals, had a 5-3 lead at the end of the second and Phil Esposito made it 6-3 early in the third before Johnston, McKechnie and defenceman Dick Redmond scored.

Ross Brooks, who replaced Ed Johnston after the Boston veteran was shut out for a 5-2 loss by Los Angeles the previous night, faced 31 California shots while the Bruins fired 39 at Gilie Meloche.

Although Dainard's tactics worked on this occasion, the Lions worked free long enough to score a 6-3 win over Belleville's Bobcats and remain as the only unbeaten team in the league.

Lions Best Bobcats To Remain Unbeaten

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Editor

And then there was one.

Peterborough Lions remain as the only unbeaten team in the Toronto Metro Junior B hockey league by virtue of Friday's 6-3 win over the Belleville Bobcats. The Cats had been 4-0-1 before the game, while Peterborough now leads the league with an 8-0 record.

"You'll I'm happy with the way the boys have been playing," said Peterborough coach Don Wasson. "This is a tough league and tonight was probably our toughest game of the season. Markham, the Young Nationals and Oshawa all have good teams and Belleville and we should be in there."

"Our guys enjoy playing in Belleville. You draw good crowds here and we're always sure of a good game." he continued.

For Bobcats coach Moe Hunter the evening wasn't quite so enjoyable. "We didn't play hockey for the first 30 minutes," he conceded while adding that, "They were playing as a team and we weren't. Everybody was trying to do it on their own."

The longest night, however, was probably put in by Bob Moore. The rookie goalie had been one of the major factors behind Belleville's previously unbeaten record, but was victimized for two soft goals in the second period when the Lions jumped into a 4-1 lead.

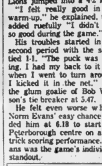
"I felt really good in the warm-up," he explained, then added ruefully, "I didn't have so good during the game."

His troubles started in the second period with the score tied 1-1. "The puck was rolling. I had my back to it and when I went to turn around, I kicked it in the net," said the glum goalie of Bob Wasson's tie breaker at 5:47.

He felt even worse when Norm Evans' easy chance elided him at 6:18 to start the Peterborough centre on a hat trick scoring performance. Evans was the game's individual standout.

While Moore was having his troubles in goal, he still had plenty of help from his teammates in providing the first loss of the season. Evans was allowed to walk in unmolested at 1:48 of the third period for an easy score that put Peterborough ahead 5-2. A third period rally by the Bobcats failed to overcome their earlier mistakes such as taking unneeded penalties and getting trapped too often in the Peterborough end of the rink. The Lions were headmanning the puck past the Belleville forechecckers much of the evening.

Rick Meagher narrowed Peterborough's lead to 5-3 with a brilliant solo effort at 5:51 of the third when he skated through the entire opposing team, deked defenceman Bill Davis and beat goalie John Wasson with a low shot to his stick side.



He also helped stall any Bobcats' comeback hopes however, by removing himself for the last seven minutes of the game because of a fight with defenceman Dave Clements. The pair drew fighting and high sticking penalties and the Bobcats weren't able to muster any serious scoring threat with Meagher in the penalty box.

Peterborough's final tally was scored into a virtually empty net after Moore was lifted on an extra attacker. Able defenseman Neill Turner proved to be a pretty shaky goalie when he attempted to man the vacant Belleville net and was beaten by Ken Saunders hard drive to his stick side.

Ice Chips: Excell team has a goal disallowed in the third period because of a player in the opposing crease. Moore faced 32 shots in the contest while Johnson, a graduate of Lakefield's Junior "D" team was tested 30 times. Belleville was without the services of right winger Rob Potter because of a back injury, while Peterborough was minus team captain Jim Kingdon, another injury victim. Left winger Kevin Joshva got his first taste of junior action after being called up from the Western Tire Juveniles. He played a regular shift and according to Hunter was "the best player I had on the ice". The Bobcats next home game will be Sunday when they meet Oshawa in an 8 p.m. encounter at the Memorial Arena.

Senior Saints Come Clean

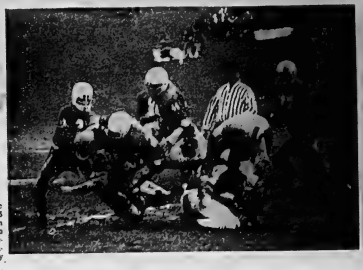
By AL ZABAS
Staff Sportswriter

The Quinte Saints may not have come out clean from Friday's COSSA semi-final mud bath, but they came away victorious.

The Bay of Quinte senior football champions blanked Bowmanville Redmen 24 - 0 earning for themselves their seventh straight win this season.

But the win, at least in the first half, looked like it would be a struggle, as the Redmen defence contained the Quintes. The Saints held only a 2-0 lead at half-time, while Bowmanville came close to producing a first-quarter touchdown.

Bowmanville quarterback Doug Crough faked a handoff to back Mike Cornell, and on a quarterback keep reversed field to wind up on the Quinte one-yard line. With second and goal, the Redmen boggled the handoff and the Saints caught Crough behind his line. With third and 20, Crough's pass failed to connect and Quinte took over on downs.



In a succession of passes to Paul McQuaid and Grant McKenna, quarterback Rick Meagher marched the Saints down to the Redmen's 25-yard line, where Rod Hinze was forced to settle for a single.

With two minutes left in the first half, McQuaid scored a 21-yard touchdown that was called back for a penalty. The half ended with Meagher sitting in the mud on the Redmen 13-yard line, and two solitary points on the board for Quinte.

The second half opened badly for the Redmen, as Quinte defensive half back George Hymers turned the game around with an interception on the Redmen's 32 yard line. From there Kevin Joudwa and McQuaid deposited the pigskin on Bowmanville's two-yard line with a succession of carries. McQuaid, behind the blocking of centre Ralph Lepore and guard John Cody fell in for the touchdown.

The interception and the quick McQuaid score seemed to rattle the Redmen, as John Masterson soon found a hole in Peterborough's secondary taking a 20-yard pass from Meagher for the second major.

To add insult upon injury, the Saints capitalized on a fumble late in the fourth quarter, to allow McQuaid to do his victory dance in the end zone.

Saints Alive

Although it certainly didn't appear so on this particular play, the Quinte Saints were alive and well for most of Friday's COSSA semi - final meeting with Bowmanville Redmen. Quinte survived a slow start before rolling up a 24-0 win over Bowmanville to assure them of their fourth consecutive COSSA finals appearance. Rick Meagher goes under a wave of Bowmanville tackles, while other members of the tough Redmen defence send his blocker sprawling.

League Leaders

Johnny Bucyk scored once for Boston Bruins in their 6-6 tied with California Golden Seals Friday night to move into tie for second place with Jacques Lemaire of Montreal Canadiens in the National Hockey League scoring race.

Lemaire has 12 goals and nine assists for 21 points, one behind leader Gil Perreault of Buffalo Sabres, while Bucyk has six goals and 15 assists.

'Could We Try A Size Larger?'

Bruce Sutherland appears to be getting more than enough help with uniform alterations being performed courtesy of the Kenner Rams. Actually John Thomas and John Sanaconi of the Peterborough school are interested in stepping BCI's big fullback rather than improving upon the uniform design. Stopping Sutherland proved to be quite a chore as he led BCI rushers in their 27-0 COSSA semi-final win over Kenner.

Bad Cats Show Claws To Kawartha Champs

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Editor

They call themselves "Bad Cats" and certainly no one from the Kenner Rams would argue that point.

BCI's junior football team more than lived up to their name Friday afternoon by handing the Kawartha District champions a 27-0 drubbing in their COSSA semi-finals meeting.

Kenner, unbeaten and unscored upon in regular season play, was the third successive football giant felled by BCI in their march to the COSSA finals. The Bad Cats had ruined a perfect Trenton Tiger season in the Bay of Quinte semi-finals and then ousted Moira's Eastern Division champions for the league title.

Losing coach Jess Welker told it pretty much as it was when he admitted that, "we were beaten by a better football team. I don't think they're that much better than us, we're missing three key players through injuries, but even if we were at full strength they'd still be a couple of touchdowns ahead". He added that, "We thought that we had a big football team, but those guys are as big as most of our seniors. What do you feed them down here? That quarterback is a fine passer too — there aren't many senior quarterbacks who can throw the ball that well."

"That quarterback" was Russ Simonds, and he indeed deserved the accolades. The BCI pivot scored two of his team's touchdowns, added a two-point conversion, rushed for a total of 66 yards, returned punts and doubled as a defensive back.

Simonds scored the opening touchdown on a one-yard sneak in the second quarter. The major score was the first this season yielded by the Kenner defensive unit, who had given up only two singles in the league and playoff competition. He then added a two-point conversion with a twisting five-yard end run.

The Bad Cats' best offensive play was a simple "pro pass" to split end Larry Wilson. Simonds connected on six of eight throws in his big receiver for a total of 53 yards. "We knew that those short passes would work against them, and that our screens would go", said head BCI coach Ted Probert after the game. "We used them to set up the rest of our offence".

Fullback Bruce Sutherland, was a key, as well, to the BCI offence netting 66 yards rushing and picking up another 44 on pass receptions. Wilson scored a touchdown with one of his six catches and added key yardage on several others, while Bruce Milliken spearheaded a fine effort by the offensive line that allowed them to roll up 294 yards against the highly rated Peterborough defence.

"Our offence has improved, but it's still not working as a unit. The defence is," noted Probert.

His assessment of his defensive squad could be classified at an understatement in view of the fact that the Cats allowed only five first downs the entire game. Corners Chris Lachman and Brian Reach were keys to "the unit, shutting off the outside running of shifty halfback Don Saunders while the defensive line's rush prevented Kenner quarterback Eric Perrin from going to the air. Wes Moult led the squad with 10 unassisted tackles while other standouts included Rick Hounslow, Don Kingston, Harry Windlier and Wilson.

Simond's converted touchdown and a 30-yard single by Bruce Simonds gave the Cats a 9-0 lead at halftime. He added his second major on a 12-yard sweep in the third quarter, while Wilson's touchdown catch and a 10-yard run by Lachman completed the BCI scoring.

Trojan Jrs. Earn Rematch

The Bay of Quinte finalists, BCI and Moira will also be meeting each other as the Kawartha District champions.

Moira Trojans salloped Oshawa's Courtice Secondary 34-6, Friday, earning a shot at the COSSA champion ship. They were beaten 13-9 by BCI for the Bay of Quinte title.

Rick Barbeau put the first Moira major on the board, with the conversion pass making the first quarter score 8-0.

After the half-time intermission, the Trojans chalked up three major scores. Quarterback Jim Lowe, Dan Gutoskie, and Mike McClelland added majors to the 8-0 halftime score. All three third-quarter touchdowns were converted with a pass. Courtice's only major came in the fourth quarter, while Moira also added a safety, rounding off the score to 34-6.

When asked the reason for the big win, coach Sneddon attributed it to "good running inside, then outside" and good defensive work by end Peter McBride, tackle Brian Spencer, and line backer Rick Growdem.

Moira will not meet BCI juniors who won their contest against Peterborough's Kenner Secondary 28-6.

Moira's senior Trojans were smashed 59-0 by the powerful Adam Scott entry from Peterborough.

The Trojans, minus eight players lost through injuries, were no match for the Kawartha District champions.

Terriers Show Sr. 'A' Teeth

ORILLIA (Special) — Orillia Terriers sank their teeth into a shorthanded Bellcville Quintes team Friday night, taking a 10-1 Senior A Hockey decision.

The visitors were hit by a manpower shortage when Ron Jury, Lorne O'Donnell, John McConnell, Bruce Cameron and Bob Edmunds were forced to honor job commitments. The team has also lost the services of defenceman forward Mike Reze who was forced to retire because of job commitments. George Ferguson played last night but was hampered by the removal of several teeth at the dentist.

Orillia led only 1-0 after the first period on a goal by Mike Draper following only 33 seconds of play. They added four goals in the middle frame, however and added five more in the third.

Greg Marchen spoiled John McWilliam's shutout bid with only a minute, 20 seconds left to play in the game. Dan Piotrowski and Bobby Taylor earned assists.

GREG MARCHEN

For the Terriers Grant Moore and Jim Keon each scored twice while single honors went to Draper, Clare Alexander, Ron Clarke, Jim O'Brien, Gary Milton and Doug Dunnville. Draper added four assists to his tally.

Back-up goalie Randy Reid played the entire game for Belleville facing 42 shots as opposed to only 24 for McWilliams.

Now there are three sedans built like a Volkswagen.

If you think Volkswagens only come in one basic sedan, here are three surprises for you.

The 1973 Super Beetle Sedan is completely redone inside. It's bigger. It has a curved windshield that's 42% larger and farther away. It has a padded easier-to-read dash. It's contoured front seats. Four-wheel independent suspension. A sealed steel bottom. And inertia type seat belts. All standard.

If you'd like more room you'll like The 1973 Type 3 Compact Sedan. It comes with an air-cooled engine. Electronic fuel injection. Front disc brakes. Four-wheel independent suspension. A sealed steel bottom. Four-on-the-floor stick shift. A double-jointed rear axle and front stabilizer bar for smoother cornering. It also has inertia type seat belts. Bucket seats. And two trunks. All standard.

If you want a big luxurious Volkswagen. The 1973 412 4-Door Sedan is for you. It comes with an all-steel unitized body. Front disc brakes. Electronic fuel injection. Four-wheel independent suspension. Quality carpets. Metallic paint. A glare-proof padded dash. Inertia type seat belts. Reclining bucket seats. A rear window defogger. And steel-belted radial tires. All standard.

And all three sedans come with something you won't find in any other sedans: Volkswagen craftsmanship. The 1973 Volkswagen sedans. Quality isn't optional.

Better still, call in at 185 Pinnacle St. and let Roy explain how life is a Mutual affair.

Hill Harnesses Balky Putter

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Forrest Fezler was alone at Mike Hill was laconic, as usual, after harnessing a balky putter and taking the lead in the $125,000 Texas open golf tournament.

Said Hill:

"It makes my objective—making the top 60—look a lot better. That's the only reason I'm here anyhow, to make the top 60."

The top 60 money winners this season are exempt from qualifying for next year's regular tour events. Hill is on the bloc, but his four-under-par 68 Friday put him in a strong position to gain an exemption.

Hill, who has had putting troubles since winning the 1970 Doral-Eastern Open, had a 36-hole total of 135, nine under par on the 7,011-yard Woodlake Golf Club course.

That put him one stroke in front of Orville Moody and rookie Larry While.

Fezler and a group at 136 included Australian Bob Shaw, former Masters champions Charles Coody and Billy Casper, and veteran Dan Sikes. Coody had the best round of the cool, windy day, a 67.

Ben Kern of Toronto, at 139, was the lone Canadian to survive the halfway cut and was just four strokes behind the leader after a 70 Friday.

British Open champion Lee Trevino blew a good round with bogeys on two of his last three holes. He still finished with a 69 and was only five strokes back at 140 along with first-round leader Bobby Ley.

Canadians missing the cutoff mark of 145 were Ken Fulton of Montreal and Gary Bowerman of Toronto, both at 147, and Vancouver's Wayne Vollmer who carded a second round 79 for a 153 total.

Brown Paces Rushers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

One division lead will be settled in National Football League action this weekend and some others might easily change hands while Larry Brown, Washington Redskins' powerhouse runner, hopes to hit the 1,000-yard rushing mark in Sunday's action.

Cincinnati Bengals and Pittsburgh Steelers, tied with 5-2 records in the American Football Conference's Central Division, will settle the matter of leadership there.

First-place Oakland Raiders and runner-up Kansas City Chiefs, separated by a half-game, will battle for the AFC's Western Division lead.

Atlanta Falcons, a half-game behind Los Angeles in the National Football Conference's Western Division, visit the Rams in another showdown struggle.

The NFC's Central Division-leader Detroit Lions and Green Bay Packers should also be unlocked—but on separate fields. The Lions play Chicago Bears while the Packers meet San Francisco 49ers.

Brown, meanwhile, leads the Redskins against New York Jets in an inter-conference battle that will make reverberations in the Eastern Division of both conferences.

Brown, who has an NFL-leading 841 yards, will attempt to help his team remain atop the NFC East, one game over Dallas Cowboys.

The Jets are two games behind Miami Dolphins in the AFC East. The Dolphins, undefeated in seven games, figure to make it eight in a row over the hapless Buffalo Bills Sunday.

In the other games, Dallas gets San Diego Chargers, New York Giants play host to Denver Broncos, New Orleans Saints meet Minnesota Vikings, Houston Oilers take on Cleveland Browns and Philadelphia Eagles entertain St. Louis Cardinals.

Both Cincinnati and Pittsburgh are off to their best start in years. The last time they met this season, the Bengals won as Horst Muhlmann kicked five field goals.

Kansas City, seeking its first home victory in the game with Oakland, will have to contend with a high-powered Raider offence steered by Daryle Lamonica.

Both Atlanta and Los Angeles will try to forget last week's results when both lost by big scores. In an earlier meeting, Atlanta won 31-3 on the strength of a destructive ground game.

Washington is making its second trip to New York in eight days, beating the New York Giants by a touchdown last Sunday. The Jets have won three straight.

Brown ripped off 191 yards against the Giants. In addition to his rushing achievements, Brown also has gained 293 yards on 24 pass receptions.

Chicago hopes to make Detroit its fourth straight victim. The game matches two of the best running quarterbacks in football—Chicago's Bobby Douglass and Detroit's Greg Landry.

San Francisco is coming off its best offensive performance of the year, a 49-14 pasting of Atlanta. Green Bay, on the other hand, is coming off a poor performance, both offensively and defensively, losing 27-13 to Minnesota.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

SUNDAY, Nov. 5

Aries (March 21-April 19): Your participation in community affairs is a manifestation of faith creates meaning for others. You needn't organize anything outside your immediate home area.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Romance tends toward deeper, serious commitment. Simple declarations carry your message most effectively.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): You have much pent up energy. It's no handy channel for its expression. This Sunday it's more than being and becoming than merely doing.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Hidden emotion pop into full view, if you're watching. Realize others see you in a harsh light, stay within your real convictions.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): This is a Sunday for putting all your affairs to rights. Visits convey extra meanings.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You have essentially no actual, no alternative to making the sensible best out of things as they are.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Invitations tempt you out of regular weekend habits into a wider circuit of personal adventure, new contracts.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your deeper characteristics are obvious without intention, so the less you try managing, the better. Today's associations are for future, and are lasting.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Seek restful solitude. Meditation offers a glimpse of eternity, your path along the ways of the future.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be home at least in thought if you can't actually be there. Distant people deserve full attention in correspondence.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Abstain from offering advice and counsel until specifically asked. Listen and learn, get a view different from work-week perspectives.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Abstract, mental approaches prevail—it's the main idea, rather than the details and applications that counts.

MONDAY, NOV. 6

Aries (March 21-April 19): You're more in a mood to lay out future moves than to put anything into immediate effect. Don't neglect routines.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Take you can achieve only with much framework you can build heavily. Be sure your contribution is identified.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): To concentrate on the job at hand is plenty. A steady push breaks the back of the job and you're in the clear fairly early.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Rigid plans admit no response to slow changes, the accumulation of hindrances. Selection of new goals should enter your thinking.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Every word is loaded with meaning. Long-standing issues come to crisis, can be resolved only through wisdom and insight.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Extroversion with finances provokes temporary chaos. It's better to talk about possibilities than to act prematurely.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It's just as well you let ideas lurk in the background for another day. Conserve your energy for later in the week.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Again, what you want done well should be done by you or under your direct supervision. Press forward with well-considered plans.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22—Dec. 21): Avoiding new involvements while winding up pending business or neglected details may be a delicate but very worthwhile.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Fill in the outline of recent ventures, collect facts and figures for future reference. Do the appropriate things.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Slow solitary pulling is today's theme. Little competition or resistance shows, but little close collaboration either.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Imagination is ultra-real, but with little result, unless you make notes for the future. A touch of laziness is a safety valve.

To Your Good Health

You're Rested If You Feel Rested

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 15 and never get to sleep at night. I usually go to bed at 9:30 p.m. or 10 p.m., but never get to sleep until about 11:30 or midnight. I have tried everything from reading the newspaper to counting sheep. Do you have any suggestions?—C. A. S.

How do you feel when you wake up: Rested? Then you are getting enough rest. If not, then you obviously aren't.

Sleep demands differ from person to person, depending on age and how active the person is during the day. If some hours sleep serves you well and you awake bright-eyed and bushy-tailed, then it is enough for you and you will learn to adjust to 8.

If you are sluggish in the morning, unprepared to meet the new day's demands on yourself, then you have a genuine sleep problem and you should do something about it.

Suggestions: There are plenty of them that may or may not work for you:

Don't drink bathroom tap hot, too cold? Do you use too many or too few pillows? Instead of a drink too much cola or coffee? Do you eat too heavily too close to bedtime, or does your stomach seem uncomfortably empty?

These are things you can adjust.

A bit of fresh air, perhaps a 10- or 15-minute walk just before retiring, may help. Have a warm bath or a glass of warm milk or cocoa at bedtime.

If you're still not resting, maybe it is of the wrong type. If it is of the sort that keeps your mind may wander off from the subject too easily and it could be worse than counting sheep—or presidents.

Activity may help you, perhaps a bicycle ride around the block. A girl your age should be active enough to burn off energy from eight to 10 hours sleep should be no problem.

You may be going through a period of particularly intense worry about any number of things which in time will disappear along with the sleeplessness.

I've mentioned several things, but not sleeping pills, and for good reason. In their proper place and properly prescribed, they are fine.

Often those who, for one reason or another, don't get, or feel they don't get, enough sleep, turn too quickly to them. In some cases they may be trying to induce by drugs what nature has not demanded of them—more sleep.

It is wise, don't you agree, to sort out the causes of sleeplessness, which could be any of those I suggest, and act accordingly?

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it harmful for a child of two to wear sunglasses every day when it is sunny? She looks cute, but a friend says they aren't. I am concerned. I say she should get used to the sun or wear a hat or bonnet.—Mrs. M. S.

At that age they all look cute in sunglasses, but such glasses are hardly necessary (although they

NEW RATES* FOR CALLS ACROSS CANADA

The rate changes apply to Long Distance calls to many areas in Canada, as shown on the map. These changes do not affect Long Distance calls within Bell Canada territory in Ontario, Quebec, Labrador, and to some points in N.W.T.

MOST DIAL-DIRECT RATES REDUCED, MOST OPERATOR-HANDLED AND PERSON-TO-PERSON RATES INCREASED.

In every case, calls you dial yourself will cost less than operator-handled and person-to-person calls. The difference in cost between these calls is shown in the table of examples below. (Operator-handled calls include coin telephone, hotel-motel, collect, third number, time and charge requests, ZENITH, credit card and operator-preferred.)

FOR THE FIRST TIME ON CALLS ACROSS CANADA, A ONE-MINUTE RATE WHEN YOU DIAL DIRECT.

In our previous schedule for calls across Canada, the minimum long distance charge was for three minutes. In future, it will be for one minute, when you dial direct; you'll pay only for the number of minutes you use. The minimum for operator-handled and person-to-person calls will continue to be three minutes.

These reductions apply to the total charge for dial-direct calls and, after the three-minute minimum, to "overtime" minutes on operator-handled calls. There are no reductions on person-to-person calls.

(If Direct Distance Dialing is not yet available where you live or in the community you are calling, the operator will place such a call at the dial-direct rates.)

Monday through Saturday	8 am to 6 pm	"Day" rate	regular charge
Monday through Saturday	6 pm to midnight	"Evening & Sunday" rate	30% off regular charge
Sunday	8 am to midnight
Daily	midnight to 8 am	"Night" rate (maximum rate, 300 a minute)	50% off regular charge

Easy Victory Is Predicted For Nixon

WASHINGTON (CP) — Months of ceaseless politicking draw to an end today, with the latest polls signalling a potential landslide for Richard Nixon despite the strenuous efforts of challenger George McGovern to challenge the president's credibility and his will for peace.

Final reports from the major poll-takers before Tuesday's voting indicated the president has clung to the support of 60 per cent or more of the voters—almost undiminished in the last 10 weeks of hectic campaigning and unwavering at that by McGovern.

McGovern's own showing has increased marginally as more of the undecided voters have assigned their favor, but he still faces the prospect of a defeat to rival that of Conservative Republican Barry Goldwater in 1964, when Lyndon Johnson swept 61 per cent of the vote.

Even the most cautious of Nixon's political advisers were able to see only a few states—Massachusetts, Wisconsin, West Virginia, the District of Columbia—where the president might lose.

However, two of the pollsters, Lou Harris and Daniel Yankelovich, cautioned against taking the poll results as definitive. Appearing together on a television panel, Harris said this is a year of "volatility" while Yankelovich spoke of a "narrowing lead" for Nixon as a result of the faltering Vietnam negotiations.

Speaking to a crowd of several thousand in Brooklyn during a sweep of normally Democratic New York boroughs, McGovern gave his own reply: "We're going to give the public opinion poll-takers the biggest surprise of their lives."

The second-to-last day of the campaign featured the same sort of scenario as the previous weeks, a generally tranquil day for the president, out of public sight, and a feverish round of activity and speeches by the Democratic nominee.

McGovern accused Nixon and his foreign policy adviser, Henry Kissinger, of the "big lie" technique, trying to trick the Americans voter into believing peace is near in Southeast Asia is at hand.

"That is not true," he told a national TV audience from New York. "The fact is that the war is not ending."

He cited the four million pounds of bombs he said were dropped that day on Vietnam and the fresh flood of armaments being sent to South Vietnam before a ceasefire takes effect.

And he said the proposed peace settlement leaves unresolved the issues for which 10 years of war had been fought, including the presence of Hanoi's troops in the south and a coalition government that would include the communists.

Two men whose sons had been killed since last Tuesday, the original deadline for a ceasefire, had volunteered their help, McGovern said, "to see to it that this man who was elected on a pledge of peace four years ago does not have another four years to play with the lives of the young people of this country."

How They Responded!

When Bellevillians Bill and Jean McLean decided to personally lend a hand with appeal for young victims of the Vietnam war the response was overwhelming. Yesterday they were still packing the clothing, toys, food donated by individuals, community groups and business. For details, see Page 3.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Most southern Ontario localities will have sunshine today and afternoon temperatures should reach 50 degrees. But another cloud band will be spreading through the south Tuesday bringing an increasing chance of showers. A storm centre approaching Lake Superior from the west will mean considerable precipitation in the two days for northern Ontario. Temperatures will be well above normal.

Campaign Cash Made Hot Issue

WASHINGTON (CP) — Although this is the first United States presidential election since sweeping new campaign spending laws came into force, the mud-flinging over campaign cash is a hotter issue than at any time in recent history.

And it is certainly the most expensive campaign ever; President Nixon and Democrat George McGovern have already spent at least $64.5 million. The actual total will be considerably higher, but it will not be known until after the election Tuesday—if ever.

Most of the allegations of shady dealings—financial and otherwise—have been aimed at the well-heeled Nixon campaign. And much of the ammunition has been provided by newspapers and magazines largely based on unidentified sources.

Final pre-election spending and contribution reports filed last week show that between Oct. 26 Nixon committees spent $36.05 million and McGovern committees $14 million.

The totals do not include the millions McGovern and others spent in favor of the Democratic party's presidential nomination over the reported $10 million to $20 million spent by the Nixon camp prior to April 7, when the new laws went into effect.

The new regulations were hailed as the most sweeping reforms in 50 years, but their effect is limited. Mainly they curtail political advertising through radio, television, newspapers, magazines and outdoor signs.

Presidential candidates now are limited to spending 10 cents for each potential voter in such advertising. Of that total, only six cents may be diverted to radio and TV advertising.

Hydro-Quebec Strike Begins

MONTREAL (CP) — Hydro-Quebec linemen, maintenance workers, office personnel and engineers went on strike early today to back up demands for a new three-year contract which would give them parity with Ontario Hydro employees.

As the first of 8,500 Hydro workers began striking at 7:30 a.m., 30 minutes before an 8 a.m. deadline given Friday by the Quebec Labor Relations Union of Public Employees (CUPE)—there was confusion over whether negotiations were held early today.

Paul Lamont, a Hydro spokesman, confirmed that the strike and conciliation were held in the early morning hours with union officials and Yves Dansereau, a government mediator.

Union officials said it was the first time that they had heard of talks and two union men denied the fact that negotiations had gone on.

Mr. Laurent said a meeting was held early today and "I expect a report on my desk shortly."

Negotiations, which have continued for 11 months, broke down Thursday night and were not resumed during the weekend. CUPE received a call Sunday afternoon from the department of labor saying 8:30 a.m. would be set later for a meeting.

The union sent telegrams Friday to Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer and Roland Giroux Hydro-Quebec president, advising them that the employees will strike today if no settlement is reached. Mr. Cournoyer has said his department will not intervene.

Cashing in on Research Difficult

OTTAWA (CP) — Delays in bringing a successful product to the market result less from a lack of research ability than from the inability of industry to cash in on a major research breakthrough, says a Science Council of Canada report.

"The return that is realized from a major breakthrough will depend very strongly upon how quickly and how skillfully it is developed, engineered and marketed," said Dr. Pierre Bourgault in a background study to the report, released today.

"For a number of reasons, the Canadian industrial environment is not ideal for carrying a project through these crucial early periods."

In many respects, the report blames government policies.

"Canadian industry, because of its structure, has been stripped of incentive and no amount of force-feeding of research will give the healthy, vigorous activity that is needed to build a technologically capable secondary manufacturing industry."

Dr. Bourgault, dean of applied science at Sherbrooke University, indicated the federal and provincial governments should be taking hard looks at several different taxes on tax support, their own readiness to buy foreign-made products and other purchasing policies, their protective trade tariff policies or lack of them.

"From an international viewpoint, the elimina tion of tariff and non-tariff barriers is certainly a good thing; but is Canada really big enough, or strong enough, to lead the world in free trade by its good example?"

The 134-page report attacks many assumptions that seem to lie behind present policies.

For example, Canada's small domestic market frequently is blamed for the poor record of development in secondary manufacturing.

However, Dr. Bourgault said that compared with many other countries, Canada's markets are at least modest and larger than many European countries that do have large secondary manufacturing industries.

Especially in the markets for articles from the science-based sectors, such as automobiles, television sets, radios, computers, scientific ins ruments and many both less. Canada ranks both, the report said.

It is only in relation to the United States that Canadian markets appear small, but "it is in this latter perspective that many Canadian businessmen see Canada."

Tokyo Hijack Fails

"What do we do if they die"

TOKYO (Reuter) — Police today captured a masked gunman who seized a Japanese airliner with bomb threats and demanded a $2 million ransom and a flight to Cuba.

The eight-hour drama ended when the gunman, who identified himself to police as Tatsuji Nakaoka, 47, of Los Angeles, was overpowered as he transferred to a second aircraft with three bound hostages for the planned flight to Cuba via Vancouver and Mexico.

He was carrying a passport in the Chinese name of Henry J. Wong of San Francisco, and police were checking whether it was false or stolen. A spokesman also said there was some doubt that the hijacker was Nakaoka.

The hijacker took over a Japan Airlines Boeing 727, with 121 passengers and six crew members, shortly after takeoff from Tokyo today for southern Japan.

When airline officials agreed to meet the hijackers demands, the aircraft returned to Tokyo, where it stood on the runway for several hours while fuel and boxes of money were loaded aboard a four-engine DC-8 for the trans-Pacific flight.

Police said the hijacker carried a loaded .38-calibre revolver and had 50 rounds of ammunition and an airline bag packed with explosives.

He also warned the pilot that a number of time bomb devices were planted around the plane, they said.

After the DC-8 was towed into position close to the 727, the hijacker allowed all the passengers to disembark, keeping only three crew members with their hands tied.

At dusk, the three hostages were escorted to the runway at gunpoint and boarded the DC-8, where five policemen were in ambush inside the door.

They leaped on the hijacker and knocked the gun from his hand. He had boarded the domestic flight at the last minute under the Japanese name of Kozo Ihtta.

He entered the cockpit wearing a mask. His poor Japanese convinced the pilot he was a foreigner and this led police at first to erroneously identify the hijacker as the only foreigner on the passenger list, a West German businessman.

Britain's Pay, Prices Are Frozen

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Heath announced today a sweeping 90-day freeze on wages, prices, rents and dividends in Britain, effective Tuesday.

The announcement, made in the packed House of Commons, said the freeze would run for 90 days from royal assent of the bill, with provision for extension of up to 60 days.

Heath said there will be a limited number of exceptions from the freeze, aimed at suppressing the inflation that has seen the pound sterling sink to its lowest-ever levels.

Heath's move followed a breakdown in negotiations with the unions and industries to attempt to fight inflation through a voluntary system of price and wage restraint.

The industries were ready to go along but the unions backed away, demanding a complete control over the rise in retail prices which Heath said he could not accept.

However, the prime minister said he was still prepared to continue discussions with management and unions on the objectives and problems of economic management, with the government seeking a high rate of economic growth, an improvement in real earnings, an improvement in the living standards of the low-paid and the preservation as well as moderation in cost and price inflation.

Two Germanys To Receive Recognition

BERLIN (Reuter) — East and West German negotiators today are expected to initialize a treaty which would recognize the existence of two German states and thus help East Germany out of 20 years of international isolation.

It will, once completed, also lay the basis for a number of improvements for the people in divided Germany, such as more personal freedom of movement, cooperation and exchanges in culture, sport and the economy.

Seek Way To Police Pact

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — One of the problems holding up a Vietnam peace agreement is the inability of the United States to get assurances of effective international supervision of a ceasefire, diplomatic sources said Saturday.

The United States—and presumably North Vietnam—have approached Canada, Indonesia, Poland and Hungary to serve on the international commission of control and supervision mentioned in the outline of their tentative accord disclosed Oct. 8.

The state department reported that it was encouraged by the preliminary responses from some of the four countries. But so far, the best the U.S. has been promised is a token international presence just before or at the start of the ceasefire.

Organization of the larger force of military observers envisaged would have to come out of the international conference which would guarantee the agreement and provide a broad umbrella for the four country supervisory body, the sources said.

In contrast to the small International Control Commission (Canada, India and Poland are the members) set up by the 1954 Geneva accords, the new supervisory body is envisaged as a force of several hundred observers. The larger number is required to police the scattered areas of Communist-held South Vietnamese government-controlled territory.

Canada said last week that it is ready to put its 19-man delegation to the existing ICC at the disposal of the new supervisory body for the interim between the ceasefire and the international conference.

But External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp made clear Thursday that any further Canadian role would depend upon what the conference decided concerning the membership, term of reference and operation of a UN-type supervisory body.

Peace Seen In Offing By Rogers

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Secretary William Rogers predicts that secret peace talks with the North Vietnamese will "resume soon, but...that a final agreement on a Vietnam ceasefire probably is "several weeks" away.

The North Vietnamese chief negotiator, Xuan Thuy, said, meanwhile, that the Communists would agree to another "final" meeting if conditions are right. "The question is seriousness" on the part of the United States, he added.

While indications mounted that negotiations would soon resume, Defence Secretary Melvin Laird acknowledged that the United States is speeding up deliveries of military equipment to South Vietnam.

Laird said this would "enhance negotiations."

Rogers received administration statements that the basic agreement has been reached. However, he said "one more series of "meetings" is needed to resolve "some ambiguities" and mentioned three.

He said they include a definition of the role of a joint council to administer the ceasefire and supervise elections; the timetable for positioning of an international force to supervise the ceasefire, and the question of North Vietnamese troops remaining in the South.

Grads Face New World

PICTON (Staff) — Graduation exercises mark the student's departure from an "insulated little world" where tragedies such as the slayings of Robert Kennedy and Martin Luther King touched only from a distance.

Janice Istead, 19, valedictorian for the 1972 graduating classes at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute Saturday night reminded fellow students there had been "nevereading mass confusion and we were safe, here at home." She said graduates now must leave the sheltered school atmosphere "to enter this confusion" and seek to change it.

She recalled the humorous, stimulating and happy experiences shared by classmates as they studied at PECI and noted "everyone seemed to be part of a kind of family who worked toward everything we did."

Miss Istead mentioned PECI as "an entity all by itself and a tiny microcosm for us for four or five years."

A unique mass unity prevailed among students and education because an enjoyable process as well as a necessary aim.

Teachers became friends instead of "the mighty, omnipotent beings at the front of the class."

The valedictorian observed that to classmates "tomorrow we will be novices again" and noted many new experiences will confront graduates leaving PECI.

Miss Istead, an Ontario scholar this year, was the recipient of several special awards at Saturday's graduation exercises, among them a chemistry award presented by the Lake Ontario Cement Company Ltd. She also won the school achievement award, a trophy and a cash prize of $40 for her contribution to the life of the school and her proficiency in her studies.

The valedictorian also was named "Salt of the Earth" and received this award for outstanding major responsibilities in extra - curricular affairs. Miss Istead has won this prize on several occasions during her studies at PECI. Her contributions to the school included a 2-year spent as editor of the yearbook.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Istead, RR 2, Bloomfield, Janice is continuing her studies at Queen's University, Kingston, where she is enrolled in a life science course introductory to medicine.

Fourteen Ontario Scholarships Won

PICTON (Staff) — Graduation exercises at Prince Edward Collegiate Saturday evening were highlighted by the presentation of awards to 14 Ontario scholars.

These students graduated with an average of 80 per cent or more in 5 credits and received cash prizes of $150.

Larry Hudgins, a guidance counsellor at PECI, presented the awards and observed it is the last time a cash prize will be included.

Students named to Ontario scholars this year were John Adams, Wendy Carman, Celcile Chaussee, Lorraine Carter, Carolyn Hawes, Janice Istead, Edith Truax, Phillip Waltam, Donald Broad, June White, Christopher George, Susan Kiss, Lois Cronk and Gordon Dunlop.

During graduation ceremonies 119 training certificates were presented to students completing a special two year course leading to employment.

Also, 235 secondary school graduation diplomas were awarded to students now at work or attending community colleges or in nurses' training.

Diplomas also were presented to 76 secondary school honor graduates now enrolled in university or in further training courses.

Shots Advised After Coon Bite

Anti-rabies shots have been advised for a 2½-year-old Stirling area boy after he was bitten by a raccoon Friday.

Dr. C. R. Lenk, Hastings and Prince Edward counties health officer made the advice.

As yet, rabies has not been confirmed in the animal, which was shot and sent to federal government laboratories for testing.

Dr. Lenk also emphasizes the need for extreme caution by residents faced by wild animals, now being forced closer to inhabited areas as winter sets in and natural food resources become scarce, said the health officer.

He said the raccoon appeared "extremely friendly" but bit the boy when he approached. Injections of anti-rabies serum were advised as a precaution until tests reveal if rabies is involved in the bite. If results are negative, there will be a halt to the youngster's treatment — an uncomfortable process which calls for daily needle shots for two weeks then two booster injections 10 days apart.

The spring-like weather now poses a possible new threat of rabies — once relieved in parts of Hastings and Prince Edward during the past year.

Wild animals run the risk of being attacked by domestic pets. If the animals are rabid, this could result in further spread of disease if their bite household dogs and cats, said Dr. Lenk.

People should also be cautious of approaching wild creatures animal which appears approachable. Such creatures normally flee human contact, he said.

Car Bashers Face Charges

Four juveniles who tried some parking lot joy-riding over the week-end have been charged with willful damage, city police said.

The youngsters, three of whom are under 16, broke into the rear end of Warren Whitley Haulage on Wilson Ave. Sunday, they admitted several vehicles and drove them about the lot, damaging them in the process.

A passer-by spotted them when they returned shortly and police soon tracked them down.

The extent of the damage is not yet known although a police report it is considerable.

Zegouras Seeks Seat on Council

George Zegouras today announced he will run for downtown in the upcoming municipal election, Dec. 4.

Mr. Zegouras, a resident of Belleville for the past 20 years, has made himself active in the community as a member of several organizations.

He holds memberships in The Sales and Ad Club, Chamber of Commerce, Board of the United Community Services and is director of the Rotary Club and the Industrial Commission.

"I have always been interested and active in city affairs and feel I would like to be more involved in its administration," said Mr. Zegouras.

Mr. Zegouras is currently working as chairman of the United Way campaign.

Mr. Zegouras, in his bid for a seat on council, points to planning and the official plan for the city as key interest areas for him.

"Belleville is a wonderful place to live and raise a family," said Mr. Zegouras. "I want to help it stay that way."

"Still I share the concern of many others in the city about the state of the official plan," he said. "It is taking too long to become fully approved and in the meantime high rise apartments are sprouting all over the place."

Mr. Zegouras, a merchant for 10 years, also has some opinions on what the downtown section should look like.

"If we are to attract new industry and more people to the city, the downtown area will have to be spruced up," he said.

CITY OF BELLEVILLE

PUBLIC MEETING

RECONSTRUCTION OF DUNDAS STREET EAST FROM FRONT STREET TO BLEEKER AVENUE.

His Worship Mayor Scott and members of City Council have arranged to hold a public meeting in connection with the above construction work, on THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 9TH, 1972, AT 7:30 P.M. at the Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 99 Hall, at 122 Pinnacle St., Belleville.

The work proposed is the reconstruction of the section of Dundas Street East extending from Front Street to Bleeker Avenue. The intention is to widen the driving surface to four lanes which will require the acquisition by the City of certain portions of certain properties abutting the street in order to increase the width of the right-of-way.

The City's consulting engineers on this project will be in attendance at the meeting to outline the work proposed by means of plans and other information so that each owner may become conversant with the work as a whole and what effect it may have on his or her property. An opportunity will be given to those present to ask questions and to make either a verbal or written submission.

Adam S. Stalker
City Clerk.

Leadership Conference At Dorset

MADOC (Special) — The Ontario Forest Technical School at Dorset was again the location of the third student leadership Dorset Conference where 60 students from Centre Hastings Secondary School gathered from Oct. 28th to 28th.

The purpose of this conference was to provide leadership training that would help some of these students become leaders and to improve the skills of those who are already leaders in their school.

It was organized by staff and students of CHSS in cooperation with a leadership team from the ministry of education. This team consisted of Wally Coulthard, Mrs. Helen Dunlop, and Noel Bennett-Alder. The three conducted a total of 17 hours of workshop sessions which allowed the students to become actively involved in various experiences related to human relations. The final aspect of the conference was the formulation, by the students themselves, of a series of "action plans" to be carried on back home.

Three observers also attended: Pat Fleck and Mrs. Fran Moscell, both from the ministry of education, Toronto, and Mrs. Wendy Warren from the faculty of education, Queen's University, Kingston. Mrs. Warren is research assistant to Dr. Gord King, who is conducting an educational study in a number of schools including which is Centre Hastings.

Future Is Up To Graduates

Centennial Secondary School's Graduation Exercises Saturday night, involved not only a series of prizes and presentations, but speeches from two valedictorians.

Spectators filled the theatre and graduates squeezed themselves into the wings of the stage to hear the brief address of valedictorians Eugene Pringle and Sandra Larochappelle.

Mr. Pringle, grade 13 valedictorian, said "the measure of worth for the school is how readily we adapt to the new environment we are now in.

"It would be easy to stay and do the whole thing over again," he said. "How we must look to the future. This is what must be."

In his address he struck out at comments during his last year dealing with the apathy of grade 13 students.

"The school gave its students a lot of things but the students returned many things in their stay here," said Mr. Pringle.

"There are a number of ways of suggesting the school without "flaunting it around," or "making a big to-do about it," he said.

In his closing statement, Mr. Pringle expressed his dismay at students working summer jobs who would be termed "incompatible with their level of education."

"It is not the fault of the school but it seems a shame to not use fully the very expensive investment in education."

Miss Lachappelle, valedictorian for grade 12, looked in retrospect over her years at the school, recalling the good and the bad and saying, "tonight is the completion of one phase of our lives.

"We have passed from childhood to adulthood, from dependency to responsibility," she said.

"People are no longer people to us but individuals, unique in their own way. We can see ourselves now making decisions, directing our lives and learning new things every minute," Miss Lachappelle concluded.

Stereo Stolen

BRIGHTON (Staff) — Musical thieves struck a private residence here over the weekend, successfully making off with approximately $1,200 worth of stereo equipment.

Brighton detachment OPP constable Hugh Cochrane, reports a window in the front door of the 3 Kingsley Avenue home of Clifford Barkley was smashed, thereby allowing thieves entry.

Young students at Thurlow township's Harmony public school joined forces with teachers and adults Saturday to help create rink area on school playground on donations they raised themselves. Tamping down fence post are: Doug Vedder, 11, Grant Norris, 11, Terry Cannon, 14, all of Foxboro, and Mike Hillier, 12, RR1, Corbyville.

Rink Based on Candy Sales

FOXBORO (Staff) — Come winter, the youngsters at Harmony public school east of here will skate on a rink made from chocolate bars and licorice — with community support for an added sweetener.

Saturday marked the realization of the project when they began fencing off a strip on Harmony's playground which will become an ice surface on freezup.

Students, teachers and men from the surrounding area served by Harmony joined together to finish the venture launched a month ago when the youngsters began raising funds for the project.

Vice-principal Murray Somerville credits two teachers at the school — just west of Highway 37 — for the original inspiration that will give the school a rink costing only about $600.

They conceived the idea of having Harmony students sell chocolate bars and licorice candies in their home neighborhoods to buy the necessary materials — plywood siding, fence posts, stakes marking off the 100-foot-long rink.

The community showed ready response, says Mr. Somerville, evidence of which was the quick sale of candy at above-store prices.

Within weeks, the drive had realized close to $600. Thurlow township recreation committee also gave the project men in the committee to lend a hand when construction day came Saturday.

The rink will be used during breaks by all of Harmony's 716 students who can skate.

After school hours and on weekends, says Mr. Somerville, it will be available for community use.

Centennial Graduation Organized by Students

Parents, family and friends spilled through doorways and into hallways surrounding the theatre of Centennial Secondary School Saturday evening while graduation and honor graduation certificates were being presented inside.

One of the unique graduations in the city, it is completely arranged by the student parliament and the full course dinner served afterwards is prepared by school home economics students.

A spokesman for the faculty said he and only two other teachers were involved in the production and even then in an advisory sense.

Peculiar to other graduation ceremonies, Centennial Secondary School spotlights not one but two valedictorians. One drawn from graduating grade 12 students the other from grade 13.

A highlight of the awards, scattered through the presentations of graduation certificates, was the presentation of Ontario Scholarships.

In all, 28 such awards were presented with the traditional $150 cheque.

The Belleville Business and Professional Women's Club award went to Lynn Laurin and the James Texta Ltd. Prize for art went to Lola Reid.

The Belleville and District Real Estate Board award was presented to Nancy Rose.

The Rotary Club award was given to Bob Henderson and the Kinsmen Award went to Christie Chase and Betty Fuller.

The Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 387 award was presented to David Kellar and Leonard Macaulay.

The Intelligencer award was presented to Pat Fry and Richard Williams.

The Quinte na Rebekah Lodge bursary was awarded to Bill Howe.

Hon. J. R. Cooke award was presented to Phillip Wall and Debera Tomalty was presented with The Canadian Federation of University Women award.

From the ministry of universities and colleges, the Ontario Secondary Schools Awards were presented to Sherrie Elliott, Cindy Cameron, Paula Vout, Jim Thompson, Susan Duff and Joyce Trotter.

The Queen's University Lawlor Memorial Scholarship was presented to Janet Spencer and the Belleville Flying Club Award was given to Norma Fuller.

The Belleville Women's Clubs and Ad Club award was presented to Ann Robertson.

The Trenton Memorial Hospital Award was presented to Lynn Laurin and the Northern Electric Award went to Peter Zalesak.

The Waterloo Lutheran University Proficiency Scholarship was awarded to Lianne Fish and Ruth Lee.

Putting A Project on Ice

Aid to Vietnam Via Belleville

Because a young Belleville couple wanted to adopt a child, youngsters victimized by the Vietnam war will find their plight eased in coming weeks.

Without fanfare, individuals, groups and even corporate business, have been responding to appeals of Bill and Jean McMaster to extend help to children in war-torn South Vietnam.

Clothing, toys, food, baby formula by the caseload, have been mounting up in the McMaster home at 123 South John St. Next month, it will be part of a big shipment flown out of Canadian Forces Base, Trenton. Its eventual destination will be a nursery near Saigon, caring for youngsters whose lives have been ravaged by the conflict.

"People have really risen to the situation — and we're quite thrilled about the response," said Mrs. McMaster as she helped her husband sort through bulkoads of donations Sunday.

The project was first conceived when the McMasters decided to adopt a Vietnam war orphan and had joined Families for Children — a Montreal group of adoptive families formed to help children in need of homes or adults hoping to adopt.

The number of Canadian children needing homes is on the decrease, and there's a growing interest in adoptions from overseas.

The McMasters — who have a 22-month-old son of their own — say while they are interested in also adopting a Canadian child, they've felt there's an immediate need to aid youngsters in areas of conflict like Vietnam.

Sweeten at the time there were difficulties about getting Vietnamese children into Ontario. So they opted for Korea — and are now completing visa details to secure adoption of a four - year - old Korean boy. (One reason for adopting him is that he's deaf — and the McMasters are both teachers in that field. Bill, 28, is on staff at the Ontario School for the Deaf).

Families for Children also supports the war nursery run by Rosemary Taylor, an Australian nurse, in South Vietnam, and the Belleville couple thus became involved in the project.

Back in Belleville, they began circulating requests among their friends.

"It's been snowballing in the past two months," says Bill McMaster. "We started with our friends, asking them to hang onto any used baby clothes they had."

The appeal spread by word of mouth. Not only individuals got involved.

Soon community and church groups in Belleville, Trenton, Carrying Place were inviting Jean to talk on the project.

They made tapes on their home cassette and shipped them to groups as far away Hope and Bradford — centres 120 distant; to canvass personally.

Clothes started arriving. The women of the senior citizens' Bridge St. East housing complex, did sewing repairs where needed. A church girl's group polished shoes and replaced laces.

Diffinition food chain sold them cases of food — at less than cost without saying so, says Jean.

Mead Johnson donated big quantities of baby food formula and vitamins.

Neighbors offered space in which to store the mounting stockpile.

Students at Nicholson Catholic College set aside a week in which they donated different items each day, then raised $50 with a dance.

Cash donations have totalled about $400, half of which the McMasters hope to spend on medical supplies — smallpox vaccine, injectable vitamins, if they can secure the necessary doctors' prescriptions in time, they say.

But time is running out. The McMasters have to ship the crates and boxes containing their appeal's response to Montreal by Saturday. There it will be packed in special airlift containers along with goods harvested by Families for Children. After that, it's transferred back to Trenton for overseas shipment.

"We've a lot more than we expected," says Bill, stacking more boxes in the hallway of his home. "People have really risen to the situation . . . and pitched in, once they heard the story."

UNICEF Gains $860 at PEC

PICTON (Staff) — Students at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute this year raised $860 in "pennies for their thoughts" in a UNICEF fund drive.

The fourth annual penny parade originally had a target collection of $800.

Classes competed among themselves in raising money for needy overseas youngsters. Class winners in the drive for UNICEF were members of grade 11D who collected $108. The money was rolled at the town hall after being carefully counted by students.

At School Here

When the celebrated actress-comedienne Beatrice Lillie went to St. Agnes College in Belleville in the years after it opened in 1903 she would go on the kind of group walks that befitted young ladies attending private school at that time.

And there was the day she was leader of her group and she took the girls into one of the downtown banks and out again for a quick look at an attractive young male teller she had her eye on.

Fascinating times indeed and Miss Lillie (Lady Peel from her marriage to Sir Robert Peel Bt.) describes them in some detail in her autobiography, Every Other Inch a Lady, which naturally is a work of particular interest to Bellevillians.

Fellow students, some of whom still reside in Belleville, and others across Canada, recall that Miss Lillie even then was much more interested in the stage and in singing and dancing than she was in school. Her mother lived in Cobourg and taught music. In her autobiography, the Toronto native dscribes how she nearly drowned off the jetty there while swimming with her sister.

Miss Lillie's father had emigrated from the Hillsborough area (seat of the Governor of Northern Ireland) — in the book she mentions a Lillie Corner near this town near Belfast — and it seems the name originally was Lille, of French Huguenot origin. This is interesting in view of the fact that Huguenots played a large part in the establishment of the linen industry in Ulster.

We are not aware of Miss Lillie having revisited Belleville in recent years and wonder if such a visit might not be considered, to coincide say with one of the community's more interesting events. It seems to us her sojourn at school here (the building is now an apartment house) and her link with Belleville should be marked in some manner. There should be a plaque for one thing, at the former school, but more than that her presence here, at some appropriate event, would do honor for the city and undoubtedly any such invitation would also be appreciated by Miss Lillie herself.

Soft Times

Oakville psychiatrist Dr. Peter Rowsell has some advice that is alarming. If not surprising. It is permissive times. He says maniupulation of the social system, including welfare and manpower schemes, is epidemic and potentially destructive.

"If youth is pampered with tax handouts," he says, "we're going to be a nation of manipulators."

As proof, Dr. Rowsell says he sees the destructive effects of seeking something for nothing . . . he sees it in "child-like resentment when it is refused."

Hard work and discipline are elements of our lifestyle with which many of the rising generation unfortunately are unacquainted. It is idle to pretend otherwise. Nobody is perfect but whenever we see a statement such as that made by Dr. Rowsell we are reminded that the "something for nothing" syndrome is fairly well ingrained in our modern society.

Word Play

Some languages have no English equivalent for a word, especially words and phrases that have crept into general usage in modern times. It is said that hot-dog stands and the like are just that in France and those concerned with the purity of the French language in its native breath are worried about the growing use of foreign terms, notably English (or American English) words and phrases. Note also that even the Russians use the term "hooligan" for rowdies.

There are instances too where bilingual countries, at pains to present everything from a needle to an anchor in both languages, occasionally get caught out, or are guilty of an oversight.

Before us is an example — the cover picture of a recent issue of South African Panorama, showing the interior of a workshop where electrical equipment is manufactured. On the flank of what looks like a turbine is a plaque bearing the legend, in English, "Power In The Service of Man." The Afrikaans equivalent is nowhere to be seen.

Defence Policy Also in Limbo

Ottawa Stalemate Could Jeopardize Viet Peace Force

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Canada has been suggested as a potential peacekeeper after the truce ending the Vietnam war has been signed with the despatch of a peacekeeping force as large as 5,000 men.

Although contingency plans do indeed exist in the Canadian Armed Forces for such an event, preferably for a commitment of not more than 1,000 men, the political situation in Canada as of Oct. 30 makes any Vietnam move most impossible.

Foreign policy, like every other kind of static business, either grinds to a halt or slows down until the country knows who the new government will finally be.

In Washington, officials around Nixon, who has his own election in a few days, suggest Canada might be by-passed in the search for a tri-partite peacekeeping operation, because of her uncertain political future.

In a way, this is very paradoxical, since peacekeeping has been the most consistent function of the Canadian Armed Forces, justifying both the use and continued purchase of much of the very expensive capital defence goods which any military establishment should have.

At the same time, one must question the ability of the department of national defence to move quickly 5,000 troops with their necessary back-up equipment and supplies to Southeast Asia.

The other day, an aging Argus anti-submarine reconnaissance aircraft put down at Singapore on its way to a joint Commonwealth anti-submarine exercise in Australia, because one of its four engines ceased functioning. And, you guessed it, the replacement engine had to be flown in from Canada.

Past Canadian peacekeeping movements had to be made with available warships, definitely not built for this function, for example the former aircraft carrier Magnificent, which took troops, transport and supplies to the Middle East in the 1950s.

The present shortage of the kind of military transport needed for this operation is not entirely the fault of the Canadian military. They have seen existing equipment and facilities slowly age and rundown, the anticipated result of a three-year budget freeze.

Air Transport Command, even if it closed most of its present busy global commitments and put aside as its small fleet of five Boeing 707s into a Vietnam airlift, does not have the aircraft to move 5,000 men in a swift and efficient operation.

The priority of peacekeeping was downgraded in Prime Minister Trudeau's policy objectives of early 1969. Criticism of the Trudeau government's defence policy played no part in the election campaign.

One wonders, though, if part of the reason for Tory victories in ridings heavily populated by servicemen was a result of a policy which placed national development and sovereignty above the traditional military roles.

It's possible too the protest vote against the Trudeau government included rejection of foreign and defence policies which, since 1968, have made new directions for Canada more hemispheric and less global.

If so, such voters obviously felt the image of Canada became more offbeat, while that of Canada's Prime Minister was allowed to predominate instead.

Conflict of Interest' Issue Still Alive in City

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

Mayor J. Russell Scott has finally decided after six months delay to answer charges of conflict of interest, brought against him by Alderman Donald Sutter. Declaring charges unfounded and untrue and demanding the resignation of Aldermen Donald Sutter and Robin Jeffrey.

Alderman Donald Sutter brought his charges of conflict of interest against Mayor Scott April 24 and his motion for a judicial enquiry July 17, 1972, at regular council meetings, with Mayor Scott and members of Council present — giving Mayor Scott the opportunity to defend himself against these charges, which he refused to do. Alderman Sutter took what seemed to be the honorable way, when the charges were against a member of Council, for then everyone could say what he thought and the citizens could see and hear what was taking place.

Mayor Scott took an entirely different approach, when demanding the resignation of Aldermen Sutter and Jeffrey. The Mayor made a public statement, by passing City Council and its members to give his version on the "conflict" charges. As Mayor Scott was one of the members of Council voting not to have a judicial inquiry, he must share the responsibility for the doubt and misgivings in the minds of many citizens today.

Why were the demands for Donald Sautter and Robin Jeffrey to resign not made at a regular council meeting, instead of a public statement when Donald Sautter was away from the city, and therefore was unable to reply to the demand for his resignation?

Alderman Robin Jeffrey was seconded Mr. Soutter's motion for a judicial inquiry, has had her stand vindicated in the light of recent events. Part of Mrs. Jeffrey's remarks when speaking to the motion were as reported in The Intelligencer on July 18, that both Mayor Scott and Mr. Soutter are entitled to a fair and impartial inquiry; without an inquiry an innocent man could be hurt and a man guilty of misconduct could be allowed to continue in office. Alderman Robin Jeffrey tried to be fair to all the people involved, and felt that the citizens of Belleville should know the truth. For this she is asked to resign as a member of council and "at seek higher office.

This seems unreasonable because Alderman Robin Jeffrey had the integrity to do her duty as she saw it.

The other members of city council have a grave responsibility to themselves and to the citizens of Belleville in view of what has transpired over these charges. It would be appropriate for the other members of city council to make a public statement in regard to their position on the demands of Mayor Scott against council members without being consulted.

We must have a judicial inquiry so that if Mayor J. R. Scott is innocent it will be proven beyond a shadow of a doubt. But if Donald Soutter's charges are substantiated the course he has chosen will be justified. As a people we are entitled to this information and it will remove the clouds of doubt and suspicion hanging over this city.

Vote That Was Lost

Letter in The Montreal Gazette

In a democracy the right to vote is the most cherished possession a citizen can have. This vote is his say in the running of his country. To be deprived of this vote makes him less than a second-class citizen. It makes him a nonentity in his own nation.

I was deprived of my vote. Because I was not enumerated I took the trouble to go to a federal election office and fill out voting registration papers. At the time I was assured that my name should be placed on the revised voting list. I did not trouble any further about it until last week when I had received no notice of where to vote I decided to follow through. I found that my registration form had been misplaced by a volunteer worker in the Liberal party and because of the time factor involved no name could no longer be placed on the voting list.

At no time in my transactions with them did the Liberal party assume any responsibility for the loss of my vote or apologize for the situation. In fact they even went so far as to term my actions "illegal" and myself as an "irresponsible citizen".

I have been disenfranchised for no good reason, yet no one in the governing party seemed to be worried about this enormous error on a citizen's rights. I am writing this letter in the hopes that this wrong will be brought to the attention of other Canadians and that in the future ample provisions will be made to rectify such deplorable irresponsibility.

Council Representation

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

With all due respect for our present council members, I would like to suggest that each alderman be responsible for a designated area of Belleville. New divisions, some five years old, have great problems and some aldermen are not aware of these difficulties or their exact location. This would provide a friendlier and more purposeful service to the public.

Many people in new homes intend to be permanent citizens here and want to contribute their best to maintaining our beautiful city.

More on the 'Three Rs'

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Orchids to Mr. Hockley! (re Three R's — Nov. 1)

We have been getting the run around for far too long in regard to our children and freedom in the classroom.

Indeed, as Mr. Hockley states it is time that the elders start telling the kids what to do, rather than the other way around. It is well past time for the children, especially those up to about age 12, to be told that they are going to do the work given in no uncertain terms or else! I'm so afraid we are raising our young ones to expect to be "spoon-fed". If at their age of maturity (if such time ever comes!) and they sudden ly realize that the world is dependant on them, will they raise their voices and say "Mom and Dad should have done such and such" or will they remember the educational system of their formative years and hopefully resolve to do better?

I like the open-concept to some extent, but do hope that less psychology and more firm control can be incorporated with it.

Rules Less Strict Than Before

MPs Got A Little (Partisan) Help from Their Secretaries

By FARMER TISSINGTON
From The Intelligencer's
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Taxpayers were footaware of it, but in a number of instances they were paying the salaries of people who were utilized in purely partisan fashion during the election campaign. There were instances in all parties where the secretaries of members of the last Parliament spent all or part of the campaign period in the riding of the former MPs, helping in the efforts to re-elect their bosses.

Each MP is allowed two secretaries or one secretary and one special assistant. While the members of the last Parliament ceased to be MPs once Parliament was dissolved for the election, they continued to be paid until election day and to have the use of their Parliament Hill offices and their office staff. The reason for this is that constituents should still have somebody to contact regarding problems they might have with federal departments and agencies. The secretarial help provided for them by the taxpayers is clearly designed to assist in this function, but in actual fact a number of secretaries and secretaries were employed in the ridings for purely campaign purposes, even though their salaries still were being provided by the public.

At one time the rules regarding such matters were strict, but they were considerably relaxed during the course of the last Parliament. A few years ago Parliament passed an Parliament Hill were required to sign in each morning and sign out each evening. Now they are on a much more disciplined honor system concerning the hours they spend on the job and it should be noted that there is no provision for overtime pay for night or weekend work.

It can be argued that it sometimes is hard to distinguish between the work of a secretary employed on the problems of constituents and her efforts when working in a political campaign But the present rather lax regulations do seem to give an unfair advantage to the MP when secretaries are busy with campaigning in the ridings.

There are all kinds of clever stunts thought up during election campaigns and some of them border on the mildly dishonest category. An example was the card left at doors by workers for one cabinet minister. If someone was at home when the canvasser called the voter was given a verbal pitch by the minister and some party literature was handed out.

But—if no one answered the doorbell then the campaign worker left a printed card, bearing the name of the minister and reading: "Sorry we were on one was at home when the minister had called. The fact is that in the riding of this city and Mr. Guy Bennett, Toronto. The party will host in the vicinity of Weslemkoon Lake.

Frolicfest A Sellout

The 400 people who attended the Frolicfest Saturday night drained the draft barrels before 11 p.m. supporting the Quinte Area Council of the Boys Sigma Phi.

The beer fest was arranged as a fund - raising project to be put towards renovation of library in Glanmore House.

The house has become the new home of Hastings County Museum.

Only twice during the evening did the capacity crowd stop their interpretations of the polka.

Once for a monster line-up for German Schnitzel and apple strudel, the second time for the drawing of two free air tickets to Frankfurt, Germany plus a free Volkswagen for a week and five bottles of German wine.

Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Foley were the winners of the air passes and car and Fred Nellis won the wine.

The bar turned to serving bottled beer, the music began again and the 400 danced the polka for the remainder of the evening.

Mailboxes Damaged

PICTON (Staff) — Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police today reported willful damage to several mail boxes in the Rednersville area.

At least five were knocked down this weekend by unidentified vandals.

Police investigation continues.

The Frolicfest was one in a series of projects to raise money to supply the Glanmore House library with carpeting, draperies and a paint job.

A spokesman for the women's fraternal organization said, the group was happy with the evening but it would be another three or four days before all bills and receipts would be tallied showing the evening's profit.

Ignore Pessimists Graduates Told

PICTON (Staff) — "Don't pay attention to the gloom mongers" was Prince Edward Collegiate Institute principal, Paul Burd's advice to this year's graduates.

Mr. Burd urged students to be optimistic and purposeful and told them to disregard persons who predict there will be no jobs for them and insist the world is in store for "something very grim." He suggested such pessimists "were around 50 years ago" and stressed the positive to graduates.

James Plomer, chairman of the Prince Edward County board of education termed today's society a permissive one and said this is evidenced in the schools, in law courts and in the homes. He referred to a "frightening decline" in social values but noted there has been a marked drop in "false creeds and hypocrisy."

He said society has changed so rapidly it has become confused and there has been a continuing series of generation gaps only a few years apart.

Mr. Plomer observed it is regrettable the county lacks the resources to keep its graduates here.

In their years in school efforts have been made to encourage them to develop a personal sense of responsibility and initiative.

The department of education now feels an assessment time has come for the school system. Money is now "a heavy constraint" in education.

Mr. Plomer said it has been stated that today students are being overeducated and many persons with PhDs are unemployed.

He called this unemployment "tragic" but noted in Prince Edward County education revolves around students from kindergarten to grade 13 and in this range no over-education exists.

"The future of our democracy depends on thoughtful, literate citizens with the courage of their convictions," stated Mr. Plomer.

He suggested as the old disciplines have faded, perhaps self - discipline has grown.

Local Members Anticipate 'Interesting, Edgy Session'

Canada's new parliament should convene the first week in December.

But when the next election is called is anyone's guess.

That's the consensus of the three Progressive Conservative members of parliament representing Quinte riding.

"There's nothing more uncertain than the length of this next session," says George Hees, MP Prince Edward - Hastings, back in his constituency last weekend after being called to Ottawa following the Oct. 30 election stalemate. "It could go on for a while — and it could snap any moment."

Douglas Alkenbrack, the veteran MP retaining Frontenac-Lennox and Addington and newcomer Jack Ellis who won Hastings, were equally unwilling to predict when an election might be precipitated.

All three however agreed on two points:

— Prime Minister Trudeau will convene parliament early in December to dispense with initial formalities before the Christmas recess.

— The minority Liberal government will modify its economic policies to assure continued New Democratic Party balance-of-power support, probably producing tax cuts.

Daily tension will be a mark of the new parliament, Mr. Hees indicated.

"Now every vote could turn the government out. It's going to be a very edgy, interesting session ..." said Mr. Alkenbrack.

NDP support is the key to the government's survival.

"If the NDP is going to be its crutch, it will be there just as long as the crutch holds them up," said Mr. Alkenbrack.

But the next election will see a Conservative majority.

Mr. Ellis believed the country wasn't ready for another election immediately.

"The question in my mind is whether or not there has to be another election just because the Liberals are defeated in the House," he pondered.

"Selfishly, as a Conservative, I'd like to see the Liberals defeated and (Conservative leader) Robert Stanfield given an opportunity to present his program before an election.

"If the Liberals can't hold the House together without an election, the Conservatives should be given an opportunity to present their legislative program ... Constitutionally it can be done. The question is if it will be."

Should an election be deferred until summer, Mr. Ellis hoped it would come either before or after school exams, to assure campaign involvement of young voters.

"Young people are the big new factor. Injecting new life into our politics," he said.

Mr. Alkenbrack believed the government would likely have to introduce tax cuts, change a lot of his policies. If he'd listened to the opposition before he probably wouldn't be in the dilemma he is in now," said Mr. Alkenbrack.

Keeping the beer running was the name of the game for Beta Sigma Phi convener Joan Young who pumped beer way through part of the evening at the Frolicfest Saturday. Conceptual Plan Near OK

Officials of the ministry of treasury, economics and intergovernmental affairs have given informal approval to the terms for the Quinte conceptual plan being drafted by Quinte Planning Board.

This basic concurrence of provincial authorities comes only a month after the ministry stated it wants to see a conceptual plan for the region before considering official plans for the QPB municipalities.

Deputy planning director Frank Stokmans said today he believes the province will be prepared to accept a draft of the conceptual plan and not make Belleville wait for final approval of the concept as a pre - condition to dealing with the city's official plan.

Not requiring the full approval first will give new hope to Belleville, who had feared the stipulation of the ministry may delay the city's plan, originally slated for completion in March, for as much as a year.

"Needless to say, we are pleased that officials are happy with the tack we are taking," stated Stokmans.

Feet Burned In Crib Fire

TRENTON (Staff) — Mrs. Jean O'Rourke, of 60 Gould Street, suffered burns to the soles of her feet Saturday morning when she attempted to extinguish a fire in her unoccupied baby's crib.

Trenton fire department responded to the 7.30 a.m. call and found the mattress still smouldering.

Mrs. O'Rourke had managed to extinguish flames in the bedding of the crib.

A damage estimate was not available, but fire department spokesmen said as well as smoke and water damage in the home, a door at the entrance to the bedroom plus paint in the room and halls would have to be replaced.

While consultants Totten, Sims and Hubicki have been slow in preparing their draft of the Belleville official plan, progress made by QPB staff on the conceptual plan has presented a brighter picture for local planning.

The format now established for the conceptual plan will bring a definition of growth centres for the region, set policies for rural residential development and recreational needs throughout the Quinte area.

Supplementing the concept will be district official plans for the growth areas. In the case of Belleville and Trenton, these would include the municipalities themselves plus the surrounding portions of the townships where growth will take place in the next 20 years.

Until the province has a general plan for the region like this, official planning will be stalled and the Ontario Municipal Board will not approve developments, particularly those of large scale.

165 to Lose Jobs In Trenton Mill

Cosmos Imperial Mills, one of Trenton's oldest and largest industries, was ordered closed Friday afternoon by company president E. D. James.

Mr. James, in a speech to the 165 employees of the cotton spinning plant, said, "In view of the present economic problems facing the company, there is no alternative".

Clifford Baker, manager of the plant and employee of the company for 42 years, said "We (the company), cannot compete with the federal government."

Mr. Baker claimed huge staff turnovers in the past year made it impossible for the company to survive.

"We have been working at a financial loss for the past year because of the staff coming and going," he said.

Mr. Baker was reluctant to put a figure on the degree of staff turnover but admitted it was more than double the total staff of the plant, and "slightly less than triple".

In a telephone interview, Mr. Baker said, "We counter members that have come onto the labour market as a result of drawing unemployment insurance benefits than working".

The company provides cotton yarn to several domestic underwear firms.

Salaries in the Trenton plant began at $1.75, 10 cents better than the minimum wage of $1.65, and this salary could increase to a maximum of $2.85 an hour.

Incentive pay was also available for individual production.

In his address to the employees, Mr. James outlined the company will continue for another eight weeks only, the mandatory legal notice to be given employees in such a case.

"During that time we will be just marking time," said Mr. Baker.

Not all the staff will be kept on that long, he said.

The shut-down process be-

Mr. Baker said the company's plants in Yarmouth, N.S., and Marysville, N.B., would not be affected, but Trenton employees will not be gins Monday morning.

offered similar positions in the company's other plants because of "far distant locations".

Mr. Baker said approximately 100 employees belonged to a quarter-century club, denoting their length of employment with the mill.

For these people it is very hard, said Mr. Baker, who spoke highly of them as hard-working, dedicated people.

He said his company will work with the Canada Manpower Centre to find them new positions.

Aubrey Barre, local president of the United Textile Workers of America, was reluctant to comment this morning on the status of negotiations in the closing of the plant.

He did say, "we have a plan in mind to keep the plant open and have everything to gain and nothing to lose in our efforts."

Asked for another comment, he said, "other than that, I will give you nothing."

The plant officially closes Jan. 29, after being a member of the Trenton industrial community since 1925.

Man Charged After Fires

PICTON (Staff) — A Bloomfield area man this weekend was charged in connection with a fire that destroyed a vacant home in Bloomfield village owned by a Toronto man.

A 19 - year - old was charged after the empty house belonging to Bernard Shannon of West Hill, Toronto, burned to the ground last Saturday morning.

A spokesman for the Picton detachment of the Ontario provincial police said a second charge has been laid against the youth in connection with a barn fire in Bloomfield on September 11, 1971.

The barn which was razed to the ground also was owned by Bernard Shannon, a former Prince Edward County resident.

Saturday morning's fire broke out shortly after 9:30 a.m. and the alarm was answered by the Bloomfield-Hallowell fire department.

Busy Day For Shoppers

Bazaar Held at Mall

The annual Quinte Mall Bazaar which included booths from 20 participating women's groups in the Belleville area was held Friday and Saturday. Merchants supplied the tables and all proceeds from the sales went back to the groups. A variety of home-made and home-baked goods was packed on the booths as quickly as they were purchased by the crowd of early Christmas shoppers. On hand were home-made jellies, donuts, paper flowers, gold fish, Christmas decorations, pastries, baby's clothing, quilts and gold fish.

Archeology Will Be Topic For Church's Open House

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is holding an open house Tuesday, Nov. 7, which will be not only of a religious, but also an archeological nature. The informal meeting will be held at the LDS chapel at 135 Palmer Road beginning at 7 p.m.

The purpose of this open house will be to bring to mind and show archeological evidences of the vast civilizations that once inhabited the South and Central American continents.

The open house will consist of a slide presentation and a brief display which will last approximately an hour. The slide presentation itself was made about 10 years ago by Jack West from Southern California, who, after having visited South and Central America had quite a collection of pictures of ancient remains which rather by accident fit together to tell a remarkable story of the early people to that side of the world.

Since then, much more study has taken place of the culture and enormous populations that once flourished here.

The ancient people on this continent mean a lot to the Latter Day Saints today because the Mormons have been keenly aware of so much that happened on the Western Hemisphere through the Book of Mormon, which, itself, deals with events, conditions, and prophecies which took place here at the same time the Bible was being written in the Old world.

Questions will be answered during themeeting, or privately and free refreshments will be served afterwards.

There is no charge for admission.

Women's Institutes

TWEED - CHAPMAN WI

TWEED — The October meeting of the Tweed-Chapman Women's Institute was held at the home of Sandra Lambert.

The president, Mrs. Mabel Foster, opened the meeting welcoming members and guests and then read a poem.

The secretary, Mrs. Ruth Jardine, read a letter concerning a senior training school on "Ontario Fruit". Mrs. Sandra Lambert and Mrs. Elsie Elliott will attend the school.

Mrs. Lois Elliott gave an account of the district executive meeting.

A committee was named to cater to a wedding anniversary. Mrs. Helen Hunt will convene the committee.

Mrs. Lambert, program convenor, showed the group pictures of trips she'd taken to England and Alaska. Included in the pictures taken were illustrations of York, the Tower of London, the famous Olde Inne, Hampton Court, Palace and Caernarvon Castle in Wales. Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln Elliott travelled by boat from Vancouver, B.C. to Skagway, Alaska. Mrs. Elliott also showed pictures of the glaciers, the totem poles, the Trail of '98 and the entertaining program presented nightly by the people.

Lunch was served.

Engagement Notice

The engagement is announced of Nancy Ellen Elaine Fiirks, second eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Parks, RR2, Frankford, to Mr. Grant Ferris Crowe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ferris Crowe RR3, Frankford. The wedding will take place on December 2 1972 at 1 p.m. in Westminster United Church, RR3, Belleville.

L.O.L. Banquet Held

TWEED — Central Hastings County LOL recently held their annual banquet and dance in the Kiwanis Centre, in Madoc. Approximately 275 people at ended.

County Master Brother Gavin Adams was master - of - ceremonies and the invocation was given by the County Chaplain Brother Joseph Ash.

The guest speaker R. W. Brother Leroy Heaney was introduced by R. W. Brother Fred Bateman. In a brief but interesting address, Bro her Heavey, who has lived most of his life in Ontawa, told of his contacts with many of the prominent politicians dating back to the days, when as a boy, he had delivered newspapers to the home of Sir Wilfred Laurier.

Brother Delbert Mumby replied to the guest speaker and presented Brother Heaney with a gift. Appreciation was given to women of the LOBA for their contribution to a successful evening by Brother Lorne Hagerman.

50th Anniversary Feted

MARMORA — Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mumby of Burnhall St., Marmora, were "At Home" to friends, neighbors and relatives recently to mark their 50th wedding anniversary.

Eight inches of snow on the eve of their wedding is one of the memories Mr. and Mrs. Mumby have of their wedding which took place in Havelock Anglican Church on Oct. 19, 1922. Following the ceremony the young couple boarded a train for Niagara Falls and Queenston where Mr. Mumby was working on a hydro project. After five years there, they returned to Marmora and have lived in the same little home ever since.

Mr. Mumby keeps busy in his garden and looking after "the girls" in his neighborhood — "the girls" being a number of widows and unmarried ladies who live alone. Mr. Mumby does odd jobs for them such as putting on storm windows, fixing things, cutting brush and many other odd jobs that women find difficult. Both Mr. and Mrs. Mumby also looked after St. Paul's Church in Marmora for four years and kept it spotless.

Following his employment with Ontario Hydro, Mr. Mumby joined the Deloro Smelting and Refining Co. and stayed with them until the company moved to Belleville.

Mrs. Mumby recalls that she first met her future husband during wartime at a dance for a friend who was leaving soon for overseas. It was not until four years later that Fred Mumby and Miss Mary Fletcher travelled to Havelock for their wedding, accompanied by friend Harold Nayler who was to be their witness.

Their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Gus Leonard (Lila) and four grandchildren of Peterborough were present for the occasion.

A three - tier anniversary cake made by their daughter and flanked by gold candles and pretty arrangements of gold and bronze mums, graced the tea table which was covered with a lace cloth.

Guests were served by Mrs. Pat Bertrand, Mrs. Stan Reynolds, of Marmora, Mrs. Bernice Anderson of Belleville. Mrs. Alan Mason of Peterborough and Misses Mary Jo and Linda Lee Leonard, granddaughters of Mr. and Mrs. Mumby. Greg Leonard looked after the guest book.

Two of Mrs. Mumby's sisters, Mrs. Roy Blakely (Alice) of Marmora Township and Mrs. Harold Armstrong (Nellie) of Belleville, and one brother, Joseph Fletcher of Marmora Township were present for the happy occasion. Another sister, Mrs. Alex Johnson (Mabel) of Consecon was unable to be present.

Nathan Mumby of Marmora and Gerald Ficketts of the U.S. also attended their brother's anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Mumby received many lovely gifts, numerous cards and a great many good wishes from their friends.

Women's Institutes

PINE GROVE WI

The October meeting of the Pine Grove Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Roswell Reid. The president, Mrs. Harold Decker, opened the meeting. Delegates to the Training School on Fruits will be leaders Mrs. William Slavin and Mrs. Ivan Clare. Mrs. Harold Decker welcomed back Mrs. Bartindale, a former member.

Mrs. Don Irish introduced the guest speaker Jack Rushnell, Deputy Fire Chief of the 2nd Council Sydney Township. Mr. Rushnell gave a list of the firemen and informed the group of an available fire extinguisher in the community. When there is a fire, one should call both the Base office and the Sydney office. The location should be clearly stated.

Mrs. Irish thanked the guest speaker.

Following the meeting, a lunch was served by the hostess and Mrs. Slavin.

WOMEN'S MISSION CIRCLE MADOC — The October meeting of the Women's Mission Circle was held at the home of Mrs. Kay Beaudrow on October 31st. Mrs. Wesbrick presided and opened the meeting with a hymn. Leading in prayer, Mrs. Wesbrick mentioned the French work in Quebec.

Mrs. Demille, group leader conducted the program. The topic of the program pertained to Satan. Reference was made to Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden and also the Promised Land of Canaan. Mrs. Forbes read a poem after which Mrs. Wood and Mrs. Demille sang two solos. Mrs. Galer read a chapter from the Study Book. Mrs. Rawa led in prayer for the missionaries.

Ann Landers

More Attention Desired by this Neglected Wife

Dear Ann Landers: You've already printed several letters from women about that terrible husband is not the way mother wanted who kept score and tallied the it.—Billings, Mont. Daughter excuses his wife gave him for not responding to his advances.

I hope you will print one more.

Perhaps if that clown weren't so busy with his bookkeeping he might have time to open a car door for his wife, or help her bathe the kids at bedtime, or phone her to say he'll be a half an hour late for supper, or stop to buy a single flower for no particular reason—or take a shower before getting romantic.

My husband is a "scorekeeper" too, and he had the nerve to clip that column. When he handed it to me he said, "Here, read this and tell me if you recognize anybody you know." In all the years we've been married he never once clipped a beautiful poem, but that stinkin' column he found.

What I'm saying is that husbands would have better scores if they'd exert a little energy to make their wives feel special. Ain't that the technique they use to get other women in bed? — Nebraska

Dear Daughter: Thank you for the excellent bit of counsel. That brother of yours sounds like a living doll. Time wounds all heels, and he'll get his—eventually.

Dear Ann Landers: Mom and Dad have been divorced for nine years. There is no chance they will ever get back together again. My question is this: I have a small photograph of them together that I just love. I would like to have it enlarged and hang it in our living room. Should I or shouldn't I?

My parents speak when they see each other but that's about all. This picture means a lot to me because it brings back memories of the days when we had a happy home. Mom has remarried but Dad has not. He comes over more than Mom. I don't think it would make any difference to him. What do you say, Ann?—Hung Up in Canton.

Dear Canton: If you want to have the photograph enlarged and keep it in your bedroom, go ahead. But I wouldn't post it in the living room. It might be embarrassing for your mother and her present husband—and possibly a little unsettling for your dad.

Dear O: Here's one you can clip and hand to him. If he has an answer I'll print it.

Dear Ann Landers: I just read the letter from the woman who said she and her second husband had a tough time trying to divide their possessions in case of death so there would be no misunderstanding or hard feelings among their children, and how they went to a lawyer and put it in their wills.

It sounds neat and simple, but please, Ann, tell your readers that if they want to make sure nothing goes wrong, to obtain a doctor's notarized statement declaring that the two parties are of sound mind at the time of the request.

My own dear mother had little notes all over the place—instructions on what she wanted done with certain pieces of furniture and paintings which were precious heirlooms. But the notes didn't mean a thing. Two years ago she became ill and was transferred from the home for the aged to a hospital. Mother is not home but she does get confused. One of her children who had power of attorney decided to declare her incompetent and sell the family home and all her possessions. I believe me, Ann, I can afford to

by JOHN CONWELL

Do wifely annoyances threaten love?

"NO. Hair curlers at night, dripping, laundered lingerie, spilled bath powder, etc., are part of the marriage game. (A husband's annoyances are also found around the happiest homes.) Every one of these things and countless others are indications that a woman feels confident in her own home. Although these annoyances can be really annoying at times, they won't create resentment unless they are a coverup for some other disoriented note in the marriage.

Must someone be born with patience?

NOT necessarily; someone who has been brought up in an atmosphere free of anxiety and conflict is a pretty good bet to be more patient than an individual who had to "scramble" for love and affection all his life. Once mature, however, a person can learn to be more patient with others. The secret is relatively simple: All he has to do is teach himself to enjoy people. Then he can perhaps even match the patience of Job.

Is it selfishness to spoil a child?

YES; but that might be the least damaging deficiency of the one who spoils a child. Ignorance of the effect on the youngster's personality and outlook can be even worse. A grandmother, for instance, who is asked by the child why she let him misbehave can be startled by the youngster's reaction. If she says she permits him to act up because she loves him, the child may then logically come back with: "Does that mean my mommy and daddy don't love me?"

Senior Citizen Suggests 'Don't Waste Your Life

By DORIS CLARK

Recently, when accepting the keys to a flat of Grimsby Senior Citizens, and officially unlocking the door of the Centre for Senior Citizens in Grimsby, Ontario, Mrs. Ada Bromley read the following prayer of thanks for a new day:

"Dear God, we thank Thee for this day. Grant that we — Still none of its blessings. Waste none of its moments. Neglect none of its opportunities."

Those at the ceremony couldn't help but feel that Mrs. Bromley is an example of the indomitable Canadian Senior Citizen who wastes none of life's precious moments. A widow who had had her generous share of hardships and burdens, Mrs. Bromley is an active, interested citizen who plays a worthwhile part in her community.

She truly believes that the Golden Years are the most precious of all. — Dorothy Turcotte.

Dear Doris: Thank you for the leaflets. I am sorry I forgot to enclose the money and am sending it now.

I so often forget things. Now I wish we could get a memory pill! If someone could only invent one, what a God-send it would be to some of us. We might get things done then; and not only that but we could learn better in our late years.

The rest of the money can be a contribution for anyone else not having the necessary dimes. Many thanks for all the help you give and for being so kind. We should have many more people like you. — Forgetful.

Dear Forgetful: They tell us memory does tend to deteriorate with age, much faster than general intelligence and alertness. But they also tell us that we can slow down this deterioration by really working at remembering things.

One of the ways is to try associating one thing with another; and another is to never fail to make a note of the things we plan to do. There are good books on memory training and I can send you some titles if you'd like them.

Dear Doris: As you suggested, I went to see a counsellor but he said there wasn't much he could do without my husband coming with me, but my husband said there was no use trying to save our marriage.

Could you tell me if there is such a thing as a fortune teller in my city? None are listed in the telephone directory. Some years ago there were several. — Hoping Against Hope.

Dear Hoping: Some counsellors do insist on seeing both parties — but I have found that even one partner can be helped through a discussion. Even if only is unload and to get something like a philosophy to meet life as it is.

Fortune tellers I do not keep track of; and neither should you. It is human enough to want to know what happens next, but it is peace of mind we all really aspire for, isn't it?

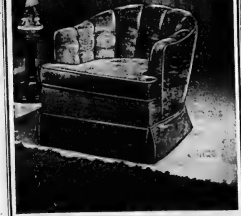
In your case, this may mean pulling yourself up by your own bootstraps, finding some self-expression in a new activity, or exploring what your religion can really mean to you.

COLLECTION OF LEAVES AND RUBBISH

Leaves and rubbish will be collected from all streets in the City commencing Monday, November 6th. Householders having leaves and rubbish for pick-up are requested to place same in piles at the edge of the travelled portion of the street before 8:00 a.m. of the above noted date.

Work crews will be working on both sides of the River at the same time, commencing at the centre of the City and working outwards.

Enquiries relevant to this program should be directed to Telephone No. 968-6481 — extension 48.



Please do not place leaves and rubbish out after your street has been cleaned.

Israeli Newsman Meets Arab Envoy

Yaaqov Rothblit, a young Israeli seriously wounded in the 1967 Middle East war, is visiting the United States as a correspondent for the Israeli newspaper Haaretz. He filed the following story in his newspaper.

By YAAQOV ROTHBLITT

JERUSALEM (AP) It was another dull, routine meeting of the United Nations committee on racism, human rights and so forth. The Dutch delegate was grinding out his speech when our man at the United Nations and our correspondent — that is, I — marched in and sat down.

The bored Costa Rican delegate cleaned his fingernails. Others were writing letters home. Within five minutes I was yawning.

And then she came in.

She was young and good-looking, wearing a red dress that exposed nice knees and long legs. She made her way to her desk and sat down near our correspondent, pulled out some papers and spread them out. . . . I watched with great interest. The little name-plaque on her desk said: "The Arab Republic of. . . ."

I tapped her shoulder. She turned and smiled.

"I'd like to talk to you," I said without getting into details. "How about a cup of coffee in the cafeteria?"

She looked at me hesitantly and replied in the tone of a girl who has to finish homework before going out to play: "I'd like to, but now its my turn to speak. In 15 minutes, okay?"

The Dutch delegate finished his speech and my little girl in red took the floor. She sipped a little water and began in a shy, excited voice: "Mr. Chairman, my government . . . bla bla bla."

She got around to Israel very fast . . . and boy, did she let us have it. She compared us Israelis with every villain in history.

She finished . . . met my glance, and we stepped outside.

"What did you want to talk about?" she asked.

"It's very simple." I said. "I'm an Israeli and I'd like very much to talk to you."

"Israeli?" she asked, disbelievingly. But she accepted my invitation to coffee.

On the way to the cafeteria she apologized for her speech. She assured me she didn't mean all those terrible things, but that's how it is . . . politics.

We sat for an hour—one of the most encouraging, enchanting hours I can remember. . . . We talked mostly politics, and, without anyone having to surrender, degrade their honor or relinquish their principles.

We could have signed a secure and durable peace on the napkin, if only it were up to us. . . .

Jumper Survives Two-chute Failure

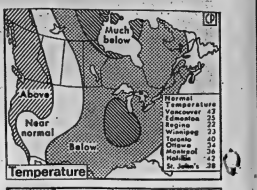
PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Rob Hall knew he would be dead in a matter of seconds. Screaming and kicking, he was falling from an airplane at more than 100 feet a second, his main and reserve parachuting out in tangled ribbons above him.

The 19-year-old student skydiver slammed into the runway at 60, possibly 80, miles an hour, authorities said.

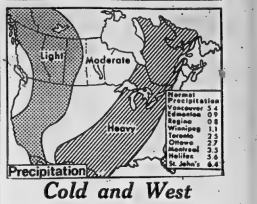
But a few seconds later, he rose to a crouch. His nose was pulverized against both cheeks and his front teeth poked through his lips. He suffered no other injuries.

"I don't remember pulling the dummy (main chute) ripcord carried for training or the reserve chute," he said later. "I do remember looking up and seeing the chute was garbage—that's what we call a bad chute.

"I went for the reserve, but it was gone. It wasn't there.



"I screamed. I knew I was dead and that my life was ended right then. There was nothing I could do. It was all over.



"Then I must have hit. Although I just can't remember hitting the runway, or any pain. I can remember getting up. I can't remember feeling blood, seeing the ground or where the parachutes fell."

That was three years ago.

Surgeons say his teeth have been replanted and will be saved. A plastic surgeon is rebuilding his nose.

Hall says he will jump again.

Quinte Srs. Second In OFSAA Cross Country

Quinte Secondary placed second over-all in Ontario Federation of School Athletic Association's cross country meet in Woodbridge Saturday, improving their showing for the fourth consecutive year.

The Saints scored a respectable 130 points, 35 behind front runner Monarch Park of Toronto with 104.

Gerard Farrell of Quinte placed eighth in the 4.7 mile race over wet varying terrain in a time of 27 minutes, three minutes behind front runner Don Howson of Winston Churchill Secondary in St. Catharines. Centennial's Jim Thompson, the only other Belleville runner in the competition, placed 15th in the individual standings.

In the field of 175, other Quinte senior runners Roger Ray, Ian Hayman, Justin Farrell, and Ivan Robinson placed 23rd, 31st, 37th, and 87th respectively.

Quinte's cross country team over the past four years has year by year improved its standings in OFSAA competition.

The senior Saints who have won four Bay of Quinte championships and four COSSA championships, placed 13th in OFSAA competition four years ago. A year later an eighth was captured, while last year the senior cross country team came in fifth in the over-all.

Mike Hall, coach of the Quinte cross country team, attributed the school's cross country success over the past four years to the determination of the team members Roger Ray and Gerard Farrell. The team revolves around Farrell who coach Mike Hall says, is the leader of the team.

"If I'm late for training, he's got them running," said coach Hall. With Farrell and other seniors graduating this year, however, the coach "will have to build with the juniors" to create a new champions hip team.

No Cross Country Running Room

Cross country competitors find running room a scarce commodity as they break from the starting line in the junior section of the Ontario Federation of Secondary Schools Athletic Association meet held in Woodbridge Saturday. Quinte Secondary School of Belleville came up with the best local showing ever as their seniors placed second in the team standings behind Toronto's Monarch Park.

Kinsmen Salvage Tie with Trenton

Belleville Kinsmen Club's OMHA bantams managed to tie Trenton 4-4 Sunday night on a goal scored by Waterson at 17:49 of the third period. Andy Lupenette and Bob Thompson with two tallies accounting for the other three goals. Trenton tallies came from Manley with two Martin and Wilson.

In Bantam "D" action, Wellington defeated Newcastle 4-2 with tallies coming from Terry Green and Mike Dainard and Trevor Cleave. With strong goal sending from Wellington's goalie Don Maycock, Newcastle's Grodon Blake and Brian Hoogkamp managed only two apiece.

In minor Pee Wee action, Dixie Lee bankered Gananoque 8-0. Bob Hedge and Don Cook shared the shutout honors for Dixie Lee, while Mike Crawford beat Gananoque man, J. Henry, Lee McBrien, and Bill Rowe tallied Dixie Lee's other goals.

Belleville Rollins Pee Wee all-stars played two games over the weekend, defeating Napanee 4-1 and Kingston Church Athletic 6-2. Napanee fell at the hands of Bruce Bell, Andy Planec, Danny Duffy and Tim Conlos, while Napanee's lone tally came from Gregg Mills. Rollins' David Harris and Stephen Pearce, with two goals apiece, Danny Duffy and Danny Jaques scored against Kingston Saturday night at Memorial Arena. Both Kingston goals came from Mike Rennigan.

Belleville Towers Food City novice majors fell to a narrow defeat Saturday, with Napanee besting Belleville 3-2. Belleville goals came from Danny Hounslow and Tony Parks.

In Sunday's match, Towers Food City played to a 2-2 tie with Trenton Rotary. Belleville goals were scored by Danny Hounslow and Greg Horwood.

In a midget game Sunday Blake Kerr Imperials edged Centre 70 3-2 with captain Eric Powell leading the way with a goal and an assist. Rick Crowden and John Murphy had the other Belleville goals.

"Keep your seats, folks, we'll watch the flatter. Very manager for making this match in the first place !"

No Complaints About These Hairstyles

There are at least two hockey teams in Belleville where the coach is certain not to complain about long hair styles — the junior and senior YMHA hockey squads.

The girls teams have been practicing at Dick Ellis Rink for the past month in preparation for opening action year the end of November. The Mel Barriage seniors will be competing in a regular, four-team league while the juniors who are sponsored by the Belleville Recreation Department, will play a series of exhibition matches this winter.

Each team has a roster of 20 players and each have held a total of four practices in preparation for the regular season. Bob Dafoe and Bernie Coughlan have been working as directors of the program and both hope that the sport will reach the popularity currently held by the girls' softball leagues in the summer months. Dafoe, Jamie Hunter and Joe Scanlon are helping with the coaching aspects.

The seniors will play a 12 game schedule against opponents from Kingston, Picton, and defending champion Stirling. Home games for Belleville will be played at Dick Ellis Rink Sunday nights at 5.15 p.m.

Eight players will be returning from last year's club, including Valerie Brown, Judy Sager, Debbie Whalen, Sue Fobert, Donna Preston, Marg Scanlon, Sue Morton and Carpall Merrill.

Coach Dafoe feels that this season's Mel Barriage entry "will be really improved" over last year's showing when Belleville finished in the basement of the four-team league.

The training the Loyalist women's volleyball team has gone through the past two months paid off as Loyalist whipped Algonquin and Durham Colleges in Ontario Collegiate Athletic Association play Saturday in Oshawa.

The Loyalist girls defeated Algonquin five games straight. Loyalist's two wins places it at the top of the OCAA eastern division with 10 points. Algonquin follows with four, while Durham brings up the rear with a lose point.

Other Loyalist teams fared far worse. In exhibition basketball Saturday in Peterborough, Sir Sandford Fleming defeated Loyalist 69-48. Sir Sandford's top scorers Dick Battea 21), John Behan 20), and Joe Caruana (14), outdid Loyalist's Bill Kyle with 16 points and Bill Jeffery with 12.

Sir Sandford Fleming managed to break a one-one tie in the third period defeating Loyalist 2-1 in exhibition hockey Saturday. Loyalist's lone goal came in the second period from Reid Mallory, assisted by Naumoff, and MacKenzie. Sir Sandford's tallies came from Paul Irwin and Terry Shortis.

The hockey team fared far better in the Loyalist Alumni

Swak Swishes At Frontenac

KINGSTON (Special) — John Bell's six-year-old pacer gelding Swak, driven by Belleville driver Gary Walsh, was the first horse Sunday at Frontenac to pace less than a mile.

Swak, who won the Belleville Drivers' Invitational last month, took the five-eighths of a mile in 1:39 4-5.

The featured ninth went to Clarence Carson's Philaurie, driven by Chris Storms, in a time of 2:08 1-5.

Loyalist Girls Top Eastern Division

Game Friday at Dick Ellis Rink, defeating the alumni 10-4. Loyalist tallies came from Naumoff, McDougall and Roundtree in the first period. Remington, McDougall with another. Howe in the second. Mallory, Howe, Wright and Reid Mallory in the third.

Nor. Electric Hockey Opens

The opening games of the Northern Electric Hockey Schedule were played Sunday with the Yankees defeating Falcons 7-3, and the Bearcats falling to the Rebels 5-2.

Yankees' tallies came from Davey Jones with two goals three assists, Gordy Sine (2), Bill Gaudfellow, Bob Brewster, Bill Jamieson, and Gord Tender. Falcon goals came from Terry Casselman, Mark Acquafreddo, and Doolittle.

Rebel tallies came from Tom Pierce with a hat trick, Larry Lupenette, and Rob Mc-Carthy, while scoring for the Bearcats were Rick Rosebush and Marco Moe.

Thomas Back In Uniform

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Running back Duane Thomas was activated by San Diego Chargers today but stayed on the bench during his first game.

Thomas had not played since the Chargers traded him to San Diego for wide receiver Billy Parks and running back Walt Montgomery early 31. He has attended several team practices and reported on Wednesday for a workout Friday.

A Charger spokesman said the 25-year-old running back was activated shortly before the game. He indicated that the Chargers have agreed to pay Thomas more than the $25,000 he was supposed to make in the final year of a three-year contract with Dallas.

"He agreed to new terms, otherwise he wouldn't be here," the spokesman said. "Nothing formal has been signed."

Move by Morton

Forward Sue Morton of the Mel Barriage senior entry in the Girls' Hockey League puts a move on defenceman Marg Scanlon to break into the clear during a practice session at Dick Ellis Rink Sunday. The Belleville seniors will be competing in a league with Kingston, Picton and Stirling, while the junior team will play a series of exhibition matches. About 40 girls are enrolled in the program, now in its fifth year of existence.

Bobcats' Left In Lurch As Oshawa Doesn't Show

Suppose you gave a hockey game, and nobody showed up?

That wasn't quite the predicament of Belleville Bobcats' manager Jim "Sniper" Matthews Sunday. His team was on the ice and ready to play. There were 700 supporters in the stands ready to cheer them on. There was not, however, an opposing hockey team.

Oshawa, who were scheduled to play the Bobcats in an 8 p.m. Metro Junior B meeting failed to make an appearance. The game was one that had been rescheduled during a September meeting of the OHA, but Oshawa team officials were apparently unaware of the switch.

The matter is now in the hands of the OHA, who just received word of the mix-up this morning. "It's something that the OHA executive will have to decide, once we get the facts," said Bill Harley, who is in charge of junior ockey.

Matthews felt that, "we should get the two points. The change was made at a meeting in September in Toronto." He was particularly upset about the "no-show". placed before the home town crowd which he estimated at 600-700.

One aspect of the cancellation which will be of benefit to the Bobcats is that it will allow more time for key injuries to heal.

The team would have been without the services of starry wingers Ken Holmes and Rob Foster. Holmes suffered a bruised ankle in Friday's 6-3 loss to the Peterborough Lions and has been advised by his doctor that he "could be out as much as two weeks."

The Wellington left winger will test the injury at Wednesday's practice and hopes to return to action next weekend. Foster, who missed Friday's game with a back injury is expected to be back in action when the Bobcats face Brimalea next Sunday.

Another plus factor about the cancellation is that it allows coach Moe Hunter more time to work right winger Andy Ricketts with Rick Meagher and Foster. Right wing has been a trouble spot on Belleville's top line this season and Hunter had one word to describe his feelings about the addition of Ricketts — "Happy".

Andy, a graduate of the Blake Kerr Imperial midgets, had shared this season with Welland of the tier 2 OHA Southern League.

The right winger listed disenchantment with the Welland coach, lack of ice time and a return to grade 12 studies at BCI as reasons for his leaving Welland.

NHL--Family Reunions

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

If, as they say in professional sport, a tie is like kissing your sister, there was a co-incidentally high number of family reunions Sunday night in the National Hockey League.

Four of the six scheduled games ended in stalemates.

Pit Martin's goal with less than four minutes remaining salvaged a 3-3 tie for Chicago Black Hawks against California goal- Golden Seals, Toronto Maple Leafs managed a 2-2 save-all in Atlanta with the Flames and also the Pittsburgh Penguins at Detroit Red Wings and St. Louis Blues at Buffalo Sabres games ended in 1-1 ties.

In games that decided a victor, Boston Bruins rode an early 3-0 lead to a 4-2 win over Vancouver Canucks and New York Rangers put two quick

Barrie, Hornets Deadlocked

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Barrie Flyers and GBs Hornets moved into a first-place tie with Orillia Terriers in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A league on the weekend.

Barrie romped Kingston Aces 4-1 in Barrie Saturday while Galt bested the visiting Brantford Foresters 4-2. Orillia limited its action to an exhibition game at Maple Leaf Gardens with the West German National team and won 6-3.

In the only game Sunday, Oakville Oaks, who share the basement of Galt, eight-team league with the Aces, thrashed Owen Sound Downtowners 8-2.

At Barrie, where Flyers outshot Kingston 39-22, Bob Baird, Ron Robinson, Corky Adams and Jim Thompson scored for the winners and Charles' Connery replied for Kingston.

Four players also shared the scoring for Galt, with Vance Millar, Ed Philpott, Bill Hway and Bruce Reier scoring for the Hornets. Chuck Reilly, the playing coach, and Kevin Pettit scored for Brantford.

At Oakville, where Oaks poured 42 shots at Owen Sound's Garry Waugh, Wayne Weller two, while singles went to Brush, Hank MacKenzie, Rick Rice Yvan Fournier and Ken Knapton.

Gord Gallagher, Al Blair, Bob Dube and Bob Monteith scored for the Downtowners.

power-play scorers to advantage en route to a 3-2 victory over Philadelphia Flyers.

Chicago, favored to repeat as West Division leaders, remained two points back of the surprising Los Angeles Kings with a 9-2 defeat Saturday on New York Islanders while the Hawks stretched their losing streak to three games in dropping a 5-3 score to Minnesota North Stars.

Elsewhere Saturday, Montreal Canadiens' unbeaten string ended at 13 games when they lost 4-2 to Detroit, Toronto beat St. Louis 4-2, Pittsburgh defeated the Rangers 8-4 and Philadelphia turned back Buffalo Sabres 5-3.

The lone game Tuesday night has Los Angeles at St. Louis.

The Black Hawks, tied for second with Philadelphia, came from one - goal deficits three times to tie the game at Chicago Stadium's capacity was a 40-footer that put defenceman Gilles Mehoche's shoulder.

Defenceman Ron Harris' first goal of the season midway through the third period after Leafs' Jim Rutherford in the Olympia but were still hard-pressed for the tie.

Hickey Redmond's goal at 15:03 of the third period evened the score after the Penguins had gone ahead on Syl Apps' scoreless tie-breaker 47 seconds into the final 60 minutes.

The stalemate at Buffalo was the second of the year between the Sabres and Bliers and featured solid goaltending by St. Louis' Jacques Caron and Dave Dryden of the home club.

The game was twice delayed by brief skirmishes in the second period. St. Louis defenceman Steve Durbano, who was involved in the initial disturbance with team-mate Mike Murphy and Buffalo's Larry Hillman and Tracy Pratt, drew a five-minute major for a later fight with Sabre rookie Rick Dudley.

The defending champion Bruins tallied three goals in the first period to wipe out a 2 Phila. deficit before Vancouver Canucks regained the lead and Bobby Rousseau scored the winner unassisted with under two minutes remaining in the second period.

Boston directed 36 shots at Canucks' goaltender Ed Dyck. Of in the last period when Phil Esposito produced the insurance score.

Power-play goals at Philadelphia by Brad Park and Rod Gilbert wiped out a 2 Philadelphia lead and Bobby Rousseau scored the winner unassisted with under two minutes remaining in the second period.

Terriers Tie West Germany

TORONTO (CP) — Orillia Terriers scored three goals in 34 seconds in the third period Sunday to break a 3-3 tie and defeat West Germany's National team 6-3 in the opening game of a four-game series with the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A league.

Tom McCarthy scored the winning goal 4:215 fans when he broke in alone on German goalie Anton Kehle and then 20 seconds later scored again on play which was a carbon copy of the first.

Tom Polanic made it 6-3 14 seconds later when his shot bounced into the net off Kehle's pads.

Doug Kelcher, Garvie Vaughan and Jim Keon also scored for the winners while Bernd Kuhn, Anton Hofbe and Gustav Hamig replied for West Germany.

Orillia took a 3-1 lead in the first period, but the Germans scored in the second and tied it Hanig's goal midway through the final period.

There was little body contact in the game, played under Canadian rules with a referee and two linesmen.

Orillia picked up six minor penalties to West Germany's three and outshot the visitors 33-29.

Sharks Home on Road

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

For a team that doesn't often win at home, Los Angeles Sharks are making the most of their road trips.

The Sharks produced only their second victory at home Sunday in the early World Hockey Association schedule, 4-2 over Houston Aeros, but it kept them atop the Western Division standings with Winnipeg Jets.

The Jets maintained a share of first with a 5-3 victory Saturday over New Raiders while Ottawa Nationals turned back Alberta Oilers 5-3. Quebec Nordiques beat Chicago Cougars 3-2 and Minnesota Fighting Saints defeated the hapless Philadelphia Blazers 3-1.

Cleveland Crusaders continued to pace the Eastern Division race with a 5-3 victory Saturday over second-place Quebec as Los Angeles checked Chicago 3-2 and New England Whalers beat Philadelphia 8-4.

Tonight the Whalers entertain Winnipeg.

Russ Gillow turned aside 25 Houston shots and goals by Gerry Odrowski and Bill Young 59 seconds apart in the second period produced a 2-0 lead and secured the Los Angeles victory.

Bart Crashley in the first period and Gary Sutherland in the third completed the Sharks' rout as Houston goalie Wayne Rutledge faced 39 shots in front of 4,129 fans in the final period.

The Jets, unable to solve Raider goaltender Peter Donnelly in Friday's 9-6 loss took a 3-0 lead in the first period on goals by Larry Hornung, Danny Johnson and Ab McDonald.

And veteran Joe Daley, stung for nine goals on 34 shots Friday, held the Raiders in check for 4,795 Winnipeg fans although he wasn't called on to make a save until the 28-second mark of the second period.

Brian Perry broke his shutout bid with a power-play score in the third period.

The Oilers lost a chance to share first in the west with Los Angeles and Winnipeg when they blew a 2-0 lead in front of 2,418 Edmonton fans.

Bob Leduc, Ron Climie, Wayne Carleton, Cecil Meloff and Bob Charlebois shared the Ottawa goals as the Nationals overcame a 3-2 Alberta lead.028 fans watched the Cougars take a 3-0 lead on goals by Bob Sicinski and Rob Whitlock.

Gaston McLeod, in the Chicago goal, faced a barrage of 42 Quebec shots as the Nordiques rebounded on second-period goals by Alain Caron and Michel Parizeau.

Blalock Bests Field

APOPKA, Fla. (AP) — Controversial Jane Blalock stroked home a 25-foot birdie putt on the third extra hole to defeat Kathy Whitworth and Sandra Palmer for the $20,000 Lady Errol Golf Championship.

The 27-year-old, New Hampshire, resident gained a spot in the sudden-death playoff by sinking 15-foot birdie putts on the 17th and 18th holes of regulation play.

All three golfers had completed the 54-hole tournament at two-under-par 214 over the Errol Estate and Country Club course. Miss Palmer vaulted out of the pack with a two-under 70, while Miss Whitworth fired 72 and Miss Blalock had 72.

Both Misses Palmer and Whitworth, playoff losers last weekend to Ann Prentice at Corpus Christi, Tex., had chances to nail the $1,500 first-up inches short.

Miss Palmer was in the lead going to the 17th hole when she three-putted for a bogey from 40 feet. She made a desperate birdie bid at the 18th, barely missing her 15-foot try.

It was almost an identical story for Miss Whitworth, all-time LPGA money winner, who began the day one shot behind co-leaders Miss Blalock and Betty Burfeindt, who had a final-round 73. Miss Whitworth bogeyed her 17th hole and at the 18th nailed her approach shot here feet from the pin and then missed the winning putt.

In the playoff before about 1,000 fans, all three golfers parred the first two holes. On the third, a 155-yard test, Miss Blalock hit a nine-iron shot 25 feet from the hole, about five feet closer than Miss Whitworth.

Stampeders Stumble, Lions Lick Nemesis

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Calgary Stampeders found a familiar way to lose while British Columbia Lions owned a seven-year drought in the final two Western Football Conference regular-season games during the weekend.

Stampeders, who have lost Thanksgiving scoring opportunities late season on interceptions, had six passes picked off in 30 minutes territory as the Eskimos posted a 28-14 home victory Sunday. Meanwhile, B.C. stunned Saskatchewan Roughriders 26-16 at Vancouver Saturday for its first victory over the Roughriders in 22 games, dating back to 1965.

Neither game had any bearing on the standings since playoff positions were determined last week. Edmonton and Winnipeg Blue Bombers tied for first place at 10-6, but the Bombers gained a bye into the sudden-death final because they won two of three games against Edmonton. The Eskimos play third-place Saskatchewan in a sudden-death semi-final in Edmonton next Sunday.

Calgary, which tied the Canadian Football League record of 15 interceptions thrown in one season—Saskatchewan set the record in 1956—finished fourth in the WFC while the Lions finished last.

Ironically, not only did the Stamps, defending Grey Cup champions, miss the playoffs, but also did Eskimos defeat the other 1971 finalist, who finished last in the Eastern Football Conference.

In losing a game, starting quarterback Jerry Keeting of Calgary had four passes picked off while Jim Lindsey had two interceptions and Ed Estlin defenders. Jim Henshall and Larry Highaugh stole two Calgary passes each while Dave Gerseer and Howie Schramm picked off one apiece.

Edmonton's backup quarterback, Dave Syme, a Canadian from Simon Fraser University in B.C., threw three interceptions, two to Howard Starks and one to Terry Wilson.

Eskimos, who completed their best season record since 1961, when they had 10 wins, five losses and a tie, never trailed in the game played before 18,307 fans.

George McGowan opened the scoring by grabbing a Tom Wilkinson pass with one hand, late in the first quarter. That play came after Calgary's first fumble of Hoskins managed only a 22-yard punt.

Coach Ray Jauch decided to rest Wilkinson, who was voted the team's most valuable player and received the Jackie Parker trophy for leadership.

Syme came on in the second quarter and engineered a long drive which set Henshall up kneeking over from the one on the last play of the half to give Edmonton a 14-0 lead. Calgary came back strong early in the second half with Keeting making seven completions before Bob Wyatt ran in from the four.

But Edmonton padded the lead in the third quarter when Bell ran 53 yards for a touchdown and Gene Foster went over from the one. Keeting to Gary Kerr for Calgary's second touchdown on an eight-yard pass in the fourth quarter.

Dave Cutler converted two of four Edmonton touchdowns to finish with 126 converts, finished second with 100 points.

The game ended in a flurry of interceptions as each teams picked off three passes before it was then 10 minutes to play.

British Columbia, playing before 22,000 fans, jumped into a 17-0 half-time lead to topple the Roughriders. Lions took advantage of two fumbles to take a 10-0 first-quarter lead on a 17rd Lowell Estes field goal and Don Moorhead's 28-yard scoring pass to Ed Young.

Moorhead connected with Johnny Musso in the second quarter for 23 yards and another touchdown. The Roughriders were held to 62 yards total offence in the first 30 minutes and did not get a first down.

Saskatchewan rallied in the second half as fullback George Reed ran for a six-yard touchdown and quarterback Ron Lancaster threw a 10-yard scoring pass to Gene Ford. Jack Abendschan made both conversits.

BMC's Jim Evenson who rushed for 134 yards, scored on a 44-yard touchdown run in the fourth quarter, while Gerela had two singles on missed field goals. He also converted the three touchdowns.

Young, who caught four passes for 108 yards, was voted the Lions' Most Valuable Player, while Ken Sugarman received the top lineman award.

JACKLIN WINS

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Tony Jacklin of England shot rounds of 68 and 72 Sunday for a four-stroke victory in the Dunlop golf tournament. Sukree Onchaun of Thailand, who had rounds of 69 and 73 Sunday, and Australia's David Graham, with closing rounds of 67 and 78, tied for second with 281 totals.

Wins tennis final

PARIS (AP) — Stan Smith of the United States won the men's singles final of the $50,000 French open indoor tennis championship Sunday with a 6-1, 6-2, 7-5 win over Andres Gimeno of Spain. The win meant $40,000 to Smith, with Gimeno picking up $5,000 as the losing finalist.

Lords Dump Buffalo

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — London Lords downed Buffalo Officers 34-13 Sunday in the first game of a two-game total-point final for the championship of the Ontario Rugby Football Union.

The Lancers had a potent attack to the Lords' 25-yard line, but after that their offence usually fizzled out.

Buffalo managed 16 first downs to London's nine and had 261 yards of total offence compared with London's 260.

Fullback Tom Walker scored two touchdowns for the Lords who built up a 20-0 lead by the 13-minute mark of the second quarter. Pete Jovichevich, Herman Carter and Louis Scott scored the other touchdowns and Martin Fabi was good on four of five converts.

Hill Takes Texas

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — "I think God I didn't have to make any of those little ol' fairways and four foot putts to save par," Mike Hill said.

He didn't. At least until the last hole and it didn't matter then as the 33-year-old Hill carved out an 8 iron to 10 feet Sunday to turn back the challenge of Lee Trevino and win the revived Texas Open golf tournament.

Hill, who led from the second round on, didn't falter in the growing pressure of Trevino's charge and posted a 272 total on the 7,021-yard, par-72 Woodlake Golf Club course for his second major four triumph in a five-year career.

Western, Lutheran Use Half to Advantage

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sometimes it takes only one good half to win important football games.

At least, that's what University of Western Ontario Mustangs and Waterloo Lutheran University Golden Hawks found during the weekend in advancing to the Ontario Universities Athletic Arrocoation title game.

The Mustangs, scoring all their points in the first half, downed University of Windsor Lancers 23-8 Saturday in Windsor in one semi-final game.

The Golden Hawks, also scoring all their points in the first half, downed University of Ottawa Gee Gees 23-10 Sunday at Ottawa in the other semi-final.

The Mustangs and Golden Hawks meet next Saturday at Waterloo in the title game.

Western struck for two touchdowns in the first quarter Saturday and never was in trouble after that. Peter Quigley scored the first on a one-yard plunge.

Quarterback Joe Fabiani then threw two touchdown passes, one to Bob Preiss, a seven-yard effort in the first quarter and a 44-yard one in the second. Paul Kridl kicked two converts and a 27-yard field goal for Western.

Windsor, unable to move the ball past mid-field until late in the second quarter, scored its touchdown early in the final quarter when Jim Wiskowski churned one yard to climax a 93-yard drive.

Quarterback Andy Parichi passed to Waktman for the two-point conversion. Waktman was the game's outstanding runner, with 163 yards in 18 carries.

The Golden Hawks and the Gee Gees were tied 3-3 at the end of the first quarter, but Wa erloo exploded for 20 points in the second period.

Scoring touchdowns for Waterloo were quarterback Wayne Allison, on a 26-yard run, Gerry Blacker, on a six-yard run, and Terry Pickett, with a 15-yard pass from Allison. Wally Parker kicked two converts and a 19 yard field goal.

Neil Lumsden did all the Ottawa scoring with a six-yard touchdown run, a convert and a 33-yard field goal.

Allison was the leading rusher, with 126 yards in seven carries. Ted Parmmore added 125 yards in 17 carries for the Golden Hawks, who had a total of 257 yards rushing.

Loss to Hamilton May Cost Cahill Job

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The tape of defeat hung on Cal Cahill's shoulders Sunday as he trudged toward the Toronto Argonaut dressing room across Hamilton's Ivor Wynne Stadium.

Argos' 26-18 defeat may have cost him his job although he has just finished the second year of a four-year contract.

The Tiger-Cats subdued Toronto to nail down first place in the Eastern Football Conference while scuttling the Argos' playoff chances on the final game of the schedule.

Ottawa Rough Riders, whose 117 win over Winnipeg Blue Bombers Saturday gave them an 11-3 record for the season, identical to Hamilton's, had to settle for second place because of three losses to the Ticats in season meetings.

The Argos, counted out of the post-season picture early in the year, suddenly found themselves on the threshold of a playoff spot when Montreal Alouettes went into a tailspin that saw them win only one of their last seven starts.

But the Als, who finished their season a week ago, backed into the playoffs with a 4-10 mark, the worst-ever record by an Eastern Conference team to qualify for post-season play. Argos finished 3-13.

And Cahill, whose departure from Toronto has been rumored for most of the season, didn't want to discuss his future.

"I don't know. I don't want to talk about it now," he told reporters in the dressing room shower room. It marked a complete turnabout for the Argos, last year's ECF winners and Grey Cup finalists.

It also marked a day of retribution for several ex-Argos, notably defensive ends Gary Inkabarger and George Wells and linebacker Mike Blum, who admitted before the game they'd accept nothing better than to see Cahill's Argos on the sidelines.

Least enough of all in the Hamilton room was Al Brenner whose Canadian Football League record-shattering interceptions turned the game in Hamilton's favor.

His first of four interceptions off Argo quarterback Joe Theismann was his 12th of the season, breaking the CFL mark he shared with former Ticat Don Sutherin and John Wydarney of Edmonton Eskimos.

He returned that one 41 yards to set up Hamilton's first touchdown, by Dave Fleming, and snuffed out Toronto drives deep in the Hamilton end with his other three—two of them in the Ticats' end zone.

"Theismann's just trying to keep up in this league," Brenner joked. "Last year he threw me five (interceptions) and because he didn't play in the first two games against us this year he tried to make it all up in one afternoon.

"He threw me five today, but missed one."

Theismann was successful on two touchdown passes to Eric Allen, but the defender burned on Allen's second major, Lewis Porter, returned the ensuing kickoff 98 yards for Hamilton's third touchdown.

Ian Sunter converted the Hamilton scores, kicked a 38-yard field goal and added singles on wide field - goal attempts that opened and closed the Ticat scoring.

Ivan MacMillan missed one of his two conversion tries but picked up two singles on attempted field goals. Zenon Andrusyshyn ended the Argo scoring with a 46-yard punt single.

MAURICE H. ROLLINS CONSTRUCTION LIMITED

IT ISN'T 'TRUE'

That only higher income families can afford to buy their own home. If you are in the $5,000. to $7,000. income bracket you can have your own two, three or four bedroom condominium unit. Monthly payments as low as $110.00 which includes interest, principal and taxes.

Let us show you our furnished models.

BEAT THE RISE IN INTEREST RATES

See our many houses financed with mortgage bearing 8¾% interest. With a forecast of rises to 10% the purchase of one of our units could save your nearly $20.00 monthly on payments. We have new houses in the West side in a furnished sub-division. Even the roads are already paved. Possession by 15th of December. East side houses available in November.

TWO NEW SUB-DIVISIONS

Now is the time to select your lot for spring construction in one of our new areas. One is on the West side the other in the East. Each has a couple of lots with large frontages. Act fast if you are serious about a bigger lot.

Run Out

COMPTON, England (CP) — Unexpected intruders at a cricket match in Devon aided the home side Compton Hospital on its way to victory over County Invisiting team. During Cowley's innings, hundreds of rabbits invaded the pitch as escape the harvesting in a nearby wheat field. One by one the Cowley batsmen got themselves out to join in the rabbit hunt. At close of play Compton House had won with 286 runs while Cowley scored only 190 but bagged 20 rabbits in the process.

Province Stalls Film

CALGARY (CP) — An American filmmaker who has achieved financial success with wildlife films made in southern Alberta is turning sour on the Alberta government.

Dick Robinson of Utah has been working in the Bow Valley west of Calgary for the last 15 months where he has made three films, each on a flimsy budget of about $250,000. Tokliat, the story of the life of a grizzly bear, already has grossed $8 million in North America.

Robinson says he would like to set up permanent shop in Alberta, but he reported problems with government officials.

"We're getting to the point where Alberta is pretty well a wipe-out for us. Alberta has nothing to offer anyone—all it has is beautiful scenery."

A lease on the filming site held by Robinson and Adanac Film Productions Ltd. expires in December and an application to lease Crown land near Seebe has been rejected. Robinson wanted a 700-hectare site where he could work freely with his extensive menagerie of wild animals and erect a 60-building picturesque village for use as a set in filming in his next movie, The Legend of Grizzly Adams.

The village would later have been opened as a tourist attraction.

Robinson said the lands and forests department, snarled his filming with red tape and overzy-stringent controls on movement and use of wild animals and in selection of filming sites. He said it is much easier to make wildlife films in British Columbia, used in the movies all have been raised by a staff of seven keepers. Robinson, a former logger, started with three cougars and a bear and now has a collection of more than 20 species, ranging from tiny kit foxes to giant Kodiak bears.

The American film-maker wrote, directed and supplied animals for several Wild Kingdom television shows that won Emmies. He said marketing tests indicate Brother of the Wind, a feature on an old trapper's encounter with orphaned wolf pups, has more audience appeal than Tokliat.

Author

Roy Farran, Progressive Conservative MLA for Calgary North Hill, is the author of seven books, including a history of the Calgary Highlanders and Winged Dagger, which describes his wartime exploits in Europe. Star Billing Boosts Prices

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Ads from the Hollywood Reporter:

"STAR'S ESTATE. An acre of Beverly Hills on Hartford Way. Charming colonial, four bedrooms, maid's, library, game room, paddle tennis court, pool. . . ."

"FAMOUS STAR'S ESTATE. Exquisite and modern! Elaborate master suite with his and hers baths! Gym! Projection room! Children's wing! Pool!"

These are typical offers in the real estate sections of the movie trade papers, which advertise "star homes" at prices up to $350,000. The casual reader might suspect a mass exodus of film stars.

It's not that bad. Nearly every grand house in Beverly Hills has had a star owner or tenant during its history and real estate salesmen understand the value of being able to say, "Lana Turner slept here."

But the truth is, that fewer and fewer stars are making their homes in the high-rent district of Bel Air and Beverly Hills.

Some can no longer afford such houses. Others simply don't like the idea of living too longer to their liking.

Richard Boone, a Los Angeles native, sold his Bel Air house eight years ago and moved to Hawaii. Now he is a resident of St. Augustine, Fla. He comes here only for his NBC musi-series. Hoagy Carmichael, and other acting assignments.

"I don't like Southern California," he says. "I like to get away from Hollywood and acquire a fresh approach."

Robert Redford lives near Provo, Utah, at a winter resort he is developing. Like Richard Boone, Mickey Rooney chooses to make his home in Florida.

Loretta Young and Dick Van Dyke reside in Arizona, and Van Dyke performed his television series at a studio near Phoenix. When not working in a film, Marlon Brando lives in Tahiti, where he plans to develop an island as a resort and laboratory to develop food sources.

Raymond Burr spends his time away from Ironside at his new home on a Fiji island. Frank Sinatra turned his back on the Los Angeles scene to retire in Palm Springs, Calif., where Red Skelton, Phil Harris and other stars have permanent homes.

Police Shows 'Unreal'

NEW YORK (AP) — At least 22 new and used shows involving police currently are at large on television. They range from Highway Patrol to 1HOD Squad.

What do real-life police think of the shows? Nobody really has asked them. So one of the shows-Police Surgeon-did the asking.

It occurred last July during a convention of the International Conference of Police Associations in Las Vegas. Two of the show's staff gave the gendarmes a nine-point questionnaire.

The basic idea was to get in some dramatizing for Surgeon, which is filmed in Toronto and stars Sam Groom.

But the spell, as it turns out, actually culled some interesting police views about television's men behind the badge and society's general attitude toward the policeman.

About 200 conventioneers answered the Surgeon survey. Only 15 responses were made available by the show's staff, but they seem to offer a fairly representative slice of current police opinion.

Nearly all the replies asked that shows about police try to depict law officers as human, subject to the same desires and frailties as the people they protect. As one put it, just show "that we have a job to do and we do it the best way we can."

There was a predictably mixed response to the question, "How do you feel about the depiction of police and police work in television?"

One said it had been "tremendously upgraded" this year, another called it "excellent." The remainder either said it was fairly good or tended to glamorize police work without showing the long hours of routine that are a cop's life.

"Adam-12 type programs depict about as much of police work in 30 minutes," said a San Francisco officer, Michael S. Hebel. "These programs, if they depicted reality, would require a force of supermen."

"Police on TV get involved in too many shootouts," said D. Brent Mitchell, a Las Vegas patrolman who said only Dragnet and Adam-12 approach what actually goes on in police work.

He complained that television cops never make reports or get tied up in court and that "the very technical aspects-involving probable cause, landmark cases, search and seizure-are never shown being used by the officer making arrests in the field."

WHITE'S DISTRICT — The Bayside Bible Study Group met at the home of Mrs. Dorothy Wilson on Wednesday, with a good attendance of members.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Reid and Ruth of Clarkson spent the weekend with his sister, Margo Reid.

The Sunday service at Westminster United Church was taken by Rev. Frank Mitchell who spoke on the different aspects of Christian living. The junior choir contributed two anthems with Miss Pearl Johnston as accompanist. Miss Penny May also rendered hymn music.

A number from Westminster United Church recently attended the 11th anniversary services at Fenelon Falls United Church where Rev. John Bunner is stationed. The Young Friends of Westminster provided music and singing at both services. Mr. and Mrs. Keith Johnston and Pearl, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Barker and Mr. and Mrs. Bernard May attended.

Baptized at Westminster United Church Sunday were Christopher William, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Angrove, Kevin Lee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carman Dafoe and Nicole Elena, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Redick.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wilson spent the weekend in Montreal visiting their daughter and son-in-law, Capt. and Mrs. Paul McCracken and their first grand-daughter, Miriam Ann.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

TUESDAY, NOV. 7

Aries (March 21-April 19): Sudden flares of temper will seem perfect. In many areas there is very little choice. Family situations hit another cycle of tension.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): What was certain yesterday appears different today. Wait until later for any serious effort to express your views.

Gemini (May 21— June 20): Reading between the lines becomes a sport. For once, taking things over leads to more, rather than less, confusion.

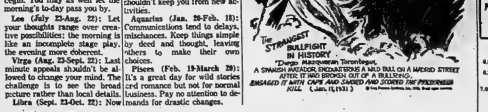
Cancer (June 21-July 22): If you haven't made up your mind long ago, today isn't the time to begin. You may as well let the morning's to-day pass you by.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Let your thoughts range over creative possibilities: the morning is like an incomplete stage play, the evening more coherent.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Last minute appeals shouldn't be allowed to change your mind. The challenge is to see the broad picture rather than local details.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Now is the time for that good question you've been working up to raising. No immediate answer is complete or satisfactory.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Take into account just what you know about people over long acquaintance. If you don't know their qualities, skepticism takes precedence.



Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Act rather than talk: nothing should detour you from settled plans. The day improves as you catch up on routines and purchases.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Staying on familiar grounds doesn't work. Being aware that you may lack perspective shouldn't keep you from new associations.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Communications tend to delays, mischances. Keep things simple by deed and thought, leaving others to make their own choices.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): It's a great day for wild stories and romance but not for normal business. Pay no attention to demands for drastic changes.

Wry Neck Cause Often Not Clear

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please tell me what you know about wry neck and also the best way to treat it.

—B.C.

is an operation to cut the muscle dangerous? Will it handicap you?—B.C.

Do you mean tell you everything I know about wry neck? Or just some?

And the "best way to treat it?" The best treatment is the one that fits the cause—if you can find out the cause.

Torticollis, or wry neck, is a pain in the neck more ways than one. In plain language, it is difficult to treat and results are unpredictable. Most of the time, the cause is not clear, which makes it difficult for all concerned.

A basic part of investigating the trouble is to have x-rays in the changes in the neck joints are responsible.

Often no such distortion is found—but the psychological factor can be the paramount problem, and in some cases psychotherapy is necessary to get the patient's psychological quirks "unwound."

Sedatives may help; muscle relaxants usually do not, even though excessive tautness of certain muscles may be the cause of the problem. The tranquilizer, known by the trade name Valium, is one drug that does relax certain muscles while not affecting other muscles, the services of which are required to draw head and neck back into balanced condition?

Surgery—cutting of certain nerve trunks or muscles—is a last resort procedure. If that happens to you, fine, but there's no guarantee that it will.

Wry neck is, as I've already said, no easy proposition, and the "best treatment is the one that works. If it does.

Sleeping pills (such as barbiturates) may be used with L-dops. Aspirin also can be used for some patients it has a sedative effect.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: About 10 years ago the doctor found my husband had emphysema and would quit smoking. Sometime later a specialist found he had angina.

He quit smoking for 10 years and got over the scaled good. A short time ago he started to smoke again. He has lost weight and has a persistent cough, especially at night.

I am concerned and would like you to explain the effect of smoking on a person with this condition—Mrs. D.S.

Why should I explain, when you are seeing what happens right before your eyes? The angina and emphysema complicate each other. No emphysema patient should smoke—and I am astonished and saddened that your husband can't understand it.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: When one has Parkinson's disease and is taking L-dopa, is there anything to avoid? Sometimes I've heard that wouldn't interfere with the L-dopa? Is it safe to take aspirin or sleeping pills?—G.T.

CP News Roundup

Lewis Lists Points Requiring Action

OTTAWA (CP) — David Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, listed Sunday items on which his party would like the minority Liberal government to take action as a condition of NDP support in the next Parliament.

He told the annual meeting of the Ontario Federation of Labor (OFL) these include:

—Action to minimize effects of winter unemployment;

—A close watch on operations of the Unemployment Insurance Commission to prevent inefficiency and delay in issuing cheques;

—An immediate plan for direct job creation;

—Tax cuts for the ordinary taxpayer. The NDP would oppose government moves to cut taxes for corporations at the expense of individuals;

—Action to stop the rising cost of living and particularly rises in food costs;

—An immediate and substantial increase in old age pensions;

—Reform of the laws governing election expenses.

Mr. Lewis told the federation's political education committee he did not expect the new Parliament to last long.

But he said the NDP would go to Parliament with expectations that "valuable objectives" would be won for the people of Canada.

"The government, whatever its colour, will have to listen to the opposition and to accommodate itself to at least some of its demands if it is to continue in office."

1908 Star Dies

ORANGEVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Canada's oldest Olympic gold medalist died in hospital here Saturday at the age of 94.

George Herrold Campbell, past-president of both the Canadian and Ontario dental association, was a member of Canada's Olympic lacrosse team in 1908.

Boycotts Urged

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The former Anglican dean of Johannesburg said Sunday that pressure should be brought to bear on Canadian companies with head offices in South Africa to help native employees enjoy a better life.

The Very Rev. Gonville Ffrench-Beytagh told a men's club breakfast that businessmen should organize boycotts of any stores that sell South African products and the Canadian government should be pressured to drop South Africa's trade preferences.

Children Die

HORNEPAYNE, Ont. (CP) — Two young children were killed Saturday night when a fire swept through their home in this community about 30 miles north of Timmins. Linda Taylor, 2, and her sister, Lyla, seven months, died in the fire. They were the only children of Mr. and Mrs. George Taylor.

Mickey Arrested

WELLINGTON (Reuter) — Mickey Mouse, a candidate in New Zealand's general elections later this month, was arrested here Sunday after a revel in the grounds of Parliament ended in violence.

Mouse, who changed his name from Chris Lawrence, is leader of the Mad Hatter's Tea Party and has been campaigning on a platform of free cheese.

He was one of eight persons arrested after flights broke out between police and about 200 youngsters who had been setting off fireworks on the steps of Parliament and surrounding lawns.

Expects Pact

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — State Secretary William Rogers said Sunday he thinks a Vietnam peace agreement will be completed in several weeks following resumption of talks between United States envoy Henry Kissinger and Communist negotiators.

Rogers said in a television interview that the two sides are in agreement on all the basic principles and there are no basic problems that cannot be resolved soon.

Reach Accord

TORONTO (CP) — A contract agreement between the Puretex Knitting Co. and the Canadian Textile and Chemical Union (CTCU) was ratified by 160 employees and union members Sunday.

Right to Die

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A McGill University professor said Sunday respect for life does not mean that terminally-ill patients be kept alive by extraordinary means.

Dr. Thomas Francoeur, chairman of the department of Catholic studies of the university's faculty of education, told a weekend conference of health-care institutions:

"This has nothing to do with euthanasia. It's no mercy killing."

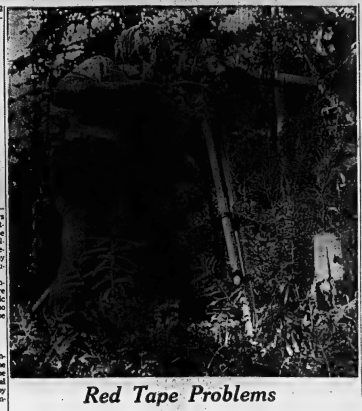
Want Set Price

OSHAWA (CP) — A spokesman for Ontario's service station operators said legal action will be taken by several local operators in an attempt to force oil companies to stand a rdise wholesale gasoline prices in the province.

Frank Tees, service adviser for the Ontario Retail Gasoline and Automotive Service Association, said in an interview Friday the local operators have hired a lawyer and will serve the oil companies with a legal writ demanding they make their prices consistent in Ontario.

Barge Safe

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — The barge A. E. Nettleton, cut adrift from its tug, the Olive L. Moore, in a storm Friday on Lake Superior, has been reunited with the tug and is expected to arrive here today.



Chaos Feared

TORONTO (CP) — The president of a Zero Population Growth chapter here predicted Saturday there will be worldwide strife, famine and death by starvation within 100 years as a result of uncontrolled population.

Believe Nixon

NEW YORK (AP) — The Harris Poll said Saturday that Americans, 49 to 42 per cent, believe President Nixon "has kept his pledge to end U.S. involvement in the Vietnam war."

Louis Harris said 1,320 likely voters were polled face to face last Tuesday.

Red Tape Problems

Union of Students Formed

OTTAWA (CP) — A frail National Union of Students (NUS) was created on the weekend amid defections and dissension similar to those that hit its predecessor in 1968.

The university and college students, assembled from 48 institutions across the country, emerged from three days of discussion with their ranks greatly reduced and a national organization with only one member.

The steering committee which had been planning the founding conference for more than a year had hoped the 128 delegates would set up a strong, well-funded organization armed with specific national policies.

However, the delegates were unable to resolve the differences between the Maritime, Quebec and Western delegations over modes of representation.

When the dozen or so Maritime delegates were unable Saturday to obtain representation by region rather than by student population they left in a group.

The several Quebec delegates, mainly from English-language institutions, followed shortly after.

The Maritimers agreed that they would be "left out of the picture" in any scheme that granted representation according to student population. They wanted equal voting status with Ontario, Quebec and British Columbia.

The Quebec delegates maintained that allowing individual institutions to join the NUS would undermine the existing provincial student organizations, the Front d'Etudiants du Quebec (FEQ).

Liberals Had No Answers For Own Queries--Mackasey

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberals lost the Oct. 30 federal election late in the campaign through failure to provide answers to the very questions the party was raising, a Liberal minister says.

Bryce Mackasey also says the government was "badly surprised" at the results — loss of the Liberal majority—but added that he foresees no changes in the unemployment insurance program which, along with high unemployment, was featured in opposition party campaign attacks on the Liberal record.

In an interview on the CTV television program Question Period, Mr. Mackasey, minister for manpower and immigration, told questioning reporters "It's pretty hard to win an election with half a million people out of work." The program was taped Friday for presentation Sunday.

"... I think we went into the campaign with a very obvious lead," the minister said.

Citing the public opinion polls, Mr. Mackasey says this lead apparently was "maintained or perhaps widened" through the bulk of the two-month campaign, but he added:

"We lost in the last 10 days ... because perhaps we weren't getting our message through insofar as what we intended to do about the problems that we had pinpointed ourselves for many weeks."

The Liberals spent much of the campaign telling voters about the problems likely to arise in the next four years — tougher trade competition, a growing work force for which jobs must be found, Mr. Mackasey said.

In late stages the public apparently was looking for answers and, when these "weren't forthcoming," the "rather heavily undecided vote which still existed in some parts of the country opted for the Conservative party."

The public was not up in arms over the Trudeau government's 4½-years in office, or the Liberals would not have started the campaign with a decided lead, Mr. Mackasey added.

Among lessons to be learned from the election result was that "we can't presume that people understand what we're trying to do" and "we can't presume that we know all the answers," Mr. Mackasey said. He was sure "our style over the next four-years will have to change, if we're there four years, or until another election."

Opposes Chang

OTTAWA (CP) — A return to sweatshop working conditions in some industries could result if Ontario government officials decide to water down labor standard laws, David Archer, president of the Ontario Federation of Labor (OFL), said Sunday.

Mr. Archer, speaking at a news conference at the beginning of the OFL's annual convention, said some "bright boys" in the Ontario labor ministry now are advocating the removal of legislation protecting workers.

Such a move would mean a return to sweatshop conditions as fair employers would have to reduce working standards in order to compete with rival firms, he said.

Voters In U.S. Picking Leader

WASHINGTON (CP) — Richard Nixon in San Clemente, Calif., and George McGovern in Mitchell, S.D., join an anticipated 85 million other Americans at voting booths across the United States today to decide who will guide the country for the next four years.

Although rain was forecast for many parts of the U.S.—notably the Deep South, the West Coast and a central belt from New Orleans to Chicago—the weather was not expected to be severe enough anywhere to keep a determined voter away.

A record turnout seemed assured. Absentee ballots were reported to have been filed in unprecedented numbers in many states, an indication of voter interest, and about 75 million young people over the age of 18 have become eligible to vote for the first time in a presidential election.

The two presidential contenders ended their campaigns Monday, the same way they had conducted them all along.

President Nixon, assured by the polls that he can expect a resounding triumph, barely broke away from his orgies-tered affairs at the Western White House to tape a five-minute statement for national television.

Senator McGovern made an exhausting, cross-country dash by plane from New York to California, touching down in Pennsylvania and Kansas, before he returned half way across the continent to his home state of South Dakota will after midnight.

U.S. Election At a Glance

Facts on today's United States election:

Offices to be filled include three of president, vice-president, 18 governors, all members of the House of Representatives and a third of the Senate.

The major-party candidates for president and vice-president: Republicans Richard Nixon and Spiro Agnew; Democrats George McGovern and Sargent Shriver.

The 18 governorships to be filled are held by eight Republicans and 10 Democrats. Governors not up for election include 12 Republicans and 20 Democrats.

The 33 Senate seats to be filled now are held by 18 Republicans and 14 Democrats. The Democrats currently control the Senate, 55 to 45.

All seats in the House, which the Democrats now control 255 to 177, with three vacancies, are to be filled.

Jobless Rise Below Average

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment rose again last month, to 483,000 compared with 459,000 in September, increasing in the Atlantic provinces, Quebec and British Columbia, Statistics Canada reported today.

The October estimates of jobless was 5.4 per cent of the labor force, compared with 5.2 per cent in September and 5.1 in October last year.

However, the underlying trend showed some improvement from the high level recorded in September. The seasonally-adjusted rate of unemployment declined to 6.9 in October from 7.1 in September.

Statistics Canada said the increase in the total labor force, to nearly 8.88 million from 8.84 million, in September, was about normal for this time of year. The increase in unemployment was somewhat less than usual.

The number of workers employed in October rose to more than 8.39 million from 8.38 million in September.

In October last year, the labor force was nearly 8.7 million, the number employed was 8.25 million and the number unemployed was 447,000. The last re was 5.1 per cent of the labor force.

The statistics bureau said that unemployment rose last month for young workers, aged 14 to 24, and for mature women in the labor force.

Men aged 25 or more—family bread-winners, for the most part—recorded the same degree of unemployment last month as in September and in October last year, 2.9 per cent of that group.

The figures are based on a survey of 30,000 households taken for the week ended Oct. 14.

While the survey figures reflect the actual level of employment and unemployment, the statisticians adjust the figures to take into account the unusual summer increases in industrial activity and the winter lamp. These seasonally adjusted figures are the ones to which the recommended to help in allocation of the underlying health of the economy.

The seasonally adjusted figures last month also showed increases in unemployment in the Atlantic provinces and Quebec, but came improvement in British Columbia. The seasonally-adjusted rates of unemployment in Ontario and the Prairie provinces were unchanged from September.

Statistics Canada said that of the 483,000 reported as unemployed at mid-October, about 21,000 were on temporary layoff of up to 30 days. This figure, up from 15,000 in the September survey, usually jumps at this time of year.

Of the remaining 462,000, an estimated 125,000 were without work for less than one month when the survey was taken, up from 118,000 a month earlier. Another 159,000 were without work for one to three months, compared with 155,000 in this category in September.

The number without jobs for four months or longer in October was 178,000, up from 172,000 in September.

Rasminsky Leaving Bank Job

OTTAWA (CP) — When Louis Rasminsky leaves the Bank of Canada Feb. 1 he will have been only 8a third governor in 38 years.

Mr. Rasminsky, whose second term of office does not expire until July 31, 1973, Monday announced through the board of directors that he would retire on his 65th birthday.

At that time the shy, retiring Montreal native stepped into the tumultuous shoes of James Coyne, whose last years as governor were a running fight with the government of the day.

His successor Mr. Coyne defended brilliantly, and flemboyantly at times, the right of the bank to remain always free of government control, Mr. Rasminsky did not.

Making It Official

Surrounded by ballot boxes and sealed envelopes with votes, Hastings-riding returning officer Reginald Dunham began official count of results in Oct. 30 federal election. Tallies showed only six minor variations from election-night returns — vote was slightly lower — although number of rejected ballots was double that in 1968. For details, see Page 3.

Shopkeepers and Unions to Face Heavy Penalties

LONDON (Reuter) — Shopkeepers who raise prices or unions which call strikes over pay may face heavy penalties starting today as a result of the government's new price and income freeze.

Prime Minister Edward Heath clamped a 90-day freeze on prices, pay, rents and dividends and said Monday that this would be followed by specific anti-inflation law's.

The government departments set up special hot lines and invited consumers to report immediately any illegal price increases. Shopkeepers were warned not to raise prices on anything except fruit, vegetables, meat and fish, which are subject to seasonal variations.

Lansky Is Arrested by FBI

MIAMI (AP) — Denied refuge by six Latin American governments a man reported aboard an airliner which brought him here, reputed underworld financial figure Meyer Lansky arrived at Miami International Airport today and was arrested by the FBI.

Lansky, 71, who faces trial on charges of evading taxes on gambling rakeoffs, was ending a two-day air journey that began Sunday when he left Israel in advance of expulsion orders and flew to Switzerland. From Zurich he flew to Latin America and in succession tried Rio De Janeiro, Brazil; Buenos Aires, Argentina; Asuncion, Paraguay; La Paz, Bolivia; Lima, Peru and Panama.

Each Latin American government refused him asylum.

Lansky was reported to have arrived $1 million to any country that would accept him.

Boost In Job Supply Sought

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberal government is planning to call the Commons into session early in January and present it with a series of new economic proposals to combat unemployment, sources said Monday.

When Prime Minister Trudeau held a news conference Thursday and announced that his government—now reduced to a minority—would carry on, he said that Parliament would be called "as soon as reasonably possible following the return of the final election writ." This would be Dec. 5 at the earliest.

But sources said Monday that plans call for Parliament to meet early in January and by that time the government will have a series of economic measures ready for the speech from the throne.

Mr. Trudeau will announce his plans to his party's caucus when it meets here Wednesday. The Conservative caucus will meet Nov. 13-16 and the New Democratic Party caucus will meet in Toronto next Monday after a meeting of the party's federal council.

Party standings as of Nov. 6 were 109 Liberals, 106 Conservatives, 31 New Democrats, 14 Social Credit and two Independent.

There was no clear concensus on how long the new Parliament would last.

NDP Leader David Lewis, whose party holds the balance of power, stays the session will last "as long a Parliament does come good for Canada." But everyone agrees there will be some difficult votes in the early days.

While it is generally conceded that the NDP would prefer to postpone another election until well into the new year, the Conservatives are apparently eager to go to the polls again, assuming that the momentum is on their side.

Power Failures Plague Quebec

MONTREAL (CP) — A strike by 8,500 Hydro-Quebec workers entered its second day today with both management and union officials saying they were anxious to resume negotiations but neither side making a formal move to return to the bargaining table.

About 44 power failures across the province, caused by routine problems but unrepaired because of the strike, have left 2,600 customers without power, a Hydro spokesman said.

In the Montreal suburb of Hampstead, 1,000 homes were without electricity as union emergency crews refused to release an underground cable covered by a construction crew.

A Hydro official said the workers also refused to repair power supplies to a home for the aged in Kamouraska, south of Quebec City, saying the home had its own standby diesel generator.

NDP Wins Close Race With PCs

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberals moved into a one-seat lead over the Progressive Conservatives Monday as the returning officer in Meadow Lake reported a surprise, unofficial New Democratic Party victory.

Before written reports had been received from the outlying polling stations of the northern Saskatchewan riding, Meadow Lake was declared a 20-vote victory for Conservative Bert Caldwell on the basis of last week's election-night results sent by radio.

But the written reports delivered with ballot boxes Monday showed errors in the radio reports, and New Democrat Elias Nerdoly was left with a 30-vote margin of victory.

Da Nang's Moon Festival Rice Mixed with Gravel and Styrofoam

DA NANG, Vietnam (AP) — It was the September Moon Festival, celebrating the autumn harvest, when refugees from Quang Tri started getting chicken feed—low-grade broken rice mixed with dirt, gravel, styrofoam balls and nylon fibers.

More than a month and a half later, there are widely differing estimates of how much rice and how much money was involved.

James Really of the U.S. war victims advisory office says it was "about 2,000 tons of rice. I don't know how much it was worth."

Paul Daly, senior adviser to the Da Nang mayor's office, said the swindle involved hundreds of thousands of tons.

Other officials say an investigation ordered by President Nguyen Van Thieu is more of a face-saving gesture than a desire to punish the guilty. They point out the Col. Ngo Ven Nhe Khoi is still major of Da Nang despite evidence of his involvement in the swindle.

One U.S. official said: "We provided the money for the rice and the means to distribute it to the refugee camps. The Da Nang municipality handled the rice purchases."

The transactions were huge—the estimated 224,000 refugees in the Da Nang area require 125 tons a day.

"Refugees first discovered the bad rice on Sept. 20—it was chicken feed of substandard," said the official.

"But it wasn't dangerous. Nothing happened to the people who ate it. It just wasn't very palatable. But it was a dirty trick to play on people who had already suffered enough dirty tricks."

"President Thieu needs all the support he can get right now," said one U.S. official. "If one of his people loses face, he loses face. Khoi will probably be eased out quietly later on but not right now."

Peering over her gold-rimmed spectacles, the Cambodia-trained soothsayer predicted an unhappy future for the McGovern administration and a worry-free retirement for President Nixon.

She said the gave her prediction both the Cambodian "burning candle mythology" and the incense-burning test but did not use the splashing water mythology "because that is for broken hearts."

Sorceress Says McGovern to Win, to Vietnam's Sorrow

PHU NHUAN, South Vietnam (AP) — A Vietnamese sorceress has heard ill load and clear from the spirit world that Senator George McGovern will win the U.S. presidential election.

"This will be bad for peace and bad for Vietnam," said Madame Sisbawash, who spent 30 minutes in deep meditation on the American election after the artillery died down Monday night.

Stu Meeks Will Run for Council

Stuart Meeks, owner - operator of LaSalle Ambulance, announced his candidacy for an aldermanic seat at council last night.

A resident of Belleville for 13 years, he has developed a keen interest in the Bay of Quinte and the state of Belleville harbor.

In addressing city council last night, Mr. Meeks said the city faces a serious possibility of spring flooding next year because of the condition of the mouth of the Moira River.

Through federal government winter works programs, the city should undertake dredging operations to improve harbor facilities and reduce the risk of flooding, he said.

With the 1967 sailing Olympics coming to Kingston, Belleville should develop a plan to improve its facilities to take advantage of the number of additional yachtsmen who will be attracted to the area, said Mr. Meeks.

Mr. Meeks, who operates a water rescue service during the summer, is keenly interested in the city's recreational program, the economic health of the downtown area and the city's parks program.

He would like to see the further development of the Moira River to improve its recreational potential for Belleville residents who are unable to get away in the summer to beaches and cottages.

"There has been much talk of the wrong man not being represented on council" says Mr. Meeks. "I consider myself in that category and, if elected, promise to support the viewpoint of these people as well as others."

Mr. Meeks, 38, is married and has three children.

Buildup of Silt Said Flood Danger

Huge volumes of silt being carried downstream from the sanitary trunk sewer installation up the Moira river are building up sediment in the harbor mouth and could cause a disastrous flood next spring in downtown Belleville.

This is the claim of Belleville ambulance operator Stu Meeks, who Monday at city council urged that immediate action be taken to avert what is almost certain trouble.

He said that under the railway bridge, in some sections, there was only 18 inches of water when there used to be several feet and claimed the silt from the river coffer dams was even extending out into the harbor and the Bay of Quinte.

The residue of the silt build-up would be that the river would freeze to the bottom this winter and cause flooding conditions next spring.

City Engineer Wilbur Purcell said, however, that Mr. Meeks' claims regarding the river were lacking in fact.

He said there was just no way that the amount of material from the river coffer dam could have gone downstream to create the condition described by Mr. Meeks.

Alderman Keegan said he shared Mr. Meeks' concern, stating it was a "serious situation which should be brought in, the attention of the federal government."

On recommendation of Alderman Donald Soutter, council directed the city manager to determine if the silt build-up had resulted from the river sewer installation and if so bring it to the attention of the city harbor commission and engineers and the commission's support for federal assistance.

Youths Seen In Store

Two youths spotted inside Chaney's Furniture World in Belleville Plaza last night have eluded city police.

A pedestrian passing through the plaza shortly after midnight telephoned police after noticing activity in the store.

But by the time officers arrived, the pair had fled.

Entry was gained through windows above the front door.

It has not yet been determined whether anything was taken.

ALBERT LENTINI

Lentini In Race

Albert Lentini, 28 - year - old Belleville railroader, is among newcomers bidding for a city hall council seat in the upcoming elections.

Mr. Lentini announced his candidacy yesterday when he took out nomination papers.

A Canadian National railways yardman for the past six years, he is newly elected vice - president of the United Transportation Union, Local 403, in Belleville.

Mr. Lentini also is president of the Quinte Help Fund Lottery.

He is married with one child.

Council To Request More Beds

City council will urge the county of Hastings to take action to construct additional homes for the aged accommodation at a suitable place in the county.

This is the recommendation of the city council resolutions committee which saw approval yesterday by council.

The recommendation indicated there was a present need for at least 34 more beds in Hastings Manor for city residents.

Mayor J. Russell Scott noted that the city officially is entitled 35 beds at Hastings Manor but through generosity of the county there are now 96 city residents in the home with another 32 to 34 on the waiting list.

It was suggested that if the county built another home in the Shadoc or centre Hastings area, this would relieve the crowded conditions at Belleville Manor.

Former Alderman To Seek Election

Former city alderman with four years' experience on council back in the 1960s, Joe Raycroft this year is seeking another term at city hall.

Several weeks ago Mr. Raycroft said he was considering again electing himself as alderman and he today confirmed his intention.

A resident of the city for most of his life, Mr. Raycroft is a former Belleville business man, having operated Acme Plumbing and Heating and Raycroe Plumbing Supplies for nearly 30 years.

He is now in general insurance with his son Tom.

Mr. Raycroft was first elected to council in 1962 and served for three years as chairman of city public works, and also served on the city parks board, on the special sewers committee and of the industrial commission.

"I feel that my experience in council would be a benefit to the city," he said.

Aside from his son Tom, with whom he is in partnership in the general insurance business, Mr. Raycroft has a daughter working in the clerical department at Belleville General Hospital.

Some Stunned, Some Bitter At Trenton Mill Closing

TRENTON (Staff) — Announcement of the closing of the 47-year-old Goodyss Imperial Mills plant here, has left many of the 165 employees stunned, others bitter toward fly - by - night workers, and those who are taking the news in stride.

Plant manager Clifford Baker, an employee of the company since 1930, emerged on a statement this past weekend, that the federal government's unemployment insurance benefits program resulted in massive employee turnover in Trenton.

"We have been working at a financial loss for the past year because of the staff coming and going," he said. "The younger members that have come onto the staff would rather sit at home drawing benefits than work."

In a brief poll conducted during a midnight shift change at the plant, Monday, several varying opinions were expressed.

One of the most vehement was a man who identified himself only as Lloyd. "The manager generation don't want to work and that's one of the main reasons the plant is closed."

This charge was backed up by the statement of several young workers who indicated they were ready and willing to go on the dole rather than work.

Said one: "Yeah, I'm glad it's closing down. For one thing I can draw pogey."

"Some of them like the plant, the younger ones don't. I guess it's been a good place for the youth told reporters, adding he had a job lined up.

Mrs. Lucy Buck agreed with this statement, adding she felt many workers think "it's easier to draw unemployment benefits than to work."

One young employee, 19-year - old Tom Luther, disagree with the sweeping statement of his older fellow-employees. "I've worked for one year and four months here," he stated. "You can't call them all together. There are some people who want to work.

"We should find jobs if the managers of the other plants realize that not all young people won't work."

Another man expressed dissatisfaction with the general impression that most of the workers were of the soon - to - leave class.

Gary McPherson of RR 5, Trenton, commenting on Mr. Baker's statement, fel. "he forget about the guys that made it run for the years it did. I mean, I thought it sound like we all were like that. I didn't like that much. But maybe, then again, he was in a spot and never thought about that."

Baker said approximately 100 of the 165 employees belonged to a quarter - century club, doing their length of time with the mill. None of the 165 will be offered positions in the other Common plants, those in Weymouth, N.S., or Marysville, N.B. All will be laid off during the three shutdown one week period of each operation.

Mr. McPherson spoke for a large number of the employees when he said some were in reasonably good financial position,s with wives working, but "a lot of guys are on the spot."

One employee caught by the shutdown was said most workers anticipated, is Mrs. Gary Simpson, within six months expecting her second child.

"I'd planned to work until April, then quit," she said, adding the extra income would have helped her growing family.

"I'm really sorry for the women who have to work to help support their husbands. Unemployment insurance isn't really a help at all."

She said there has been no official word about severance pay, and said no word has come from union representatives on this subject.

Aubrey Barre, local president of the United Textile Workers of America, was reluctant to comment on the status of negotiations at closing of the plant, other than to say there are plans afoot to keep the mill operating.

Salaries in the Trenton plant began at $1.75, 10 cents better than the minimum wage of $1.65 an hour. This rate could increase to a maximum of $2.85 an hour, with incentive pay available for individual production.

The notice was given, company president, E. D. James stated, eight weeks prior to the Jan. 29 official closing, as stipulated by law.

Buck Shot In Sidney

Ernest Barker, hunting in a party of four on Sullivan's Hill between Glenn Miller and Frankford, shot a large seven point buck with a field dress net weight of 200 lbs.

Barker estimates the deer will yield for his hunting party 160 lbs. of venison.

Late 'Patrons' Thieves

"A very intense fear" is what Clive Hichton recalls most of his Friday night ordeal as two thieves held him at knifepoint and robbed his store, 5am the Record Man, of more than $500.

Mr. Hichton, left alone in the Bridge Street store shortly after closing at 9 p.m. Friday, was counting the day's receipts when a supposed customer knocked at the door.

Considered matter of course by Mr. Hichton, at first he pointed to a closed sign. The knocking continued and Mr. Hichton unlocked the door, anticipating a late purchase.

"The door flew open in my face and a knife was put to my chest," said Mr. Hichton after the incident. "I was told simply to 'shut' up and was pushed into the back room of the store."

Once in the room, Mr. Hichton was tied to a chair and told to "make no sound."

During the trip to the back room, one of the men spoke in French, saying "suivez," (to follow).

Mr. Hichton, in his recollections of the evening's events, described the Frenchmen as sharp contrast of each other.

While the knife - wielding, denim - clad bandit was described by Mr. Hichton as having, "fervor at steel," the other "was scared."

The first, in command of the group, ordered the store emptied both tills in the store while the second tied up Mr. Hichton, "shaking all the while."

The leader was described by Mr. Hichton as six feet, two inches tall, 180 to 190 pounds, long black, greasy hair and appeared not to have shaved "for several days," a five days black growth.

He wore blue jeans and a blue denim jacket and was approximately 25 years of age.

The second was 5ft. 8 inch, clean shaven, short hair, short on than his partner's size.

He was reported to have been wearing a three quarter length, light coloured coat.

Before the two left the store, they ordered Mr. Hichton to Hichton to "make no sound," and it was not until 40 minutes later that he managed to himself partially from his bonds and attract the attention of a passerby through the window of the store

50 Hours Enough

Most Barbers Oppose Change

Belleville barbers will have to come up with clear cut request regarding wished-for business hours before city council will amend their present closing by-law.

Two weeks ago a barber delegation to council indicated that 11 city barbershops owners out of a total of 20 wanted a by-law amendment allowing barbers to remain open the same hours as stores.

Council referred the matter to this week's council meeting but Monday Alex Rickard, representing a barbers' delegation opposed to any change in hours, said the petition presented two weeks ago was out of order.

It presented a new petition listing 15 owners and seven operators opposed to any change in present hours.

"We don't want to go back to conditions of 40 years ago with a 70 hour working week," he stressed.

Mr. Rickard said barber shops were now open 50 hours a week, which he felt was sufficient to provide service to the public.

Two barbers who had signed the petition of two weeks ago asking for a by-law change, changed their minds and signed the later petition opposing any change.

On motion of Aldermen Enos David and Jack Ireland, council took no action on the matter.

Sidney Will Replace Trees

WALLBRIDGE (Staff) — Sidney township council, concerned about dead trees ringing its municipal offices here, last night decided to buy some new ones.

A tree planting program will be launched immediately.

Trees planted on the grounds in the past have had a high mortality rate and councillors have come up with the reason. They were being watered.

Although youngsters are credited with messing up flower beds here, the township is taking responsibility for the dead trees.

The new ones will be watered regularly.

"The grounds look pretty barren now," commented council Reg McCurdy.

Jack Ellis: Stepping Up Contact

Ellis Adds Hot Line

The number is Zenith 12270. For the present, the office of his Belleville home this past weekend.

Specifically, the new phone link is aimed at helping constituents in Hastings township north of the city who must place a long distance call each time they phone Belleville.

Collect calls would be accepted anyway, says Mr. Ellis. But not everyone would reverse charges in trying to contact him, and the special Zenith line puts the caller in touch with his home right away.

"It gives everyone the ability to pick up the phone and call me without having to go for bill," says the MP-elect.

It works this way: The constituent merely calls the Ellis home office and leaves his number, if Mr. Ellis is in Ottawa or elsewhere out of town.

The MP in turn will check routinely with his home and return any calls received there the same day, he says.

The special phone link will assure speedier, reliable contact between constituents and their MP, he believes.

But not all of them, he recently discovered after ordering the phone from Bell Canada.

In the southeast corner of Thurlow township, a part of the riding's boundary — there are about six residents on the phones, are outside the Bell network, part of a local system operated out there by Selby area by one of Ontario's few remaining private telephone companies, says Mr. Ellis.

Spoiled Ballots Double Last Election's Total

Spoiled ballots in the Oct. 30 federal election more than doubled from the 1968 vote in Hastings, the official count shows.

The recount, completed last night by riding returning officer Reginald Bateman, added only slight changes in the number of votes received by candidate election night.

There were 472 ballots rejected during the election night count by deputy returning officers at the riding's 198 polling stations and advance polls.

This compared to 221 spoiled ballots in 1968.

A main reason for the unusually high number of rejects could have been the new ballot used in the election. Before election day fears had been expressed by various political spokesmen that the new ballots design would confuse voters.

For the first time the ballot carried circles after the names of candidates. Nanda lovely voters had to mark their ballot within the circle or it would be deemed spoiled.

The count did not significantly alter the election night tallies, although it reduced the number of votes earlier credited to each candidate.

Mr. Dunham explained that the over count had been counted by duplication at a split poll in Thurlow township. One of the voting stations had been unwittingly reported twice.

The election was won by Progressive Conservative Jack Ellis, who defeated Liberal Frank Follwell and Elridge Brethour, New Democrat candidate.

The count totals with the number of votes subtracted from election night counts in brackets were:

Total turnout at the polls was 31,360, about 76 per cent of the 41,082 eligible voters.

There were more than 7,000 new voters throughout the riding, although ballots cast were only slightly more than 4,300 votes above the 1968 turnout.

Envelopes containing the actual ballots used in Hastings will now be sent to Ottawa, and custody of the chief electoral officer.

Meantime, result of the federal count in Prince Edward-Hastings is expected to be known today, said constituency returning officer Grace Radcliffe.

Delays had been caused by ballot boxes from outlying polling stations becoming snowbound in the mails and reaching the wrong returning offices — a fairly common occurrence, said Mrs. Radcliffe.

Board Members Seek Re-election

PICTON (Staff) — The majority of members of the Prince Edward County board of education will seek re-election this year.

Board chairman James Plomer and vice - chairman Clare McFaul have declared they will stand for an additional term. Mr. Plomer represents South Marysburg township and Mr. McFaul is a Hillier trustee.

Others who will again stand for office are Mrs. Kenneth Carson of North Marysburg, John Hutkisson, Sophiasburg, Lloyd Seeley and Ruth Hart, trustees representing Picton.

Board members Jerry Bond, a separate school representative, Harmon Montgomery of Ameliasburg and Edward (Ted) Rutter of Bloomfield and Hallowell township have decided.

It has been rumored Mr. Rutter may seek the receivership in Hallowell this year.

County warden Ross Downey yesterday denied rumors that he is interested in running a seat on the school board and said he plans to retire from municipal politics this year.

Schools to Celebrate Their Diamond Jubilees

Two venerable school buildings in Belleville have survived the revolutions in education to celebrate their 60th anniversaries Wednesday.

It is just 60 years since the then minister of education for Ontario, Dr. R. A. Pyne, opened both Queen Victoria School on Pine St. and Queen Alexandra School on Ann St. on the same day, Nov. 6, 1912.

The schools were touted as the most up-to-date and best equipped schools in the province in their day. A description met so far off the mark today.

Queen Victoria is celebrating its diamond jubilee by inviting everyone, especially former pupils, to see the modern school in action from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. A grand reunion of all former pupils is planned for the evening at 7:30 p.m., when many former teachers will be on hand as well.

When Queen Victoria opened with 11 classrooms in 1912, it had an assembly hall "that could be divided into sections by means of rolling doors".

A motor in the basement drove fans, capable of sending 450 cubic feet of air a minute into the rooms.

"The air being forced over the boiler, gives heat in the winter and coolness in the summer," said early newspaper reports of the wonders of the school building.

Another much-admired innovation in school architecture of 1912 was the glass windows in the doors of each classroom.

These, it said, are the only schools in the province possessing the convenience," gushed The Daily Intelligencer in its account of the official opening.

School openings in those days followed a different course from today. Instead of the symbolic handing around of keys, the official act of opening was the hoisting of the flag — a Union Jack, of course — on the school flag pole.

At high schools, The Maple Leaf Forever and Rule Britannia were sung by the pupils, with O Canada the choice of selection. Exhortation to the pupils to be loyal to the sovereign and honor the flag were part of most of the lengthly and numerous speeches.

Dr. Pyne, the minister of education, reminded trustees and the public that they would not have good schools without good teachers, and good teachers meant the expenditure of more money on salaries. He lamented that many fine teachers had left this area to go to "the North west" — where, presumably salaries were higher.

And he looked forward to the integration of "industrial education" to fit the pupils for jobs in the greatly expanded and industrialized Belleville area.

Freedom's Cost Not Forgotten

By BARRY McCULLAGH

Jack Lundberg, immediate past national president of the Army, Navy and Airforce Veterans in Canada told the Rotary Club Monday that time must not be allowed to mostly to coming generations that we have forgotten, at a people, the cost of a free and undivided Canada.

Canada, he said, has 117,600 graves in 70 countries and "final resting place" of every place's known only to God. Their names, too, are inscribed on memorials in various parts of the world.

Mr. Lundberg, is chairman of the National Council of Veterans, which speaks for 11 affiliated bodies in all matters relating to the wellbeing of veterans. He said the NCV was successful in having the Canadian Pension Commission review and finally produce a new act. Many veterans who were refused pensions earlier now have the opportunity to have their cases re-examined. Some 9,000 cases await such re - examination and the department has hired five new commissioners to help reduce the backlog.

The Veterans Land Act, said Mr. Lundberg, is the finest in the world and thousands have taken advantage of it. In fact, more than a billion dollars has been invested in veterans who thus far have returned $335 million in the Government through the repayment program.

Mr. Lundberg, long associated with the Duke of Edinburgh until here, said as he does not his organization is engaged in having private telephone companies. says Mr. Ellis. ceived his organization is engaged in having basic rate of pensions adjusted and brought to a level that will raise the 100 per cent pension $3,630.12 to $4,350.

A council member of the World Veterans' Association, Mr. Lundberg said this body is sponsoring the first international conference on prosthetics in Vienna. Prosthetics is the branch of surgery deal ing with the replacement of limbs, by artificial substitutes.

The Belleville veteran acknowledged that the first time he sat down at the international conference the has attended many throughout the world) of this nature — with his former enemies — it took a moment or two to re-adjust his thoughts . . . "but they were for the same purpose as I, to make sure that it would not happen again, and to help our unfortunates in obtaining a better way of life.

"How long," he asked, "can you keep the pot of hate boiling? It is easy to forgive your friends, it is only when you can forgive your enemies that you have accomplished something."

A federation headquarters is at present being built in Paris, for all people whether handicapped or not, and he said his organization is pressing governments to adopt the principal of "complete accessibility" in their national building codes. This means design that will facilitate passage of a wheelchair, for example, through a swing door.

He said the Belleville federal building is an example of an architect who drew a man in a wheelchair is faced with steps instead of a ramp, a heavy glass door instead of an automatic, no elevator if he has to go to the second floor. Wheelchairs, he said, as well as aged citizens and hard cases, all face these architectural barriers.

Earlier, in speaking of prosthetics, Mr. Lundberg stressed the importance of obtaining the best equipment because surveys showed 67 per cent of veterans' deaths were from heart ailments.

Possibly the greatest responsibility toward fallen comrades, said Mr. Lundberg, is that of guaranteeing that the youth of Canada will continue to believe and support the democratic ideals for which they died. The ANAF in 1970 had dedicated the coming decade to a program of youth and citizenship development.

In the last two years exchange programs have been held between young Canadians and their counterparts in Holland and Japan. The ANAF also supports cadet corps and air cadets and promotes sports activities among young people.

Mr. Lundbert praised Belleville Rotary Club for its youth programs and he mentioned in particular its exchange program between here and South Africa. He said he hoped South African exchange students Sonja Johnson and Dale Lumley, who were present, had enjoyed their visit here.

Mr. Lundbert read from essays by young people to qualify for the ANAF's youth medallions. The sensitivity of the writers was apparent, as in one passage which describes the 11 points of the Maple Leaf as representing love, peace, freedom, kindness, pride, respect, faith, hope, honor, happiness and honesty.

Rotary president Robert Orr read a letter from Rosemary Downs, of Bundaberg, Queensland, one of two Australian girls coming to Belleville in the summer.

Miss Downs expressed her pleasure at being afforded free travel, and to come to Belleville which she felt she knew already, having "a certain, sweet ring to it."

The Australian girl said she and her companion, Deborah Charters, have been friends for some years.

Like the South African students here, the girls will be leaving the summer heat of sub-tropical Queensland for Ontario's mid-winter scene.

Alderman Smith Council Candidate

Alderman Jean Smith is seeking re-election to city council for a second term, she announced today.

During her first, three-year term of office Belleville has progressed, she notes, with the new Dundas St. Bridge and street widening, development of an 83-acre park on the west river bank, construction of Dick Ellis rink, widening of North Front St., installation of storm and sanitary sewer on the Moira River.

"All this and more has been accomplished while maintaining a stable tax level in spite of inflation," says Ald. Smith.

During her term in office Mrs. Smith says she has identified with pollution and measures to combat environmental contamination.

But it was Mrs. Smith who promoted an amendment to existing city bylaws for the protection of people living in older parts of the city against the spread of highrise apartments. Amendments are uniform rear and side yard and parking provisions in By-laws until an official plan comes into effect.

While she was chairman of the Solid Waste Disposal Committee Ald. Smith united six municipalities in a co-operative, tax - saving ecological plan to meet the needs of the area for the next 20 to 30 years.

Last fall, a Moira River clean-up involving PACE and 250 students resulted in the removal of 30 tons of refuse from the river bed.

The monthly paper pickup for recycling is another project of Ald. Smith's.

While serving on the Social Services Committee Ald. Smith instigated council counseling for financial planning for needy citizens.

"Having been able to serve the citizens of Belleville for the past three years on the Parks Board, Recreation Committee, Social Services and Resolutions Committees has been most gratifying," says Ald. Smith.

Trenton Poppies Are Good Sellers

TRENTON (Staff) — The Trenton Legion Branch 110's poppy fund-raising project was an outstanding financial success, drive chairman W. H. King reported during the weekend.

A financial statement of the canvass will be forthcoming when the results of the sale of wreaths are received, he noted.

The branch this year was assisted by the Trenton women's branch 529, the branch's women's auxiliary, 25 Boy Scouts from Trenton troops 38 and 70b, 10 air cadets from Trenton squadrons 173 and 704 and representation from the Trenton Sea Cadet corps.

Two girl air cadets helped with the tagging while Trenton Girl Guides served with the committee receiving bids and collections functioning at Trinn headquarters in the Legion Hall.

Members of the poppy fund committee included W. H. King, chairman; Charlie Sheppard, secretary-treasurer; Charlie Car, treasurer; Mac McEwen, Sandy Davidson, Fred Lemon, Lou Knack, Miss Mavis Bird, Mrs. Lavina Leman, Mrs. Mary Carr, Mrs. Marjorie Woodacre, Mrs. Jean Lawson.

Imports and Jobs

Everything is relative. Canada, as everyone knows, has some half-a-million of its population unemployed. But in Hong Kong plastics is the second largest industry — textiles being first — and it employs 400,000 workers.

We don't know how much in the way of plastic goods is manufactured here at home, but we do know that a lot of the Hong Kong stuff may be found in stores here. Is there no way then that the Government can encourage establishment of plants to manufacture this and other goods that are now imported?

The Government, now that we have one of sorts — with Prime Minister Trudeau vowing to carry on — should embark on an immediate survey of how many are unemployed, why they are unemployed and see to it that steps are taken to put them to work. We need new industries, expansion of existing ones and such make-work programs that are in the interests of both the country and communities across the land.

The information about Hong Kong, incidentally, is from Raphael Green's interesting film on the British Crown Colony which opened the Kiwanis Club's travel and adventur series at Centennial.

Of the many fascinating aspects of Hong Kong life depicted by Mr. Green's observant eye, we enjoyed perhaps most the school for gifted youngsters of underprivileged families, run by a refugee from Peking. The youngsters, in addition to their normal studies, are trained in Chinese ballet (which involves a high degree of acrobatic skill) and they present annually a representation of the famous Peking ballet with the eternal Chinese theme of the triumph of good against evil.

Around The Block

When possible we take a quick walk around the block or along Front Street, in lieu of the morning coffee which, if you have any South hangups, means paying out in excess of $30 a year.

It is a bit noisy these days and you have to avoid falling into one of those gaping holes which we are told will be there for a little while yet. Christmas is still some time away, but undoubtedly the people we see are patronizing the stores with this happy season on in mind.

There is the usual cluster of folks at the bus stop area across from The Bank of Commerce and there are a couple of long-haired youths pacing at nothing in particular. But the best attraction has been created by the pretty young woman with brown hair and wearing a leather coat with fur collar and she is walking slowly, and somewhat painfully, we thought, with the aid of a stick.

There are surprises too — some of which one can do without. Here is a bank for instance, all glass-walled and curtained and a small girl of perhaps 3½ is walking along a shelf behind the curtain and she sticks out her tongue as you pass! And you realize that some kids need a little training in public manners.

Then every day is a new day on Front Street and it seems to us that business downtown is good. Let's hope though that the road works are completed with all dispatch. Some of our merchants are hurting because of the restrictions on traffic.

Safety First

With such a full turnout for the Kiwanis Club's first travel film of the season at Centennial, we are wondering if, in the interests of traffic and pedestrian safety, some direction of same might be necessary.

Interest in this series has always been high but it is increasing. This means more cars and more people and just as there is a desire to be there on time, a quick departure is invariably on people's minds too.

What we are saying is, we do not want to see any accidents. The way things are shaping up this is within the realm of possibility.

Pepin In—

Of all the cabinet ministers in the Trudeau government, one of the most popular and efficient is Trade Minister Jan-Luc Pepin. In the initial election count Mr. Pepin trailed a Social Credit opponent but then proceeded to win on the recount.

Mr. Pepin is the sort of man who gets on well with everyone. He is intelligent, he is straightforward and he mixes it all with an engaging humor. He has represented Canada well at home and abroad and if anyone had to go we are happy he was not, in the ultima'e, one of them.

Tradeau Clings to Power

Now It Is The Liberals Who Are in Disarray In Ottawa

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — If you thought, four years ago, when he took that boating in the 1968 election, that Conservative Leader Stanfield had problems, then watch and — if you find it in your heart — grieve for the Liberals.

Four years ago, with the Western Conservatives still enraged over the way their greatest-ever winner, John Diefenbaker, was so cruelly and unceremoniously dumped, Stanfield had a badly divided even openly civil-warring party and Commons caucus on his hands.

But look at the Liberals now.

Losers, but stubbornly hanging on, hoping for miracles from Parliament, they are publicly blaming Prime Minister Trudeau for the disaster.

Their built-in conviction — most Liberal governments are afflicted with it — of their Divine Right to rule, is damaged, but probably still not in ruins.

And who is to blame for their humiliation and consequent embarrassment of their (in theory) lucky to the New Democrats to buy time and borrow power?

Liberal parliamentarians, some of them members of the cabinet, and not all of them embittered in personal defeat.

Just listen to Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford who salvaged his seat in the anti-government sweep of the British Columbia constituencies.

It was what he calls, and with just an echo of distaste in his voice, "Middle Canada" that caused it all.

It was "small 'c' conservative" reaction, he laments, against "small 'l' liberalism."

It was backlash, as he calls it, against what a lot of grumbling Liberals are calling "three - fed bilingualism," wholesale illegal "back-door" immigration, the mass influx of Ugandan Asians, and the infuriating spectacle to the working taxpayers of seeing "welfare bums" and loaf-about kids living well on unemployment insurance money.

It was public rage against the waste of millions of fatuous and fantastic Opportunities for Youth.

Then to hear Minister of State Mahoney, wiped out in his Calgary seat, it was protest against what he calls "The French Fact." That and all the rest.

It was so pronounced, at least in the West, says Mahoney, that "it's time for Liberals to find out which way they want to go."

It was the Trudeau "small 'l' liberals" sneering at the workaholic and fashioning an administration and policies catering to the "crown corporate welfare kids".

Ron Basford has taken this a step further meaning how impossible it was to cope with the "backlash".

Take the old age pensioner, he says by way of illustration, who thinks he or she is being abandoned while the government lavishes tax riches on the kids. It takes an age to explain a thing like that.

"And in terms of reaching thousands and thousands of people necessary to explain it...in a convincing way, well it is just about impossible."

Now Mahoney again: It was an anti-government thing, and the Prime Minister's personality and attitude were all part of it."

There were other members of Cabinet who put the finger on the Prime Minister for his careless, casual manner of campaigning and his "abrupt" attitude to people and Parliament.

But they did not put it on the record.

Three prominent Liberal parliamentarians have, though, one a survivor, two angry in defeat.

Ross Whicher is calling for a Liberal leadership convention, and successful in re-election, he speaks as MP for Bruce.

Gordon Blair and Murray McBride, two defeated Liberals in the Ottawa area, not only want a leadership convention—and presumably a new leader—but a whole new policy conference "so the party can get back on the track".

The Prime Minister has been unbelieving of these declarations, from inside the cabinet and the party Commons caucus, too, of lack of faith in his once magnificent charisma and his assumption of infallibility.

"Ross Whicher says there should be a leadership convention," he was told by reporters.

"What," snapped the astounded Prime Minister, aghast at the effrontery of it all.

"Yes, Whicher wants a convention," he was told again.

"Ross Whicher said THAT, did he?" came back the answer, lightly tipped.

It gives you just a little idea of in what disarray the shattered but still power-greedy Liberals are, and what problems of reunification face them in their coming days of trial by minority parliamentary fire.

Ontario Snow Clearing Budget Totals $30 Million

From the Intelligencer's
Queen's Park Bureau

TORONTO — Ontario taxpayers will spend $30 million to keep the province's highways clear of snow this winter.

That is the estimate of the transportation and communications ministry which has already commenced snow removal operations in Thunder Bay and Kenora districts. Weather forecasters point to a cold, wet winter creating problems for motorists.

To combat the snowfall on Ontario's 13,000 miles of highway, 6,500 workers in 18 district offices will be involved. Murray Sinclair, the ministry's maintenance engineer, revealed the timetable for the operations.

"On the basis of weather data collected over the years, we have operating in the northern districts by October 22. In Toronto, we expect snow for Nov. 15. It ranges to Chatham where we don't predict it until Dec. 1. We don't abide by these dates precisely but we do use them as a good guide," said Sinclair.

The stretch of road which receives the most attention is "right out the window," reported Sinclair at the Ministry's offices, a snowball's throw from the MacDonald - Cartier Freeway (Highway 401) in north Toronto. That particular section is the busiest in the province and therefore gets the biggest share of sanding, salting and plowing.

Between here and Barrie, we've had to close Highway 400 several times in the past few years. It's something very much distike doing, but often it's a matter of accidents rather than the road being closed by snow," said Sinclair.

Probably the most heavily snowed upon area in the province is east of Lake Huron up to Georgian Bay, aptly called "the snow belt". Highway crews working out of Stratford and Owen Sound patrol the roads with seven Lake Province's 14 self propelled snow blowers, but lose a few battles with the elements, many of them on frequently cleagged Highway 10 north of Shelburne.

"In most cases the decision to close a road is made by the OPP (Ontario Provincial Police)", said Sinclair. "We would not undertake to close the road without their agreement, but sometimes the OPP are not in the position to be there to put a cruiser across the road and inform people."

To keep the roads open and as bare as possible, the highway crews will use more than 400,000 tons of salt and 90,000 tons of sand this winter. Their fleet of 2,500 vehicles, 200 of which enter Toronto roads, includes about 700 snowplows.

An important innovation in snow removal has been the use of tandem formations in clearing the highways. This allows 17 miles of 12 - lane freeway through Toronto to be cleared in about two hours.

The transportation and communications ministry has experimented with a few replacements for sodium chloride salt in melting snow and ice. Urea, a type of fertilizer, was considered but found to promote plant growth which would increase algae if it was dumped into the lakes.

Calcium chloride was also tested, but Sinclair reported it's cost is considerably more expensive than the salt presently used.

While the crews are clearing snow and spreading salt and sand, information on highway conditions is transmitted from the district yards to the main offices. It is made available to the public through direct telephone lines which provide up-to-date reports on roads in any part of the province.

"Tax Bureaucracy Loses A Case

The Globe and Mail

In the scale of national finance, $30 is a tiny sum. Still it's something you can build on when it happens to be $30 received by court action from the federal treasury.

The citizen who achieved this remarkable breakthrough is Kenneth Eaton, a Labor Department economist and a man who likes punctuality where his salary is concerned. He was one of the Ottawa civil servants who received retroactive pay increases in 1969, but the Government was slow to pay up, so he sued.

The $30 was associated with income tax he was required to pay on the $1,500 back pay because of the timing of the payment to him. Mr. Eaton doubts whether many people will be able to make use of the ruling, but we hope he is wrong.

Considering the somewhat venerial attitude taken by Ottawa in the matter of interest on taxes that we are late in paying, and the somewhat niggardly attitude taken toward interest on tax refunds (often delivered with the utmost reluctance) that they must pay, some redress is warranted. A legal precedent or two might have a salutary effect.

United Nations Acts As International Safety Valve

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst

"At one time, in one place, we find out with exactness where each country stands on its foreign policy and what is important to them." This summation of the vital purpose and necessity of the United Nations was made last week at the closing of this year's UN general debate by the Turkish foreign minister.

With 101 of the world's foreign ministers converged on the UN this fall, the question of "why a United Nations", comes up again. In fact, the cynics, blase journalists, indifferent man-in-the-street in too many UN-member nations take the view it is all taxis, a necessary evil.

This is not only unfair but dangerous. Imagine a UN from since 1945 with the endless crises, several of them of the first order, of the Third World War, without the United Nations as a safety valve for all parties.

Imagine a cold war era—in an age of nuclear weapons—with Russia and the United States at most at each other's throats in the late 1940s and no UN General Assembly where they could hurl invectives at each other. Both countries were, and are aware, that invective is harmless, nuclear sabre rattling is mortal.

Or imagine an emasculated UN without the Soviet Union and the U.S. like the League of Nations after the U.S.

When Americans insisted all through the 1950s and 1960s that Communist China in the UN would mean a massive disruption of the world body as Peking lined up its friends in the African, Asian and Latin American blocs, to try to destroy the world body.

Neither could be further from the truth. The People's Republic of China peacefully entered the United Nations in 1971, taking the place on the Security Council long held by Taiwan or Nationalist China.

The first Chinese major foreign policy speech a few weeks ago by Peking's deputy foreign minister indicated as the Turkish foreign minister commented about UN foreign policy statements in general, where China stands on world issues.

Moreover these "unruly" blocs of emerging African, Asian and Latin American nations, whose ideological kinship with Russia and China so often disturb the major Western nations, are firm bloco no longer.

Take South Africa's racism as an example. Black African states like Nigeria, Ghana and Tanzania would still like to see South Africa expelled from the UN claiming her racist laws violate the human rights clauses of the UN Charter. And so they do.

At the same time, other Black African states alike the Ivory coast, Ethiopia and Malawi would like to see some kind of rapprochment with the South Africans. Malawi's revised interest in this is revealed through her open UN activities, since about half of that country's work force are well-paid laborers in South African mines and industries.

Admittedly their pay isn't high by Western standards, but higher than in most black African countries and where Malawi is concerned, means employment in industries which do not exist in that struggling East African area.

Then there are the enormous non-political activities of the UN in economic and social activities, technical assistance and so on in combatting environmental pollution.

Canadian ex-businessman and bureaucrat Maurice Strong is the UN Assistant Secretary General for the Environment and was the man behind the major UN Conference on the Human Environment held earlier this year in Stockholm.

All these activities alone would justify the existence of a world body like the United Nations.

Food Price Curbs Appear Unlikely

OTTAWA (CP) — Government spokesmen are saying little about the prospects for food price controls.

But their few comments on the issue suggest little change in government thinking despite the clamor for controls by New Democrat Leader David Lewis during and after the election campaign.

The government view appears still to be that food price controls are acceptable only if Canadians will tolerate food rationing. Finance Minister John Turner suggested in a Brockville, Ont., speech Oct. 3 that this rules out controls at this time.

But Mr. Lewis Sunday demanded action to curb the rising cost of food as one condition of NDP support for the minority Liberal government in the next Parliament. A spokesman for Mr. Lewis said this means he wants food price controls.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield has said that a Conservative government would impose food price controls if necessary after consultation with food industry and farm representatives.

Leonard Roy, administrative vice-president of the Quebec Food Council, said last week in Montreal that he expects some form of temporary price control as a concession by Prime Minister Trudeau to the NDP.

Spokesmen for Consumer Affairs Minister Robert Andras and Finance Minister John Turner would not comment, but showed little enthusiasm for the idea.

A source in Mr. Turner's office said the government is watching developments in the U.S. and Britain.

Food price controls have been in effect for more than one year in the U.S. while British Prime Minister Edward Heath Monday announced a sweeping 90 - day freeze on wages, prices, rents and dividends effective today.

The U.S. record on food prices has been significantly better than Canada's this year. The U.S. monthly food price index has varied between 3.2 per cent and 5.4 per cent above last year while the Canadian average for the first nine months has been 7.2 per cent higher than the average for the same period last year.

The U.S. prices commission controls the retail price of food, allowing retailers to add only their own costs to the price of farm products.

Prices of farm products are not controlled by the prices commission.

The percentage increase of food prices was lower in Canada than in the U.S. in the years 1969 to 1971.

In this period in Canada, there was a slower rate of increase in the food price index than in the general consumer price index. This was partly due to a food price war between supermarket chains.

But this year food prices have risen much more rapidly than the over-all consumer price index.

Mr. Lewis has said retailers are getting "unreasonable profits" but a spokesman for Mr. Turner blamed the rising prices on such factors as bad weather reducing the supply of food products.

Defeated Members Clearing Out Offices

OTTAWA (CP) — Amid the wooden crates and half-full cartons Harold E. Stafford rtrodeurrns and hands waving, talking about how he could see it all coming and how he was just going to go away and now maybe practise a little law.

Like scores of other defeated members of Parliament, Mr. Stafford was in town Monday to clear out his office. And like the others he still was talking about how it happened, as if saying it aloud might make it a little clearer for him.

Mr. Stafford lost the riding of Elgin, in Ontario, which he'd held for the Liberals since 1963, by a wide margin.

"I was standing in the committee room," he said, rpcrsd ing his hands to ret the scene, "I knew from the first few polls that I wasn't going to make it."

Even on the way out Mr. Stafford's time in the House will serve him well. He concedes that the exposure will earn him dividends in the future.

"The court cases will just come rolling in."

A few floors down, another West Block office was being emptied more casually by Perry Ryan, former Conservative member for Spadina. While carefully wrappiint a statuette, packed up in Hong Kong, Mr. Ryen hinted at his eventual return.

"There will be another election and maybe . . . ." He plans to stick around in any case. "I might make myself useful to the party, to Mr. Stanfield."

The knick-knacks, books and papers Mr. Ryan moved out of his office will be stored in the basement of a Toronto law office.

Hospital Staff Pinned

Coffee and Gift Shops' Orientation Underway

Even though there are 175 coffee and gift shops volunteers for the Belleville General Hospital more are needed.

A general hospital orientation training session is now underway for these volunteers. Each Women's Hospital Auxiliary member is shown by Mrs. Bechtel, coffee and gifts shops organizer, how to operate the coffee and soup machines, making a bill, how to serve the customer and dealing with the public.

Mrs. B. E. Burley is the chairman of the planning committee which includes the decorating for the shop.

MR. AND MRS. RANDALL ADAMS

For teenage girls, volunteer work in the hospital is an opportune way of learning about nursing and other fields in this institution.

The Women's Hospital Auxiliary have sponsored other voluntary groups for the hospital. Mrs. George Wilson is presently in charge of in-hospital services. Included in this volunteer work list are: providing library carts; pediatrics playroom supervisors; waiting room magazines; cradle pictures; visiting long-term patients; theater-care in waiting rooms; puppets in the pediatrics ward and Samaritan cupboard.

Women's Institutes

SPRINGBROOK WI

The October meeting of Springbrook WI was held at the home of Mrs. Myrtle Cassidy, with an attendance of 18 members and four visitors.

Mrs. George Williams opened the meeting with a poem. Mrs. Barlow read the minutes of the September meeting and the correspondence.

Mrs. Myrtle Cassidy gave a report on the first day of the recent convention in Peterborough. She then noted that the mayor of Peterborough welcomed every 30 institute members to the city.

Mrs. Gerald Burkitt and Mrs. Jim Spry were conveners of the "Family and Consumer Affairs" program. Mrs. Jim Spry conducted the program and gave a short talk about affairs and welfare.

Mrs. Gerald Broadworth read an article about home furnishings. Mrs. Clarence McKeown gave a reading about closer control and the abuses of welfare. A short discussion on health and welfare followed.

An interesting display of several artistic articles were shown. These were objects of "something made out of nothing."

Get well cards were signed for Mrs. Annie Bateman and Mrs. Florence McKeown. Refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants. Mrs. Clarence McKeown, Mrs. Gerald Broadworth and Mrs. Carl Ray.

Adams – Short

Monsignor J. P. Sullivan officiated at the recent wedding ceremony in The Church of St. Michael the Archangel, when Marilyn Elizabeth Short exchanged vows with Randall James Adams. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred A. Short, Belleville while the bridegroom is the son of Mr. Allan Adams and Mrs. Betty Adams, Belleville. The organist, Miss L. Grant rendered traditional wedding music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose a full length polyester bridal gown encrusted with tiny seed pearls and guipure lace around the bodice and long train. A four-tiered nylon chapel veil fell from her nylon headpiece which was adorned with seed pearls and nylon petals. The bride carried a bouquet of hot pink and white mums and pink roses.

Maid of honor, Miss Janice Walker, was attired in an empire waisted dress which had a pink chiffon bodice and printed chiffon over pink taffeta skirt. A lavender bow accented the waistline.

The bridesmaids, Misses Brenda Blackburn, Carol Adams and Kathy Short were dressed identically to the maid of honor, Miss Christine Beaudin. The flower girl wore a full length bridal satin gown with white guipure lace. Printed chiffon accented the bodice, cuffs and empire waistline of her gown.

Larry Douglas was best man. Ushers were Gary Burnett, Jack Short and Rick Adams.

For the reception held at the Belleville Shrine Club, the bride's mother greeted guests wearing a long royal purple polyester crepe gown which had a contrasting floor length gown complemented by beige accessories and a corsage of bronze mums.

For the wedding trip to points east, the bride donned a mauve and white dotted crimp knit pant suit. Black accessories and a corsage of silver tinted mums completed her ensemble.

Mr. and Mrs. Adams will take up residence at 178 West Moira St., Belleville.

Sr. Still 'Ladies' Man'

WINNIPEG (CP) — In some circles, Rose Boissinot would be considered lucky—having two girls on the string who sit patiently by the telephone for his daily phone call.

The 80-year-old — permanent-care patient at Deer Lodge Hospital for veterans enjoys his role as a "ladies' man" and says he'll be interested in women until the day he dies.

Mr. Boissinot is one of four men involved in the Deer Lodge Phone-A-Friend Service, a pilot project started last spring to help lonely people in the community.

The hospital patients offer companionship and provide a necessary safety check for the elderly or disabled through daily phone calls made at pre-arranged times. If no answer is received after a few tries, the volunteers notify a staff supervisor to get in touch with someone with a house key and have a personal check made at the home.

Lesbianism—A Touchy Subject in Women's Lib

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "I am a moderate in the lesbian movement," says author Sidney Abbott. "I have a lingering point of view that men are human beings."

Most lesbians are bored with men, says Miss Abbott, a self-proclaimed homosexual who has written a book on the subject along with Barbara Love.

The book, Sappho was a Right-On Woman, deals with lesbianism and feminism, a touchy subject in women's lib circles.

Miss Abbott and co-author Barbara Love insist that gay lib and women's lib have a lot in common.

"Lesbians are the proof that women may want men, but they don't need men," says Miss Abbott. "We survive and do very well. If we didn't exist, I think the feminists would have had to invent us—to prove women could do without men."

Most feminists shun the association, she concedes, because they fear all women's liberationists will be branded lesbians.

"Before women knew there were lesbians in the movement," says Miss Abbott, "they were saying, 'Oh, it's a bunch of dikes.'

WEDDING

SEMPLE — CARTER

A quiet wedding took place at St. John's Anglican Church Carrying Place recently when Marjorie R. Carter, Consecon became the bride of Ernest A. Semple, RR2 Carrying Place. Rev. D. Hawkins officiated at the five o'clock ceremony.

Mrs. J. Mace attended the bride as matron of honor and Mr. Richard Mace, Belleville, attended the groom as best man.

A reception was held at the Black Hawk Motor Hotel following the ceremony and another reception was held Sunday evening at Tommy's Tavern, Trenton.

Mr. and Mrs. Semple are residing at RR2, Carrying Place.

Euchre Held

FRANKFORD — St. Fronois of Assisi Church held their weekly euchre party Monday evening with the following winners: Mrs. Fergusson, Trenton; Mrs. Bess Plumpton, Stockdale; Mrs. Dorothy Sullivan, Trenton; and Ray Frost, Frankford.

The door prize went to Mrs. Lorraine Corkery, Frankford.

WALTER ANDREW COCHRANE, Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Cochrane of Simcoe graduated from Waterloo Lutheran University on Sunday, November 5, 1972 and received a BA degree in sociology. Mr. Cochrane is the vice-principal of College St. School, Trenton.

Woman Wrecks

OTTAWA CP) — The wrecking business may seem like a man's world, but Mary Smith doesn't agree—she's been the manager of a demolition firm's Ottawa branch for a year.

Mrs. Smith, 38, the mother of five girls, got the job by answering an ad for a Girl Friday two years ago.

She went to work because her husband, a pilot in the Canadian Forces, will be retiring in a few years, just as the girls near college age.

"It didn't seem fair he should have the whole financial burden so I decided to go to work."

Her job isn't as easy as it might sound. She has to watch the trade papers and local newspapers to find the big jobs her company wants. Then she measures the site, drafts the specifications and submits them to offices in Toronto or Montreal for an estimate.

If the estimate's approved, she has to apply for the necessary permits, hire the men for the job—usually through the Canada Manpower office—and when the demolition finally begins, she has to work with the job foreman, coping with any emergencies that might arise.

When the site is cleared, she has to sell the fixtures, lumber and metal salvaged from the operation.

She said it took her a year to learn the lumber business, but now she has "sort of an instinct about it."

Discrimination? "I was nervous at first . . . but I shouldn't have been."

OES Officers Installed For Tweed Chapter

TWEED — On October 26, the installation of officers of Tweed Chapter No. 148, Order of the Eastern Star was conducted in the Chapter Room of the IOOF Hall, Tweed. The impressive ceremony was presided over by Mrs. Pauline Clare, PDDGM, as Installing Officer with Mr. William Barlow PP as Installing Patron and Mrs. Frances Marner PM Installing Marshall.

Mr. and Mrs. Gil Colton sang a duet during the ceremony and were accompanied by Mrs. Marjorie Gray at the piano.

Following Installation, the Worthy Matron and Worthy Patron each thanked the Chapter. The Worthy Matron gave her motto and watchwords.

Mrs. Ethel Dafoe was pleased to present Mrs. Louise Mills with her Past Matron's jewel. Charles Porrit presented Arthur McCarry with a gift on behalf of the Chapter, in appreciation for his services as Worthy Patron.

Club Activities

Madoc and District Senior Citizens Club No. 473

MADOC — The Madoc and District Senior Citizens' Club No. 473 held their regular meeting on October 25 in the United Church basement. The president, Mrs. Broadworth presided and welcomed all. There were 54 members and six guests who signed the attendance book.

Mrs. Moorcroft read the nominating committee's report and the election of officers was conducted by Mrs. DeClair, the following is the list of officers for the coming year: president, Mrs. Broadworth; 1st vice - president, Mrs. Fox; 2nd vice - president Mrs. Vera Holmes; 3rd vice-president, Mrs. DeClair; recording and correspondence secretary, Mrs. Johns, assistant, Mrs. P. Blakely; treasurer, Mr. Johns; press reporter, Mrs. Mary Ann Holmes; lunch convener, Mrs. Margaret Blakely; cards, Mrs. Vera Wood; sick and visiting, Mr. Jim Rollins, Mr. G. Moorcroft. Others appointed were: Mrs. Reid, Mrs. G. Moorcroft, Mrs. Fox, Miss Raney, Mr. E. Carman, Mrs. E. Carman.

Mrs. Moorcroft then introduced the guest speaker, Gordon Rutledge who spoke on arthritic and rheumatic diseases. He showed a short film, provided literature and gave a very interesting informative talk, during which he answered many questions. As an added treat, Mr. Bell then favored with a number of musical selections on the mouth organ. Mr. Rutledge thanked both of the speaker and presented him with a small gift.

During the business meeting the minutes of the previous meeting were read by secretary, Mrs. Johns. The president, Mrs. Broadworth thanked the nominating committee for a chore well done and read a prayer for the new officers.

Mrs. Ellis sent thanks for a card received on the occasion of their wedding anniversary. Lunch was served following the meeting and a social time enjoyed by all.

What is a "Pre-Board Arrangement" in Air?

I talked to Danny Gecchini, purser on the Air Canada plane which flew me from Toronto to Calgary in September. I asked him why the pre-boarding arrangement.

He said it was for travellers who are crippled or elderly; mothers with small children.

Also patients who are slowly or persons who are convalescing after surgery. If necessary, a wheelchair is supplied.

Danny suggested that persons needing special help should report at the check-in desk early, before other passengers are ready to board. This is a blessed service if you really need it. I recall that my elderly Aunt Emily flew from Florida to Ontario and would never have seen her sister again if she couldn't have flown.

I talked to the pilot of this tremendous bird, "Stretched BC8", which carries 188 passengers, Captain Frank E. Smith loved the life. But he said it was difficult to get a pilot's job.

"You have to want it so much you can taste it!" Yet the airline is looking for more pilots all the time.

The stewardess had been at her job for 11 years. She likes little time off to have her baby, and while she is away (two or three days at a time). Hubby helps with the baby care. This brings her baby's father much closer to the little one — which is all to the good. She loves her opportunity to travel. And the good salary that goes with it!

Dear Doris: I feel I must write a note of encouragement to the mother "Stumped".

Our eldest son had a reading disability diagnosed by teachers as "He won't try", and "He is a slow learner!". Finally, after three years of evening sessions which produced nothing but frustration and tears, an understanding teacher agreed with me that possibly the school psychologist could help Robbie.

One session discovered a very mixed-up little boy with bright disability called dyslexia. Robbie attended a special two-week course, resulting in a fantastic year and a half raise in his reading ability as well as a much abp pier little boy.

I am not suggesting that this other child has the same problem as my son! I would just like to encourage Stumped to keep trying and investigate every possible angle. I thank God for the wonderful people who helped our son. — Another Mother.

Dear Mother: I surely hope Stumped reads your message. My leaflet on Learning Disabilities (dyslexia being a medical term for an assortment of them) may have pointed her in some useful directions; but your own story may well be the encouragement she needs to keep trying.

Confidential to Just Plain Fat: Weight Watchers, an international organization, offers a reducing program that is a new way of life. No calorie-counting is done although the program amounts to 800 to 1000 calories per day. Members are never hungry — incredible! None of the crankiness or dizzy spells of previous low-calorie meals.

There are escape hatches for when our appetites run away with us, like an extra 12 ounces of tomato juice every four hours if needed. (A calorie count of tomato juice is just two-thirds to one-half of most fruit juices on the market.)

The low calorie items become foods the whole family enjoys. Weight Watchers hope to break the vicious chain of fatties in every generation.

Pearls Back In Fashion

NEW YORK (AP) — The pendulum of fashion has placed pearls once more around the necks of United States women and pearl producers couldn't be happier.

The benefits, however, are mainly esthetic, not economic. No pearls are produced in the U.S. since the painstaking, time-consuming cultured pearl growing process is an art only the Japanese have mastered.

The increasing demand for pearls, which has pushed U.S. sales for the first eight months of this year up 22 per cent, came at a time when the supply has been diminished by pollution in Japanese waters.

The combination of high demand and reduced supply has sent prices up some 30 per cent, so that a 14-inch strand of eight-millimetre pearls now averages about $165.

Why are pearls back in fashion?

Alan Macnow, a spokesman for the pearl industry, put it this way: "Fashions are going back to the classical look, away from miniskirts and bold colors. "Styles are getting simpler and subtler. Pearls go well with pastels, subdued colors, open necklines."

Ann Landers

Comprimises Aren't Necessary for Children

Dear Ann Landers: You demonstrated a surprising lack of understanding and imagination when you praised the mother who refused to give her child the strawberries of her choice. When the child asked, "Can I have your strawberries, Mom, because I love them so much," the mother replied, "I like strawberries, too, and I'm going to eat them myself."

You commended that mother for not caving in and you added, "Too many kids think they should have everything they see and ask for. Parents who cater to the whims of their children do them no favor."

A much better way of handling the situation, in my opinion, would have been for the mother to say, "I like strawberries, too, dear, but I will share mine with you and the next time we have strawberries you will share yours with me." Agreed?

The child would not only have been cleared but he would have learned the satisfaction that comes from sharing. The mother's approach, which you applauded, was a complete shutout.—Miss From Chicago

Dear Chic: It was indeed a complete shutout and that's what I liked about it. The notion that parents must always compromise to save a child's feelings is for the birds. There are many ways a child can learn to share, but this was an excellent opportunity to teach the child who "loved strawberries" that other people also love strawberries, and it's not fair to ask someone to settle for no strawberries so he can have twice as many.

Dear Ann Landers: My mother taught me it is bad manners to look into other people's windows. I've grown up believing this is an invasion of privacy and in poor taste.

Here's the problem: We have a large bay window in our living room and I love to let the sunshine stream in, so I seldom pull my draperies. A dear neighbor of ours (and I am sincere when I say she is a lovely, fine person) has a habit of looking into that bay window to see if it is OK before she rings the bell.

For the life of me I can't understand what she is looking for. She would be welcome any time, and I mean that. Her habitual peering into my window really undoes me. Occasionally I look out and see her there, shading her eyes with her hands, and I become upset. I'm sure she believes she is being considerate but I feel it is terribly rude. Please don't tell me to tell her. I can't. Any other suggestions?—Love My Neighbor In Miami

Dear Love: OK. Don't TELL her. ASK her. Sample language: "What are you looking for? Please don't feel that you need to check to see if it is all right to ring the bell. You are welcome any time."

Dear Ann Landers: I was watching a game show on TV recently and the following information was presented as fact:

(1) An egg faints before it is cracked.

(2) A healthy egg will get nervous if it is placed next to a cracked egg.

Can these statements be true? I have been unable to eat an egg ever since I heard these unsettling testimonials. Thanks a lot, Ann.—Barnyard Blues

Dear Barny: Those botanists who talk to flowers might have influenced a few eggs with some I've checked with my eggpercts (corny about that) and they say go ahead and eat eggs again. They have not been able to locate any nervous eggs in Iowa, Illinois, Minnesota or Nebraska.

FEMALE BOBBIES

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard Britain's famed police organization, has acknowledge women's rights. Feminine units are being integrated into the regular force, allowing 600 women to compete directly with men for jobs and promotions within the total force of 21,000.

Kathleen Nolan Wants More Actresses' Jobs

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — You say would think that the film and television industries, with their needs for actresses and female entertainers, offer equal opportunities for women.

Not so, declares actress Kathleen Nolan, who is organizing a campaign to give women greater participation in movies and TV.

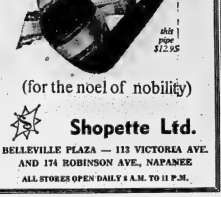
Miss Nolan, who first found fame in the TV series The Real McCoys, is chairwoman of the Screen Actors Guild women's conference committee. Her activities have gone beyond the interests of screen actresses to encompass other professions.

"Ours is a male-oriented business, just as ours is a male-oriented society," she says. "It's time that some of that was changed."

The actress wages eloquent when she discusses how women are treated on the movie and television screens.

"Fifty-one per cent of this country's population are women," she remarked. We have taken surveys of the amount of screen time that is dominated by men, both in theatres and on television. One survey showed a seven-to-one ratio in favor of men. Another was 10-to-one.

"This doesn't seem fair—or even realistic. In television, for example, it's women who are appealed to by advertising; they buy the products. They also exercise the greater control of what the family sees on television.



"Women like to see stories about women. Real stories not distortions of their lives."

Miss Nolan said that her committee has made in-depth studies of the role of women in the U.S., past and present.

"The results are revealing. There are, for example, more than 200,000 women lawyers in the United States. Yet in every movie and television series, a lawyer is always cast as a man.

* * *

"The role of women in the settling of the West is interesting, too. They weren't all dance-hall girls or hookers... A lot of them were very strong women; they had to be strong to survive as homes and face the rigors of the frontier."

Claude Ryan Witness In Irving Papers Case

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — There are advantages and disadvantages in group ownership of newspapers but Montreal editor Claude Ryan made it clear Monday he thinks the bad points outweigh the good ones when the public interest is considered.

Pooling of administrative, intellectual and financial resources can improve papers and help sales and promotion, he said. But concentration of ownership could lead also to a curtailment of news and ideas and to manipulation of public opinion.

Mr. Ryan, publisher and editor of Le Devoir, a French-language daily, was the 17th witness to testify at the monopoly trial of Irving Newspapers in New Brunswick Supreme Court. The trial began Oct. 17 in Fredericton.

There are dangers in Irving ownership of English-language dailies in this province, Mr. Ryan said, and there are dangers in control of Quebec dailies by Paul C. Desmarais and Power Corp. interests. The involvement of such owners in fields other than publishing could be reflected in their newspapers.

Owners and publishers invariably appointed senior colleagues of like minds and would be stupid to do otherwise, Mr. Ryan had done the same at Le Devoir.

"Even if the owner should not intervene directly his staff would inevitably work so as not to displease him. It is not a healthy situation. . . . The most likely consequence is a curtailment of liberty."

If a city is too small for more than one daily paper to survive that situation has to be accepted, he said. But single ownership extended to an entire province "is an extension that raises very serious difficulties in the presentation of fact and opinion, which is a very essential part of democratic debate."

Mr. Ryan said he has not made a professional study of New Brunswick's six daily papers, five of which are owned by Irving interests. However, the situation was of national concern and he was familiar with it.

Helicopter Missing

WINNIPEG (CP) — Two military and two civilian aircraft searched without success Monday for four persons aboard a float-equipped helicopter reported missing Friday on a 400-mile flight from the northern Manitoba community of Thompton to Winnipeg.

The men were picking up ballot boxes from the Oct. 30 federal election in remote areas of Churchill riding, said returning officer N. R. Krueger. One ballot box had been picked up before the helicopter was reported missing.

A spokesman in Winnipeg said five military, one RCMP and perhaps two civilian aircraft will start a more thorough search today of the helicopter's planned flight route.

Meanwhile, a military jet flew a second electronic search over the area Monday night, hoping to pick up the helicopter's position indicator.

Children Forced To Go on Welfare

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Association of Children's Aid Societies says 18-year-old high school students are being forced to go on welfare because Ontario's welfare director will not let them stay in the care of the societies.

The association made the complaint in a brief to Rene Brunelle, community and social services minister. The brief cited the example of a Grade 13 student who attempted suicide after applying for welfare. The brief said she felt rejected.

Betty Graham, provincial welfare director, said Monday night the girl's case was among a number reviewed and she is back in the care of the society.

Miss Graham said those over 18 were transferred to receive general welfare assistance because they were "eligible for that assistance."

The brief said "many children in care have come from families for whom the welfare system is a way of life."

Miss Graham said her department has dealt with more than 700 cases, and of these 175 were terminated at the request of the local society. She said about 250 to 275 cases have been approved for care under local societies and 35 or 40 cases are being reconsidered.

The association asked Mr. Brunelle to change regulations which require the child welfare director to approve CAS assistance after Crown wardship has ended at 18.

The association said the General Welfare Assistance Act authorizes payment of $115 a month to 18-year-olds, a comparable rate to that paid CAS homes. Welfare, unlike CAS care, does not provide allowances for miscellaneous expenditures, it said.

Lie Detector Test Accepted by Court

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian legal history was made Monday with the courtroom admission as evidence of the results of a polygraph—lie detector—test.

It came about at the request of the defence in the non-capital murder trial of Forrest Phillion, charged in the stabbing death five years ago of city fireman Leopold Roy.

The landmark decision to permit the test as evidence was made by Madam Justice Mabel Van Camp.

Although Madam Justice Van Camp gave no reason for her decision, defence counsel Arthur Cogan and Dr. Julio Arboleda, who administered the test, did.

Dr. Arboleda, psychiatrist at Royal Ottawa Hospital who also administered sodium amytal—the so-called truth serum—to Phillion, said it was about the best means of determining the truth.

Dr. Arboleda said that Mr. Phillion confessed the murder to police Jan. 11, the polygraph test indicated he had lied.

One-man Force Resigns, OPP Police Brighton

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

BRIGHTON — Ontario Provincial Police here have officially taken over policing duties of this village of 3,650, following resignation of the sole remaining member of its police force, Sergeant Kenneth Brown, at 61 a veteran of 42 years with the village constabulary.

Sgt. Brown, who has been on call almost 24 hours a day for the past seven months, added on request by the 26-man provincial police detachment, is the sixth man to leave the force since 1969. His constable resigned earlier this year, to seek a position on another police force.

Village Reeve Norman Roberts told The Intelligencer in an interview last evening, the matter of either hiring new village police, or accepting the services of the OPP, now rests entirely with the Ontario Police Commission.

He said several applications for the position of constable, to raise the force's manpower to its designated nine men, have been received over the past weeks, but no selection had been made. All applications, due by Oct. 11, were forwarded to the police commission in Toronto.

The resignation of Sgt. Brown, delivered verbally to Reeve Roberts Oct. 31, Hallowe'en night, and later presented in writing, followed several disturbances on the main streets of the village that night by bands of local youth. At one point, Sgt. Brown reported, several Molotov cocktails were thrown in vacant areas.

Provincial police officers retained most of the youths to the Brighton Fire Hall, turning them over to parents.

Sgt. Brown said the job of policing Brighton alone is an impossible one. Although he appreciated the help of the OPP, he felt the village's own force should have been increased immediately to at least its full complement of two. He had been recommending more men than that. The village of Deseronto, 40 miles east of here, has three policemen for 1,875 population, plus one full-time radio man.

Reeve Roberts indicated one of the problems that faced the town when hiring new men, was their tendency to leave as soon as they completed police college training and a few months on the beat.

While reluctant to comment on the village police situation, the reeve did acknowledge that he had found "difficult" for Sg.. Brown, whom he said had "resigned of his own free will".

He readily admitted that the village has been supplemented by the presence of the OPP and has lauded the detachment for regular assistance, hoping it would eventually take over from the village force. Reeve Roberts said Sgt. Brown was informed that the village was attempting to bring in the provincial police, before he left for his three-week vacation this summer.

During the summer, Brighton's population more than doubles with influx of tourists.

According to the reeve, the additional five men necessary to patrol the town would cost close to $50,000 when based on figures of $10,000 a year for the men and an additional cruiser. Under arrangements such as this, a town or village policed by OPP, pays the province a portion of the cost.

At the time of his resignation, Sgt. Brown's salary was slightly more than $7,000. $3,000 more than when he joined the force in May of 1966, and about $600 more than the wage listed in tenders called for constable this year.

When asked to comment on the hours kept by village police, Reeve Roberts said the duties "require a policeman to give his fullest for 40 hours of the week," but added he felt one or two calls a day was the average the force could expect beyond normal patrols and checks. "It was not that much work, and couldn't have been that much strain," he said.

But when questioned in a telephone interview, one of Brighton's former police constables had a different story.

The officer, who requested he remain unidentified, said when he worked of the two-man force, each was required to put in 84 hours a week on call. This figure comes from multiplying seven days by 24 hours, split into two 12-hour on-call shifts.

The wives of both men, the former village constable said, were paid $25 a month to man the telephone and two-way radio communications between home and the village's single, new cruiser.

"Sometimes we'd work together from 4 p.m. Friday, straight through to 8 a.m. Monday," he said, adding the OPP were called in when available. However, because of their far-reaching duties, provincial officers were not always able to come.

The ex-village policeman said he quit because of pressures, not the least of which occurred during the summer of 1971, when Brighton was shaken by two drug-oriented teenage suicides and the hurling of a woman's body in the cemetery crypt. At that time, he said, 100 to 120 hours a week, with no overtime, was the rule for each man, rather than the exception.

Although he said more men could have eased the burden, the ex-village constable said he was treated fairly by council. He felt they were restricted in the amount of wages they could pay for police, and this was part of the problem.

The facilities for the Brighton police are Spartan. The new cruiser is supplemented with a radio, now in for repairs; the office is an almost deserted town hall near the municipal offices, contains desk and chairs, filing cabinets, a small electric heater, no prisoner cells or washroom facilities, a Polaroid camera for identification work, and a hand-made fingerprinting kit. A good supply of uniforms, complete with belts, revolvers and handcuffs is available, but there is no shotgun, the larger weapon should the need arise.

Neither Reeve Roberts nor Mr. Brown wanted to delve into further details concerning the force or the sergeant's resignation, but the former military policeman and Dellwood Aircraft security officer did indicate his feeling of frustration without an assistant to help him.

"If they'd had some more men on our force, we could have cleared them back properly," Mr. Brown said of the Hallowe'en occurrence, an annual problem in Brighton. Reeve Roberts said in the interview, first two provincial cruisers, then four, were called in to quell the street disturbance.

With one month's severance pay in his pocket, a welcome addition at this time, Mr. Brown is now seeking a new position. Whether police or another kind of work he can't decide, although he readily admits at his age it will be difficult. His wife works, but they have just recently purchased a new home north of the village.

Reeve Roberts says he will readily "recommend him for a constable's job," agreeing that "jobs at his age are hard to get."

"I can't be any more fair to him," he concluded.

Meanwhile, as villagers wait the decision of the police commission, some time next week in Brighton, according to the Reeve, the police offices remain locked. A sign posted overhead instructs callers to call the OPP office. The telephone rings, unanswered.

Truckers' Fallout Said Road Hazard

WALLBRIDGE (Staff) — Sidney roads superintendent Charles Fair asked for Sidney council's help to check Aikens Road from becoming unsafe for vehicles.

Potholes are not so much the concern as safety on the roadway that the road forementioned believes are falling off trucklo.ds of building and repairing operations bring taken to the garbage dump.

"We are picking up nails 'til we can't keep tires on the (township) trucks," said Fair. He related several incidents in which township vehicles have had flat tires along the lower portion of Aikens Road.

"It is going on all the time," he said.

Councillor Glean Meyers told council last night one truck owner said him he has had 13 flat tires on Aikens Road in a short period of time.

Fellow councilman Gordon Willman stated that the Ontario Provincial Police stop trucks on Highway 2 and make them unload loads of sand.

"And this is worse than getting sand in your face too," commented Meyers.

Charles Fair predicted that if the OPP station cars on Aikens Road "they can get a book full" of offenders.

The council decided to consult the provincial police to see if action can be taken to save the lives of vehicles travelling the road.

Conflict of Interest Charge Renewed

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Conflict of interest charges brought against Belleville Mayor J. Russell Scott last spring and repeated in July with a request for a judicial inquiry, were renewed in city council Monday by Alderman Donald M. Sautter.

But as was the case in July, the charges failed to prompt any reply from the mayor.

Ald. Sautter's renewed charges of municipal wrongdoing at the July council by Scott were made in reply to a newspaper statement by the mayor in October, claiming that the charges were "unfounded, untrue and ungrounded" and that the purpose behind the charges had been dirty politics for self gain.

In the newspaper statement Mayor Scott said the unproven charges must be followed by the resignations of Alderman Soucter and Alderman Robin Jeffrey, who had seconded the motion for a judicial inquiry.

Monday, Alderman Soutter said all he had asked was an impartial hearing, but this had been voted down by council.

The alderman took Mayor Scott to task for his newspaper statement that the conflict of interest charges were dirty politics for self gain.

"Any type of politics for self gain is not in the interests of this community," he asserted.

Ald. Soutter said he had nothing to gain through the charges against the mayor and might not have even bothered to answer if it hadn't been for the assertion of dirty politics.

The basis of Ald. Soutter's conflict of interest charge last spring was Mayor Scott's part ownership of Sanctuary Developments in North Belleville, over which he claimed permission for a sanitary sewer easement was delayed until construction of a storm sewer to drain his property was assured.

He said that the judge in a Thunder Bay conflict of interest case had ruled that anyone with a contract with the municipality was ineligible to hold public office.

The alderman disputed the mayor's newspaper statement claim that he had always disclosed property interest in council discussions.

City hall records showed this not to be true, he said, citing an instance in a committee of council.

In the same, he said, there may not have been a legal impropriety but asserted there was a moral and ethical requirement for a public official.

A public official should not be a land developer for his own municipality, declared the alderman.

Ald. Soutter prefaced his renewal charges of conflict of interest on the part of Mayor Scott with the announcement that because of a change in job which frequently would take him out of the city, he would not be running for reelection in next month's municipal vote.

Soutter Leaves Paper For Queen's Park Post

Managing editor of The Intelligencer for the past six years and city alderman for the past three, Donald M. Soutter has resigned his position with the newspaper to accept a provincial government appointment.

Mr. Soutter has been named communications consultant to the Ontario Ministry of Health to work with senior officials of the department. He will not, seek re-election to council.

A second aspect of the position will be to assist in the reorganization of health services to allow for decisions on health service priorities to be made at the municipal level.

Toward this end, Mr. Soutter will assist in setting up district health councils throughout the province which would make decisions on health service requirements at the local level rather than at Queen's Park.

In his new position as communications consultant Mr. Soutter will work out of Queen's Park but his duties will entail considerable travelling about the province.

He will, however, continue to live in Belleville.

After coming to Belleville Mr. Soutter took an active interest in community and civic affairs.

Following his election to council, he was named to the city recreation - arena committee on which he served as chairman for two years, and also was a member of the parks board.

This year he was named council representative to the Belleville General Hospital Board of Governors, to the county health unit board and to the Belleville Industrial Commission.

Also, last year, Mr. Soutter was appointed to the Board of Governors of Loyalist College.

In September Mr. Soutter was one of three Belleville men to seek the federal nomination as Progressive Conservative candidate for the Hastings riding.

Three weeks ago Mr. Soutter was named editor in chief of The Intelligencer, but today, he made known his new government position, said it was a challenge he felt he should accept.

Bowing Out

Alderman Donald M. Soutter, right, is congratulated by J. R. Scott's reputation of conflict of interest charges in city council earlier this year. At Monday's council meeting Mr. Soutter also announced he would not be seeking reelection.

Access Road Question Divides Picton Council

PICTON (Staff) — Picton mayor Margaret Ackerman last night blasted town council's decision against construction of an access road in a subdivision where residents complain of "a sea of mud."

"I must say I am very disappointed at this town council not to put a road where we need it," the mayor told a town council mtg. she demanded after the motion to build the road was lost three votes to two in a tie vote with two councillors absent.

Controversy over the lack of a road was prompted by a letter from Harry Vanden owner of a corner lot on Downes Avenue and Simeon Street in the subdivision.

Mr. Varney, in his letter to council, stated, "every time it rains Downes Avenue with no proper access to it. During the winter of 1972 I was deprived of all road clearing privileges which the others should have in this community."

The irate taxpayer claimed he had no access to a small section of road between his lot and driveway behind his house and said. "For weeks on end this small stretch of road was a sea of mud."

Mr. Varney's complaints were backed by councillor Ross Cronkwright who said on on-site inspection of the property last night revealed "a swimming pool" in front of the residence.

Mayor Ackerman told councillors a situation had been reached in the sub-division "which has to be clarified tonight."

She insisted action must be taken and added council had been "negligent" in letting this problem arise.

In the original plan for the subdivision, streets were supposed to have been laid.

She said the land should have been incorporated under the subdivision bylaw requiring streets to be laid before houses are built.

Real estate developer of the subdivision is William Patrick of Picton.

Mr. Pannell in close contact with the town's public works committee, has been required to follow certain decisions reported by the engineer David McIntosh.

The road in question originally agreed to build the subdivision could not be classified as far as originally planned because of the possibility of endangering a hydro installation which could be moved at a cost of approximately $5,000.

Councillor Ross Crowbright said he did not understand why the town's ratepayers should build a road in the subdivision and suggested the real responsibility for its construction was "lost in the shuffle."

Picton reeve Albert Piroth warned construction of the road would set a "dangerous precedent" and added the problem in question in the subdivision lies partly in Hallowell township.

Reeve Piroth added "a piece of paper says the builder is not at fault" but said the planning committee had held few meetings this year, making the annexation date questionable.

Councillor Harry Abram argued a road should be built and noted that the town engineer had suggested a gravel road might cost $2,000.

Part of the opposition has been chosen as a park area and when the question of how youngsters could reach this playground area was raised, the vote.

Mayor Ackerman said this would be a time - consuming process since hard road cannot be laid at this time of year.

A second motion calling for town construction of a new road was lost in a recorded vote held a second time when one councillor's vote was accidentally unrecorded.

In favor were councillors Bessie Ward, deputy - reeve James Bird and mayor Ackerman. Reeve Piroth and councillors Harry Abram and Corey Walraven opposed the motion while councillors Harold McLaughlin and Ross Cronkwright abstained from voting.

Sewart Kerr of Simeon Street asserted, "This is ridiculous. I have never seen a council like this in my life with so little concern for small children. You should be ashamed of yourselves."

Council then defeated a motion by reeve Piroth requiring Mr. Pannell to restore the road to the condition in which he had found it before construction.

OMB to Call Sewer Hearing

TWEED (Special) — An other Ontario Municipal Board hearing will be held to deal with changes in the sewer project planned for Tweed.

Oliver Lloyd, head of the consulting firm Oliver Lloyd and Associates, told village council members changes in the installation route of the force main would necessitate a second hearing.

OHC Will Request Property Rezoning

The Ontario Housing Corporation will seek rezoning for the Bellecroft Manor property on Wellington Crescent on which it plans to construct 80 senior citizen housing units.

The request will be fo re-zoning the parking requirements for the complex which, under the existing bylaw, calls for one-and a quarter spaces per housing unit.

This was learned yesterday at city council through Marcia Green, research analyst of OHC, who told council that her organization wished to wait until the local situation crystallized before going ahead with a survey for more senior citizen housing as requested by council.

In any case, she said OHC would be unable to conduct the survey for another six months.

Mayor J. Russell Scott said the reason for the request for the survey was that there was a long waiting list for senior citizens apartments and, normally it was three years or more between the time of the survey, and completion of construction.

Asked about the status of the 160 new units now approved for construction in Belleville — 80 on the Albert College manor property and, 80 on Bridge Street opposite the fairgrounds — the OHC representative said there was a slight holdup involving parking requirements and that there would be an application for rezoning.

The feeling is that the 1.25 parking spaces normally required, for housing development should not apply to senior citizens as only a small percentage of such residents have cars.

Perfect Setting for Fall Frolic

While the "older kids" attended school, these three regarded the leaf pile as too much fun to pass up on their return from the store with potato chips and candy. From left to right are Valerie Cornish, Sandra Jean Dafoe and her sister Shelly Louise. The moment's madness didn't pay off for the three children who, after their fun, were asked to re-pile the leaves by the homeowner who the day before "had developed blisters," in her garden cleanup chore.

Campbell, Eagleson Ponder NHL Future

MONTREAL (CP) — The Gazette says Clarence Campbell, National Hockey League president, and Alan Eagleson, head of the NHL Players' Association, will meet in Detroit today to decide on the league's international hockey policy.

The newspaper says the two men will take their widely-divergent viewpoints to the owners of the 16 NHL teams on what should be done about Russia's proposal for a four-game exhibition series in January.

Campbell is quoted by the newspaper as saying the series should be played because "whether or not it is to our advantage, the Russians are here to stay."

Although he is going to the meeting with "an open mind," Eagleson does not want the series played if it involves the league's four strongest teams, Montreal Canadiens, New York Rangers, Boston Bruins and Chicago Black Hawks, the paper said.

"If they (the Russians) beat them, they can go home and say 'we're the world's best,' Eagleson is quoted as saying, adding he might be agreeable to having the Russians play four of the league's weakest teams.

"If they beat Oakland (California Golden Seals) who cares," he said.

The newspaper also quotes Sam Pollock, Montreal general manager, as saying Canadian teams would not be involved.

Campbell also said the NHL has been hurt by adverse reaction in North America to Team Canada's conduct and that a January series under direct NHL control in co-operation with the players' association, could vindicate the league's reputation.

Eagleson said he has talked with some players, including Phil Esposito, the Bruins star centre, and the Canadiens' Yvan Cournoyer, who say they are not interested in another series with the Russians.

The emotional strain of such a series, Eagleson said, was such that maybe "a series of this kind should be played once every four years or so."

"Maybe not that far apart, but not every year," Eagleson said.

Campbell said that "we can't pretend the Russians don't exist," and that the league must respond to the tremendous appeal the Russians have with the public on this continent.

Whalers Wallop Winnipeg Jets

BOSTON (AP) — Tom Webster scored three goals and linemate Larry Pleau chipped in a fourth as New England Whalers defeated Winnipeg Jets 6-2 Monday night and moved into second place in the World Hockey Association's Eastern Division.

Pleau and Webster got the Whalers off to a 2-1 first-period lead with scores unassisted around a Winnipeg goal by Milt Black.

After a scoreless second period, New England defenceman Ted Green took a pass from Tommy Williams, went in alone and beat Jets' goalie Ernie Wakely over his left shoulder.

Wally Boyer cut the lead to a single goal with an unassisted marker three minutes later, but then Williams and Webster tallied to clinch the victory.

Pleau, Webster and Terry Caffery, the third member of the Whalers' highest scoring line, also picked up five assists. The line has 50 scoring points. Pleau has 10 goals and Webster eight.

The victory gave New England 16 points, one more than Quebec Nordiques and one behind first-place Cleveland in the Eastern race.

League superstar who jumped to Winnipeg Jets of the rival World Hockey Association, says he's optimistic of victory in the court decision expected today in his contract dispute with the NHL.

But even if the court rules against him, Hull said, "I think I've played my last game with the Black Hawks," his former NHL team.

Hull said he understood lawyers in the case had been summoned to Philadelphia for a decision in the case.

"I can't see it won't go in our favor because this organization (the WHA) benefits so many people," Hull said.

"We were told there would probably be a delay.

"But they're taking enough time to study it that we're optimistic. I hope to be in uniform Wednesday night."

Hull has been prohibited by the courts from working out until his case is resolved.

Earlier, a decision had been expected in the case Monday, and Hull was in Boston hoping to play when the Jets met New England Whalers. The Jets are scheduled to play Quebec Nordiques Wednesday.

Los Angeles Scourges NHL Scoring List

MONTREAL (CP) — Los Angeles Kings, spearheaded by forwards Ralph Backstrom, Butch Goring and Bob Berry, have become the scourge of the National Hockey League's West Division.

The Kings, who lost five of their first six games, have come to life and have won their last seven games in a row. That is the longest winning streak enjoyed by a post-1967 expansion club.

The previous record for an expansion club was set last season when Minnesota North Stars won six in a row.

The Kings will try to stretch their string to eight tonight when they visit the Blues in St. Louis in the only NHL game scheduled.

During their seven wins the Kings have bombed enemy netminders for 34 goals, while giving up only nine, a reversal of form from their previous seasons.

Los Angeles now lead the West Division standings with 16 points, two more than Philadelphia Flyers and Chicago Black Hawks. The Kings also have moved into sixth place in the goaltending race from 11th spot one week ago.

Goring and Backstrom led all NHL scorers last week collecting 10 points each. Goring's total included six goals—two three goal games—and four assists, while Backstrom had four goals and six assists. Berry had five points, including his 11th goal and leads the Kings in that department.

Meanwhile, Gilbert Perreault of Buffalo Sabres picked up one goal and three assists to preserve his lead in the individual scoring race. He now has 25 points, including a league-leading 18 assists.

Red Gilbert of New York Rangers has jumped into a second place tie with left winger John Bucyk of Boston Bruins. Both have 22 points, one more than Jacques Lemaire of Montreal Canadiens. Backstrom and Rene Robert of Buffalo.

Goring is seventh with 20 points followed by Stan Mikita of Chicago with 19.

Goalie Ken Dryden of Montreal continues to provide Montreal with consistent goaltend-

Peewee Team Honored

Belleville Conductors and Brakemen Peewee hardball team were honored at an awards banquet Monday night at the Belleville Yardmen Beneath Pool Room. Trophies were presented to each of the Pee Wees.

The young hardballers played a total of 27 league and tournament games over the season, winning 22, and losing only five.

The Pee Wee's won the General Foods Kool - Aid Pee Wee tournament in Cobourg, earning an expense-paid trip to Montreal. The Eastern Ontario Baseball Association's championship went to the Belleville Conductors and Brakemen team, along with the Northern Division championship. East York proved to be the only team that stopped them from going for the All Ontario championship.

Montreal in Need of Help To Stage Summer Olympics

MONTREAL (CP) — Mayor Jean Drapeau said Monday that the city will need the help of both the federal and provincial governments in plans to finance the 1976 Olympic games.

Speaking at a reception honoring International Olympics Committee president Lord Killanin, Mayor Drapeau said that both Quebec and Ottawa "will have to modify some acts so financing can be made available for some aspects of the Olympics."

He did not specify which acts would have to be modified but later said that a Quebec law will have to be amended to allow an Olympics lottery.

He said the March Games earlier this summer "got the audacious support of higher governments to get the money where it was available on a voluntary basis.

"And that is exactly what we intend to do here in Montreal," he added.

It appeared to be a contradiction of earlier statements by Mr. Drapeau that he would not need extra help from the other two levels of government, although funds should be available through existing legislation.

"We are out to prove that Olympism is available to poor cities as well as rich cities," the mayor said.

Mayor Drapeau made no mention of estimates that cost of the Munich Games run well over $700 million, but he and Lord Killanin both stressed that the Games three were self-financing.

Complete estimates for the Montreal Games have not yet been released but the mayor has said they will cost about $120 million. He did not specify if this figure was for the sports installations or for the organization of both.

Monday Mayor Drapeau congratulated the mayor of Munich not only because he was able to secure federal government aid but also because "the Games were self-financing."

"And our aim in 1976 is to make the Games completely self-financing," Mr. Drapeau said.

He said many important businessmen had already lent their support to the Games and he hoped that the "spiritual" value" of the Olympics would take precedence over the financial aspect.

"For too many Olympics, money has been stressed too much," he said. "It is time to bring back the real truth of the Olympics."

He said it is commendable if Munich has accounted for a good number of public benefits, including public housing and transportation, within the cost of the Games.

His own original plans called for the same kind of move after the Montreal Games have ended and he has indicated that he can finance these projects through provincial and federal urban renewal programs.

Lord Killanin, in a speech, said money should not be wasted in planning the Games, but noted that frequently, those cities to whom the Games are given, are able to develop more rapidly."

"I am thinking in terms of metros, subways, railways, housing, sporting facilities and many other by - products of an Olympic Games.

"I think perhaps with the film area which are frequently mentioned for the cost of Munich, a false picture is represented," he said. "I mean the civic benefits of the Games and the housing projects are often forgotten by those criticizing the cost of the Olympics."

The IOC head, here on a four-day visit which ends today, said he had been impressed by the organizing committee's efforts to make maximum use of existing facilities "and at the same time erecting buildings and sports areas which will not be white elephants and unused in the future."

Later, speaking on the sticky topic of Olympics and amateurism, Lord Killanin said there was no way the Games will ever become open to both professionals and amateurs.

"What is important, is that the individual amateur should not be forced, by national pride or political pressures, to have to sign any declaration which is countersigned by a national associations, all three knowing they are hypocrites.

"Hypocrisy is alien to Olympic ideals."

He said the Olympics eligibility code is being studied in relationship to its application at Sapporo, Japan, and Munich, in the winter and summer Games earlier this year.

Further discussions will take place with the international sports federations, who in some cases, have rules even more strict than the IOC," he said.

Doctors, Reporters Play Same Tune

The doctors and reporters should be at least suspected of collusion in last night's Gas House hockey games at Memorial Arena. Both the Hospital and The Intelligencer walloped their opponents. Constellation failing to Hospital 11-2, and Rosebush Parts expiring to Intell, 12-1.

Constellation's Terry Pope and Bob Tomaso managed to push two goals into Hospital's net, but Faulkner, Knight, Laughlin, Murphy, and Chambers each knocked two goals into the netting for the doctors. Gillis tallied the other Hospital score.

Dave Murray of Rosebush was the only goal scorer for Rosebush last night, while Larry Ettis and Fred Sickle each walked away from the Memorial Arena with a hat trick under their belts. Intell's other goals came from B | l | Janitsch, Paul Ruttan, Steve Ling, Dennis Baragar, Jim McGuire, and Bruce Symons.

In other Gas House action Monday, Jim's Pizza defeated Wilson 4-1, with Jim's goals coming from Allan Ray and Ralph Boomhower with two apiece. Wilson's lone tally came from Ron Garvin.

BCI Seniors Fall to Courtice

In COSSA soccer semi-final play Saturday, the Bay of Quinte champions BCI seniors were defeated by Courtice Secondary 3-1. BCI, who regained the Bay of Quinte Senior Soccer Trophy with a 4-2 win over Trenton, fell to the Courtice team despite fine defensive play by Peter van Vliet, Gary Donovan, and Ken Downey. Charlie Nesterowski scored the only BCI goal for the Collegians.

Despite Saturday's loss, BCI had a good season, winning nine games with 51 goals for and 17 against.

THE MERCURY CHALLENGE: Cold-Start Test.

Mercs starts instantly 13 out of 14 days.
For 14 winter days, we cold-tested our Mercury Hurricane for instant starting. We put it in the bitter Wisconsin cold ... in temperatures down to 21 below ... and we tried to start it each morning. We wanted to find out how dependable that Mercury starting system really was.
Thirteen of those 14 days, our Hurricane fired on the first pull. We tested other stock too, but none of them could match Merc. In fact, none of them even came close.
Mercury believes dependable starting is important. That's why we give you hot Thunderbolt ignition on both Hurricanes for fast, sure starts—even in the most severe cold. Compare all the '73 Mercs ... Hurricane, Montclair, Marquis, Cougar, Mark I, ...640 MAX ... for total toughness and total performance. See your Mercury dealer today.

Johnny Unitas On Sidelines

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Johnny Unitas, professional football's Mr. Quarterback, a kicked his famous No. 19 jersey into a corner and admitted his love affair with Baltimore Colts was over.

"There's no use in staying around here," he said, "not the way they're treating me.

"There's nothing I can do about it. It was their decision not to play me anymore."

Baltimore had just cracked a four-game losing streak, handing New England Patriots a fifth straight defeat, 24-17, in a Monday night's National Football League game.

But, Johnny wasn't celebrating.

Young quarterback Marty Domres, given the job Unitas owned for 16 years, hit 10 of 18 passes against New England for only 89 yards. One of his shots was a 17-yarder for a touchdown to tight end Tom Mitchell.

Joe Thomas, new general manager of the Colts, was the man who made the decision to bench Unitas and look ahead with the 25-year-old Domres.

"You can't keep going with a quarterback who'll be 40 years old next May," said Thomas, builder of NFL powerhouses as personnel chief at Minnesota and Miami.

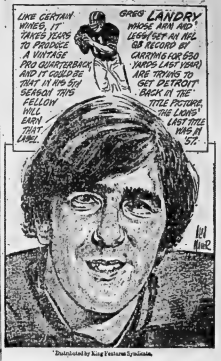
John Sandusky, the longtime Colt assistant coach who became the field boss when Thomas fired Don McCafferty a month ago, was smiling over his first victory.

"It wasn't pretty, but it was a win," he said. "It's my first and I'm proud of it."

The Colts now are 2-6, tied with the Pats for third in the American Conference East.

Sandusky wondered for awhile if he would survive the "beer bottle touchdown."

In the second quarter, with Baltimore ahead 7-3, New England fans were booing over an interference call and another penalty for toughing the passer. The flags put the Colts on the Pats' four.



Domres flipped back to Don Nottingham and the chunky runner bounced untouched into the end zone. But it wasn't a touchdown. Some Patriot fan had saved a score with his beer bottle.

One official said he had called timeout amid all the noise after spotting the bottle lying in the end zone.

Baltimore fell behind on a 76-yard field goal by Charlie Gogolak, but all-purpose player Sam Havrilak put the Colts ahead to stay on a dazzling run.

Havrilak lined up as a wide receiver. Running back Don McCauley took a handoff from Domres and then handed to Havrilak on a reverse. New England was headin[illegible] wrong way and a crushing block by Jerry Garvin[illegible] left Havrilak all the five allowed Sam to walk in on a 25-yard play.

Cahill Meets 'Maker' This Week

TORONTO (CP) — Leo Cahill, coach, and John Bassett, owner, are expected to meet this week to decide Cahill's future with Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Football Conference.

The Argos, beaten 28-16 by Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the final game of the 1972 season, finished out of the playoffs with a 3-11 mark.

Germans Find Hockey Distractions

TORONTO (CP) — "At home, you concentrate on the game. Overseas, you concentrate more on girls, drink and food."

This assessment of Canadian hockey behavior was made Monday by Dr. Gunther Sabetzki, vice - president of the German Hockey Association.

Sabetzki is leading the West German national team on a four-game tour of Ontario. They lost 6-3 to Orillia Terriers here Sunday night.

The tour continues tonight in Galt, moving to Kingston Wednesday and ending up with a game in Barrie Friday. The German players fly home Sunday.

Speaking of the game against Orillia, Sabetzki said that "there was less body-checking than you are used to in Canada—about the same amount as we are used to at home."

"Your team was more fair than the ones you send overseas. At home you concentrate on the game. Overseas, you concentrate more on girls, drink and food."

Asked whether he was having any disciplinary problems with his own players on this tour, Sabetzki said:

"Our discipline and control overseas is much tighter than yours."

He said his players, representing five clubs in West Germany and many of them on their first international tour, found "your team very good."

"They shoot harder than ours. We are not accustomed to shooting that hard."

He said they had expected heavy slapshots, but "your short-shoots (wrist shots) were harder than we expected."

"While the Russians and the Czechs are working on passes, going in close, you shoot from the blueline, from the redline, very hard and right on the goal."

For the German team, "the weakness lies in our goalies."

He said West Germany had asked the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association for a chance to send German goalies to Canada to learn Canadian techniques, but that the proposal had fallen through.

"It is difficult for our amateurs to be away from their schooling or their job a long enough."

Sabetzki said his players are used to the two-referee system, but "three men is better—but we haven't enough officials".

The German hockey official said it was he who arranged—at the request of Canada and the Soviet Union—to have Josef Kompalla and Franz Baader assigned to referee some of the Canada-Russia hockey series.

He said there was "nothing in the German press" about the subsequent upheaval during which Canadian coaches overseas refused to continue with the referees from West Germany. "We don't write that— it doesn't help the game."

"I can't understand," he said. "It was the wish of Russia and your wish to have German referees.

"Why shoot them with the puck in the legs when they don't whistle the way you want them to whistle?

"Also, why do you throw the bones of chickens into the faces of them?"

Hospital Strike Ban Is Under Fire

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario laws prohibiting strike action by hospital employees came under fire Monday as the Ontario Federation of Labor (OFL) annual convention approved a general statement in labor relations and working standards.

The statement, passed by more than 1,000 delegates, said all workers should be given the option to strike as a final resort in labor disputes.

Hospital employees in Ontario are subject to compulsory arbitration, a process that labor delegates said has resulted in more strikes in Ontario hospitals.

The OFL statement also said that all who work should have the right to join unions and that it is the right of all to withdraw labor under conditions they believe to be intolerable.

Employers should be abolished and there should be no restrictions on picketing. Employers should be made to give six months notice in cases of mass layoffs, terminations of work and shutdowns, the OFL said.

Shirley Carr, a vice-president of the Canadian Unions of Public Employees (CUPE) told the convention that the OFL must oppose compulsory arbitration. CUPE represents about 18,000 workers in hospitals and homes for the aged in Ontario.

Other CUPE spokesmen predicted that unless there was a change in the ban on strikes for hospital workers, there would be more serious labor difficulties in Ontario.

They said pay rates for hospital workers have dropped behind those in comparable work in the municipal field since the strike ban came into effect.

The statement passed by the delegates maintained that the adversary system—pitting opposing interest groups against each other—is essential to a democratic society.

The OFL said remedies to industrial problems lie in more effective collective bargaining and disputes settlement procedures and-in skilled mediation services.

The statement also maintained that labor is being made the sole scapegoat for economic failures of government.

"This is being done to promote a wage freeze, to absolve those who are to blame for unemployment and to divert the attention of the public from the corporate ripoff—the unjust and outdated tax system which is full of loopholes to benefit corporations."

China Is Still Short of Doctors

TORONTO (CP) — Despite rapidly expanding training facilities, China still suffers from a shortage of doctors, Dr. Fu Yi-ch'eng, deputy secretary-general of the Chinese Medical Association, said Monday.

Dr. Fu, deputy leader of a 15-member Chinese medical delegation to Canada, told a news conference the 70 to 80 per cent of the population living in the countryside rarely see a qualified physician.

These people are served by "barefoot doctors," peasants who receive enough training to deal with common ailments and then return to the fields. Dr. Fu said they represent a "preliminary solution" to the medical care problem.

He said about 250,000 doctors graduated in the first 15 years of China's Communist government compared with 9,000 in the 50 years preceding its takeover in 1949.

Efforts were being made to speed the production of graduates by shortening undergraduate courses to three or four years, but the program was experimental and still was being evaluated.

Dr. Fu said the best elements of traditional Chinese medicine are being integrated with Western methods. Practitioners of both disciplines work side by side and patients may receive both kinds of treatment.

Acupuncture, the ancient practice of planting needles in various parts of the body, had proved effective in treating many types of disease and research in the treatment was continuing.

He said venereal disease has virtually been eradicated in China by wiping out its sources.

Shortly after the present government came to power, it closed all houses of prostitution, gave medical treatment to the occupants and put them to work in other occupations.

The delegation, which arrived in Toronto from Edmonton Saturday, visits hospital and medical facilities in Toronto and London, Ont., today and will spend the following three days in Montreal.

After another three days in Ottawa, the delegates leave for Paris next Monday.

Encouragement Urged For North Investors

TORONTO (CP) — Stuart Hodgson, commissioner of the Northwest Territories, said Monday companies which have invested millions of dollars in exploration of the North "should be encouraged instead of slighted and in some cases condemned."

Mr. Hodgson told a Canadian Club meeting that he gets impatient with those who oppose pipeline construction in the North. He said pipeline projects worth $70 billion to $75 billion and over-all development worth between $30 billion and $40 billion are at stake.

He criticized those who say pipeline construction should not proceed until the matter is thoroughly researched. "Research and development must go hand in hand," he said.

Mr. Hodgson said petroleum and pipeline firms have already spent fortunes on research in Canada's Arctic.

The commissioner said Canadians' attitudes to northern development contrast sharply to those of Russians, who applaud natural gas development and dams constructed over permafrost.

"We here in Canada have developed the attitude that we should apologize at such achievements," he said.

Mr. Hodgson also took a swing at self-styled experts on the North who have visited the area only once.

Bonanza Filming Last Episode

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Ben Cartwright is closing down the Ponderosa Ranch. Little Joe, the last of the Cartwright sons, is leaving home. Bonanza has been cancelled.

Bonanza, at one time the most popular show on television, winds up 14 years on the NBC television network next Jan. 22.

The filming of the last episode of the western drama—the 431st—will be completed Wednesday night.

The long-running show was cancelled Monday by NBC, along with The Bold Ones, Banyon and Night Gallery.

Bonanza was switched from Sunday to Tuesday nights at the beginning of this season, but the Cartwrights were no match for CBS' Maude. It slipped badly in the ratings and in the latest report was in 52nd place.

Executive producer David Dortort, who had learned the news only two hours earlier, said: "We've had a very long and beautiful run."

But it will not be the last seen of Bonanza, the first television show ever filmed from the beginning in 1959 in color. The early years of the show now are in syndication to stations under the title of Ponderosa. The show's worldwide audience is estimated at 400 million.

Dortort said the show is still trying to overcome the tremendous gap" left by the death last May 13 of Dan Blocker, who played Hoss Cartwright.

Ottawa-born Lorne Greene as Ben and Michael Landon as Joe were the two remaining Cartwrights. A third son, Adam, was written out of the series when Pernell Roberts quit in 1965.

Bonanza and The Bold Ones will be replaced by NBC Tuesday Night at the Movies on Jan. 30. It will consist of a new theatrical and made-for-television movies.

The NBC Sunday Mystery Movie will be expanded to two hours from its present 90-minute length to replace the Sunday Night Gallery. But on those nights when a 90-minute film is aired the network will broadcast Escape, a new action adventure show produced by Jack Webb.

The Bobby Darin's Amusement Company will replace Banyon on Friday nights beginning Jan. 19. Darin was a replacement for Dean Martin last summer and his musical variety show had decent rating of any summer show.

Strike Won't Affect CBS Election Coverage

NEW YORK (AP) — The Columbia Broadcasting System plans to present full United States election coverage tonight despite the strike by 1,200 cameramen, technicians and engineers.

No talks were scheduled, meanwhile, in the strike by members of Local 1212, Radio and Television Broadcast Engineers, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, which began last Friday.

Supervisory personnel have been performing technical functions, keeping most of the CBS television network's schedule on track. Cameras reportedly in position at the network's election headquarters and projected available to run the computer system. Concern for security has been secret service because the cutting of cables at Chicago Sundance here prevented the telecast of the New York Jets Washington Redskins football game Sunday. Severed cables hampered telecast from Milwaukee.

The network dropped two other games that were supposed to be regionally telecast Sunday. It also cancelled the Face the Nation interview program when Vice-President Spiro Agnew and Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern would not cross picket lines.

Key issue involves work assignments, with CBS seeking to assign certain graphics artists and other technical work to employes outside Local 1212's jurisdiction and refusing to permit duplication of the work by members of the engineers' union.

CBS-owned television and radio stations in New York, Los Angeles, Chicago and St. Louis, radio stations in Boston and San Francisco and network facilities here and in Washington are affected.

News broadcasts on television station in New York have been marked by frequent technical difficulties.

Donny's Top Notes Gone

LONDON (Reuter) — Donny Osmond, a 14-year-old singing star who is the heart-throb of millions of little girls on both sides of the Atlantic, said Monday he is losing his treble voice.

"I just can't reach the high notes any more," said Donny, who is in Britain on tour with the Osmond Brothers group.

Said Donny: "I'm almost 15 now and my voice has gradually been getting deeper. . . . Now it is a whole octave lower."

"It has been getting harder and harder to reach those high notes and I don't think I can do it any more."

Wildlife Rewards

EXETER, England (CP) — Public interest in Britain's safari parks is helping to conserve the wildlife of Africa, an expert told the British Veterinary Association at a meeting in Devon. James Chipperfield, who runs 11 parks in Britain, said safari preserves in this country had stimulated tourist trade in Africa. "The great pressure to use African national parks for farming land has been reduced because of the interest in wildlife in Britain," he said.

Anti-Pot Movie Turns Young On

TORONTO (CP) — Reefer Madness, a 1936 low-budget epic depicting the perils of "the deadly weed" marijuana, has Toronto's head set howling.

And after they've seen the propaganda flick aimed at turning the nation's youth off pot, many of them leave the theatre and light up a few joints.

There's even a few whiffs of the weed in the air as the young audience watches people on the screen go insane as the progress of their addiction is marked by ever-widening circles of black make-up around their eyes.

The film was intended for parents to educate their children against the dangers of marijuana smoking. But 36 years later, theatre audiences view the experience of seeing the picture as camp.

The film begins and ends with a clean-cut doctor in a double-breasted, pin-striped suit addressing a PTA meeting.

"Watch out," he says. "It could happen to you, or to you, or to you."

And in between, the movie has all-American youths being corrupted by fiendish dope pushers.

Of the six principal characters, two are murdered, one commits suicide, one goes incurably insane and one is rescued from the gallows after being wrongly convicted of murder.

What happens to the sixth isn't too clear but the movie's message is crystal clear: If you smoke marijuana, you'll get burned.

The film has been playing for two weeks to crowds theatre manager John Carroll describes as "fantastic, especially considering it's showing in a new theatre."

Just as the old-fashioned melodramas invited the audience to hiss the villain, the audiences of Reefer Madness jeer the good doctor and his advice and cheer wildly when another innocent is seduced into sin.

The film is owned by the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML), and 40 per cent of its profits goes toward NORML's efforts to make marijuana legal in the United States.

Audiences entertain themselves by reacting against the film. As a sweet young thing draws the deadly reefer to her tender lips, there's usually the cry:

"Don't do it!"

And that usually brings down the house.

Meet the Press Is 25 Years Old

NEW YORK (AP) — Twenty-five years ago Meet the Press went on television amid the misgivings of its producer and regular panelist, Lawrence E. Spivak. He didn't think it would work out.

The guest was James A. Farley, the former postmaster-general and national chairman of the Democratic party. He had survived the show. So did Spivak. And Meet the Press, born on radio two years earlier, went on to become a Sunday institution on NBC television.

There have been 1,215 Meet the Press programs since Farley's appearance, with more than 1,500 leading public figures put in the hot seat to answer questions posed by Spivak and other reporters.

The majority have been U.S. political luminaries.

When the show began, it was done at the NBC station in New York and was seen only in the New York area. The NBC television network as it is known today still was a long way in the future.

Spivak said he worried at the outset that television might dam age an image he thought the radio audience had of the guests and reporters on Meet the Press.

He said he felt "it might be a little difficult for them radio to television because in radio a listener broadcasts his own image. Do they, while on television—well," there you are."

The show now comes from Washington, but its format hasn't changed much in 25 years. It still consists of a moderator and four panelists—Spivak and three other journalists. The panel is expanded on special occasions.

Spivak declines to say which have been the best years of his 1,500 plus guests. It would be a hard choice, considering the range of Last Oct. 22, a reporter on ABC's Issues and Answers put to Senator George McGovern a question he said had been suggested by a White House official. McGovern answered it fully as he was assured he could pose a question of President Nixon after his reply.

Have any similar suggested questions been sent to Meet the Press?

"The White House has never, and I can't think ever would, time that television might dam- try anything like that," Spivak said. "And at this stage of the game, I think people know our reputation well enough not to do anything like that."

All-weather Road On Way to Arctic

EDMONTON (CP) — Work has started on the Northwest Territories' all-weather highway to the Arctic and project manager Frank Kimball says the road may be finished by 1976.

"We've just completed the centre line for the first 50-mile section from Fort Simpson on to Camsell Bend," he said.

Survey crews, working out of a 50-man department of public works camp near Fort Simpson, are doing design work following the centre-line bulldozers. Soil testing and a search for gravel pits is also under way.

The right-of-way is being cleared by hand under an arrangement with the Northwest Territories government, which is hiring natives for the work.

Mr. Kimball said the first 50 miles of the highway will go along the east side of the Mackenzie River and the next 50 will be on the east side.

Over the entire 670-mile highway route there will be three crossings of the Mackenzie, he said, one at Camsell Bend, another at Great Bear River and the third where the Dempster and Mackenzie highways are scheduled to meet at Arctic Red River.

The three crossings will be covered by ferries at least for the first few years, and the government is testing the possibility of using air cushion vehicle to provide ferry service. Ice bridges would replace the ferries in the winter.

Mr. Kimball said the decision to use ferries was made because "there is one hell of a pile of money to be put into bridges."

He said contracts for gravel surfacing of the highway will not be called until 1975.

"You've got to build the subgrade first."

Public works crews this winter will cover the area from Camsell Bend to Fort Good Hope—and the centre line to Good Hope should be finished by February.

Meanwhile, the territorial government and department of Indian affairs were studying the possibility of establishing campsites along the way and certain areas may have to be preserved for such use.

Mr. Kimball said a final decision has yet to be made on exactly where the highway will go north of Fort Good Hope, a decision that will do to some extent on the route a proposed natural gas pipeline takes from Alaska and the Mackenzie delta.

After a couple of months on job Mr. Kimball, a native of New Brunswick, said he's had some harder jobs, including his last one as design manager for a $20-million oil terminal wharf at Come-By-Chance, Nfld.

He also worked as regional highways engineer for the Atlantic provinces when the Trans-Canada Highway was being built at a $50-million-a-year clip and has had national parks construction experience.

He's been in the business for about 18 years, starting with the New Brunswick highways department as draftsman-engineer. He began through the whole mill—chainman rodman, survey, resident engineer, construction engineer."

Disgusting Mess

VICTORIA (CP) — The Capital Regional Board of B.C. and the federal transport department joined hands in the clean-up of a small beach near East Sooke Park which had been polluted by several barrels of bunker sea oil, left by passing ships. "It was a disgusting mess," said Larry Stacey, district manager for the transport department.

Moths Find Life Hard

SUMMERLAND, B.C. (CP) — The lot of the codling moth is not a happy one but it's bringing smiles to the faces of apple and pear growers in British Columbia's Okanagan valley.

The larvae of the codling moth pierce a major threat to orchards in the area and research scientists are developing methods to reduce, or perhaps eliminate, the moth.

One method is to raise sterile males and he other is by using a chemical substance to attract the males to "sex traps."

A specially designed building near the shores of Lake Okanagan at the federal research station here is being used to raise sterile males. Some 10 to 20 thousand moths are raised in the building and Mr. Brinton and Bill Twerdon, also of the station, recently received an award from the federal public service for developing part of he system.

"Within a few hours after they emerge, adult moths are irradiated by cobalt 60 and on their way to helicopters from which they are released over the orchard," Mr. Brinton said.

The chemical sex traps, used to measure the insect populations in the orchards, are made in a new plant at Penticton called pheromone.

Dr. Harold Madsen described pheromone power as "fantastic."

"We put one milligram of a pecling moth pheromone—a chemically created moth—in a rubber band about two inches by half an inch and it attracted male moths in the field for 79 days," he said.

The attractant is placed inside a sticky trap.

Mass production of chemicals which require only a speck to bait sex traps has opened possibilities impossible when scientists relied on virgin females for bait.

Solicitor Finds Sunken Treasure

LONDON (CP) — Solicitor Rex Cowan, 43, achieved what the emigrant wants. He gave up the nine-to-five office routine, the paper work and the crowded commuting.

He did what every boy dreams of doing—diving off uninhabited islands for sunken treasure.

Diving still goes on in the wreck he found in the Scilly Isles off Britain's southwest coast. The wreck has already yielded £100,000 worth of silver coins and Cowan says it may contain coins worth £2 million.

Silver from Cowan's find has been sold in London and New York and more silver is lined up. And he is on the trail of two new wrecks which he expects will lead to new adventures.

The story began in 1966 when Cowan gave up his lifeving law practice and, with some capital in the bank, "dropped out to look for other experiences." He tried other jobs before managing a fashion photographic studio and journalism.

An assignment from the newspaper The Financial Times changed his career, taking him to the Scilly Isles where a team of Royal Navy officers already was diving for treasure.

The Scilly Isles have long been a favorite hunting place for fortune seekers. They are surrounded by some of the most dangerous waters in Europe, where over the years ships of many countries have gone to the bottom.

The divers sought the hulk every treasure hunter in Britain has dreamed of finding—the 900-ton Dutch East Indiaman Hollandia.

This lit he ship set sail from Batavia (Jakarta) July 3, 1743, bound for Holland. She was reportedly estimated at £2 million to £2.55 million at present-day values.

Ten days later in bad weather she hit Gunner Rock off St. Agnes, ripping her keel with no survivors.

Cowan showed the naval officers a history book he and his wife Zelide had found telling the story of the Hollandia and the germ of an idea was born: he took for the ship as a full-time proposition. In 1967 the hunt began in earnest.

But looking for a treasure ship is not done overnight. Says Cowan: "It took almost three years' research before we were even ready to make our main effort."

Zelide became the team's chief researcher. She remained in London, looking at maps, reports and books about the life and times of the Dutch East India Company in a dozen museums.

Meanwhile the team—eight divers, two crewmembers and the cook—was exploring a 100 feet of water off the island of Annet where the most reliable reports said the ship was last seen. They had no luck.

Then Cowan got hold of a proton magnetometer, a device which locates metal objects by changes in a magnetic field.

"Time after time the divers and I took this thing out and time after time it did not work. At the end of 1970 money and morale were running low.

"In 1971 I got the team together again. We started searching the latest area where we believed the Hollandia had sunk.

"On on Sept. 16 the magnetometer started to give out the telltale hum that it had found metal and the divers went over the side.

"A few days later we had it. A cannon with the anchor and insignia of the Dutch East India Company and the name Hollandia. We had found her."

They worked on the wreck every good weather day, even in winter.

"The coins themselves were cemented into the rocks by time and had to be chipped away to bring them to the surface and then chipped again."

Last April 18 at Sotheby's the haul, cleaned and presentable, reached £100,000.

Cowan says: "Everyone asks how we could make such a sacrifice, to give up such a sensible, secure life. But really it has been fun for all of us.

"Certainly none of us are in it purely for the money. The search cost me £22,000 to launch and other paying people contacted to the Dutch government and the British receiver of wrecks, there is a real enough to give us a comfortable living, that's all."

Despite the excitement of the Hollandia, Cowan and his wife have managed to locate two new wrecks—one around British shores, one across the world. They are keeping their locations secret.

Museum's Role Changes

WINNIPEG (CP) — James Stanton, chief of the human history section of the Manitoba Museum of Man and Nature, says the role of the museum is changing.

In an address, Mr. Stanton said museums shouldn't just record history, they should tell the story of man in a unified ecological theme. Through temporary and permanent exhibits, extension programs and publications, people might be made aware of what is happening in the world today.

For the future, Mr. Stanton sees museums without walls.

"We could put a display in the window of an empty store on 100 feet of water off the island of Annet where the most reli-

Fish Catches Decline But Remuneration Up

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Declining catches but rising values appear to be the trend for the future in Newfoundland's centuries-old fishing industry. Fishermen are landing smaller catches each season but are taking home bigger pay cheques.

Landings for the first eight months this year totalled 467 million pounds worth $25.8 million compared with 706 million pounds worth only $20.8 million for the same period in 1971.

Last year landings totalled 855 million pounds compared with 982 million pounds in 1970. However, the gross landed value of all species in 1971 was up by 1.1 per cent over 1970 reflecting higher prices.

The inshore, spring-to-fall fishery, which once employed 40,000 men, is declining as a fleet of multi-purpose boats of the dragger and longliner types produce the raw material needed by processing plants.

Last year there were only 15,850 men in the inshore fishery, a drop of almost 300 from the previous year's 16,144. And the decline continues.

A joint federal-provincial program of research and development is providing fishermen and processors with information on new species, methods of catching and techniques for preparing products for modern markets.

A few years ago, 90 per cent or more of dragger catches consisted of cod and haddock. The boats now come to port loaded with yellow tails and flounder, ocean perch (redfish), catfish and other species.

A new method for catching herring and mackerel, Scottish ringnet fishing, is proving successful. Imported Japanese nets are producing at times the amount of fish the local variety captured, and draggers, converted to mid-water trawling aqd manned by five to 10 fewer fishermen than carried by the old fishing schooners, are getting bumper catches.

Most of the Island's fresh frozen cod fillets are exported to the United States in block for further processing by U.S. plants. Herring, shrimp and lumpfish are exported to Europe in bulk and most of the lobster catch goes live to the U.S.

There is also renewed hope for the salt codfish economy. Market demand is brisk.

The Canadian Sealfish Corp. recently announced a boost in price to $5 per quintal (100 pounds) from $3 for different grades of light-salted cod.

The prices now range from $42 a quintal for "large choice", the highest grade, down to $13 a quintal for "small west India," the lowest grade.

The corporation also announced that the price for good quality extra large choice heavy salted cod increased by $4 a draught (244 pounds).

The new price for this product is $38 a draught, plus $2 for salt allowance making a total of $40 per draught.

Shepherd Becomes Salesman

EDMONTON (CP) — The shepherd has become a salesman.

For the 3,000 sheepmen in Alberta a new hard-sell approach to marketing, coupled with a dramatic upswing in world demand for wool, is secretary, says traditionally sheepmen said goodbye to their animals at the farm gate and "hoped that- someone would look after processing and marketing."

Today that attitude has disappeared and sheepmen are waging a vigorous promotion campaign involving processors and, in particular, consumers.

"We have to be concerned with our people right through to the consumer, to the consumer's satisfaction and we're going to keep right on."

Ray Turner of Dawson lamb marketing co-ordinator, says he is convinced producers can provide a continuity of supply and that the industry is aiming to double the amount of lamb—3.7 pounds per capita consumed each year by Canadians.

"Alberta's sheep population now is 100,000 head and we can double this within a matter of years because of the resurgence of the demand at the consumer level," Mr. Turner said.

He said the public wants more choice at the meat counter, something different to put on the table.

The producers from his area recently tested the Vancouver market, setting up a promotion with a supermarket chain.

"They moved 2,300 carcasses in one week and we're now moving into the Edmonton and Calgary areas working closely with retailers," he said.

"Both retailers and consumers are gaining more interest and we're moving 500 to 1,000 carcasses a week in Edmonton."

Alberta's agriculture department was actively helping 60 try to establish plants specifically designed to handle lamb carcasses. Packing houses now were geared primarily to hogs.

"Lambs go directly to the retail trade but their butchers are not that efficient in cutting a carcass quickly, therefore their costs tend to be higher," Mr. Shopland said.

"We have to get into a plant where we have real skilled people to cut the carcasses and get the product to the consumer in the form of convenience foods."

He said such plants would not be expensive to set up but the seasonal aspect is a problem with most lambs being ready for market in the fall. "It has to be large enough to handle the kill during the heavy run but what do you do during the off season or in a slow run?"

Confident this problem will be overcome, Mr. Chopland added that there has been a "remarkable" resurgence in the world demand for wool.

Several years agothepub - "Several years ago the public and the clothing industry was all for man-made fibres and the use of wool dropped almost to zero."

He said Australia, one of the world's largest wool-producing countries—saw its sheep population decline drastically. Now there was a shortage of wool in that country.

"The demand now is remarkable, with a complete reversal from synthetics to the use of 100-per-cent wool and wool blends in the clothing industry. The price went up 30 per cent during the last year and is expected to go higher."

Coupled with this demand was a need for more sheepers to do custom work.

"Years ago in this northern country everybody sheared their own flocks, now I would say about 50 per cent hire custom shearers and this demand is growing," Mr. Shopland said.

The commission secretary also said the industry can be a boon to the small operator on a family-farm scope.

"Sheep fit in well with people on small acreages and the whole family can take part in looking after them."

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids . . . and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research Institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and comfy relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorroids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorroids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories Preparation H Ointment (w a special applicator).

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 8

Aries March 21-April 19): Get busy with all the little changes needed to adjust to the existing situation. Nothing is quite the same as before.

Taurus April 20-May 20): Come to terms on finances, have your facts and figures ready, then "put up and shut up" on any arguments. The future is at hand.

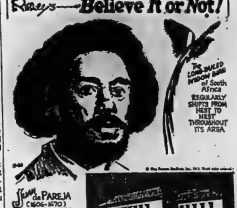
Gemini May 21-June 20): Time spent answering mail and questions is well spent. Gather all readily available resources to make an exceptional purchase.

Cancer June 21-July 22): Push early and with precision. Construction, conciliation, group efforts, family welfare, but avoid final closings of business deals.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22): Promoting your image is more important than a splurge of public notice. New projects arise from success in old ventures.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Select words carefully, use no more than you must, as lengthy detailed statements offer openings for excuses.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An early start is needed, as monetary crises worked by older people is inevitable. When things get back to normal it's time for a new beginning.



Scorpio Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Ordinary routines have an unplanned challenge, a sudden opening for a serious decision involving much beyond daily living.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Fresh information comes in from all sides and can be shocked. Research, ignored articles, level up accounts and the like.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Some concern is appropriate—it may be time you moved before others beat you to the punch. Lend a hand. Listen to those you love.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Take a long look at yourself and what you're doing. Have no hesitation in changing if you don't like what you see. Explain afterward.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20): Friends and distant contacts alike provide useful information if you're willing to ask and listen. Present your views vigorously.

No Pill Can Cure Angina at Age 69

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Six years ago I had a heart attack and after seven weeks was released from the hospital and on my way to recovery.

Last winter I noticed I was getting short of breath if I walked a mile or so. The doctor had me take tests at the hospital and I was released. The doctor said my trouble was angina and a little angina pectoris, and now I should not work so hard.

I work around the house as well as shopping and gardening, and I love to do it. My doctor gave me nitroglycerine pills to take when needed. If I cut the grass or do some similar activity, I get a little short of breath and get like a seizure in my arms and chest, but I take a nitro and it is relieved fairly while. I also take pills for my heart and nerves.

I asked my doctor if there were any other pills I could take that are better than nitro, and I have tried a couple but do not know if they are better.

What I would like is some kind of a pill that would let me do my daily work without the discomfort. I am 69 and hope to live to be 100, but am discouraged over no improvement and I sure don't want to be a vegetable doing nothing.—C.H.

Your case, at least, sounds nearly as severe as plenty of angina cases I've seen—but you've also got to understand what ails you and recognize that you'll have to live within your limitations. Certainly no reason to expect to become "a vegetable," though.

In a nutshell, at 69 your heart can't meet all the demands you are putting on it. You get short of breath and have chest discomfort whenever you extend your heart to support more exertion than it can handle.

When you ask for a pill to let you remain as active as you were when you were younger, you are asking too much. For most people nitroglycerine has proved to be the best and most satisfactory to give your heart a boost temporarily when you have overexerted. But use what's ever one works best for you.

One of the most important tricks of staying active with angina is to learn how much you can do without distress—how much you can do without overexerting. If you have trouble before you've quite finished cutting the grass—then stop halfway and rest for a rest. Or, alternatively, take a nitro tablet to help you through the last part.

Don't become a vegetable. Remain active—but keep your activity within the limits your heart will support.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My teenage daughter lives in babyfat, but parents hesitate to call her when they find out that I have scleroderma. She is deeply hurt and resentful. How contagious is scleroderma?—P.N.

Scleroderma is not contagious at all. Somehow it has been fallen so much, and it is unfair to your daughter.

Note to K.R.: Such an accidental scratch couldn't possibly cause sterility, so forget your friend's woeful prognosis. I insist that you and your husband will have a satisfactory number of healthy children.

Two-cent Increase Per Pack Likely in Cigarette Prices

MONTREAL (CP) — Imperial Tobacco Products Ltd. announced Monday an increase in the wholesale price of cigarettes that will "probably" mean an increase of about two cents a package to cigarette smokers.

The increase is effective Nov. 20.

Edmond Ricard, company president, said the increase "is necessary because of the increased cost of goods and service over the past two years."

The wholesale price per thousand cigarettes for regular and king size will increase 37 cents to $18.79 and $19.22, respectively.

Mr. Ricard said "the two cents increase per package is to anticipate at the retail level will also enable tobacco wholesalers and retailers to regain their margins which have been eroded."

There would be no increase in the prices of tobacco for roll your-own cigarettes, cigars, pipe tobacco or snuff.

Imperial Tobacco markets about 15 brands of cigarettes.

There was no indication of any immediate price increase from other cigarette companies.

Pat Ferguson, vice-president for marketing at Macdonald Tobacco Inc., said it is "taking a long, hard look at the situation" but no increase is planned "at the present time."

The two cents is expected to be added by retailers in each province, where prices for packages of cigarettes vary with provincial taxes.

Imperial said the price increase followed recent completion of a new labor contract retroactive to July.

Ask Price Hike

TILLSONBURG, Ont. (CP) — Cigarette manufacturers were reminded Monday that the last time they increased prices they promised growers a higher price which has not been realized.

Commenting on the Imperial Tobacco Co. announcement Monday of a wholesale price increase of two cents a package, George Dorneyere, chairman of the Ontario Flue Cured Tobacco Growers Marketing Board, said the increase was the first since January, 1971, when manufacturers raised the price by one cent a package.

Seek More Time

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario Separate School Trustees' Association (OSSTA) has petitioned the provincial government to extend the deadline for appeal against errors in enumerating school support from Nov. 3 to Dec. 31.

Ship Blown Up

ST. IRENEE, Que (CP) — The freighter North Voyageur, badly damaged by water since it sank last winter, was blown up underwater Monday near this community 80 miles northeast of Quebec City.

The ship's cargo, about 1,000 tons of aluminum valued at about $1 million, was emptied from the vessel during the last few weeks.

Study Lakes

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Legislators from four states and Ontario will meet in Detroit Nov. 16-17 to study the environmental well-being of Lake Erie, a state senator Gordon Rockwell said Monday.

Trials Delayed

MONTREAL (CP) — The trials of Bernard Lortie and Francis Simard in connection with the October, 1970, terrorist crisis were put off Monday to the January sittings. Lortie, already sentenced to 20 years for kidnapping Quebec labor minister Pierre Laporte on Oct. 10, 1970, is to be tried for Mr. Laportes' murder. Simard, now serving a life sentence for the murder, will stand trial on a charge of kidnapping Mr. Laporte.

Don't Label Sin

TORONTO (CP) — Although parents may tell their children what is sinful and what is not, they should not attach the label of "grievous sin" on specific actions, of impurity, says a leading Roman Catholic exponent of sex education for children.

Rev. Leo Lafrenière of North Bay, Ont., says such labels should not be used because "it is very doubtful there can be a serious sin in matters of purity before a child reaches the age of puberty, and even then it would not be ready to commit myself before I knew what kind of sex instruction has been given them."

Plan New Party

TORONTO (CP) — Indian rock carvings 500 to 1,000 years old will be the major attraction for a new provincial park opening next year near Peterborough.

The 2,500-acre park, announced Monday by Natural Resources Minister Leo Bernier, will have picnic areas, but no camping facilities.

Located near Nephton, about 25 miles northeast of Peterborough, it will be called Petroglyph provincial park.

Dye Banned

TORONTO (CP) — A new rule has been added for livestock exhibited at the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair: No artificial coloring of hair.

It will be in effect when the 50th anniversary of the fair opens Friday because of an unusual situation that happened at Denver, Colo., last year.

A large hamburger chain paid a fancy price for the black Angus champion steer and exhibited the animal around the country. The champ grew steadily paler as he traveled and eventually turned white, betraying his crossbred ancestry.

Reach Accord

BERLIN (AP) — East and West Germany concluded Monday two years of negotiations on a basic treaty normalizing their relations.

The East German state secretary, Michael Kohl, said the negotiations in East Berlin had been successful and the treaty would be initialled later in the week, probably Friday, if both governments approve.

Pleas Made

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Seven members of the Vietnam Veterans Against the War (VVAW) and a VVAW supporter pleaded not guilty Monday to charges of conspiring to disrupt the 1972 Republican convention with guns, slingshots and fire bombs.

Judge David Middlebrooks of United States district court said their trial will begin as "early as possible" next year.

Nixon Landslide Buries McGovern

SEN. McGOVERN

WASHINGTON (CP) — Richard M. Nixon buried his "loser" image for good Tuesday, gathering a national mandate of stunning proportions from American voters for another four-year term in the White House.

Nixon was re-elected president by a popular-vote margin of nearly two to one over Democratic challenger George McGovern, sweeping long-held Democratic bastions and Republican heartlands with almost equal ease.

As expected, American Party candidate John Schmitz didn't win any states, polling just one per cent of the vote.

Nixon out-polled McGovern in 49 of the 50 states. The South Dakota senator managed to win only in Massachusetts and the District of Columbia.

In electoral votes—the system by which a president is formally elected—Nixon seemed certain of 521 out of the 538 votes, leaving McGovern 17.

Not since Franklin D. Roosevelt buried Republican Alf Landon by 523 to eight electoral votes in 1936 has there been such a margin.

But despite their massive support for Nixon as president, the voters refused to give him the kind of Congress he had wanted. The Democrats retained their long-standing control of both the Senate and the House of Representatives, along with a substantial margin among state governors.

Nixon is the second president to win election while carrying the Senate or the House since Zachary Taylor in 1848. He failed Tuesday as well as in 1968 when he first won the presidency. President Dwight D. Eisenhower also failed in 1956 when Nixon was his running mate.

For every Republican candidate for Congress who was pulled into office on the strength of the Nixon sweep, another lost out, guaranteeing at least two more years of partisan tug-of-war between the White House and the Capitol over the content of U.S. budgets and legislation.

For Nixon, two months away from his 60th birthday, it was a triumphant climax to a political career that began in California 26 years ago with a successful Congressional race.

The burden of his campaign was carried by a long list of "surrogates" headed by Vice-President Spiro Agnew, who now becomes a leading prospect for the presidential race in 1976, the 200th anniversary of American independence. Nixon is barred by the Constitution from seeking a third term.

The vote all across the U.S. was unexpectedly light and the anti - McGovern vote proved overwhelming.

All 11 states of the Confederacy — the so-called Solid South of the Democratic party — went for a Republican president for the first time in history. So did McGovern's own South Dakota and such traditionally liberal states as Minnesota, Connecticut and Michigan.

U.S. Election Results

PRESIDENTIAL

Nixon won 49 states with 521 electoral votes. McGovern won one state and District of Columbia with 17 electoral votes. 270 required to elect.

Nixons Rejoice

Nixon Starts 4-Year Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon, wasting scant time on celebration, scheduled three meetings with key aides and officials today to look toward the next four years.

Nixon set up sessions with members of the White House staff, the cabinet and heads of federal agencies.

Presidential secretary Ronald Ziegler said the purpose was "to look ahead to the next term."

Nixon returned to the White House early this morning after attending formal Republican party victory celebrations in a Washington hotel, then went immediately to his office in the executive office building next door. Ziegler said the president wanted to return some of the phone calls he had received from supporters overnight.

The press spokesman said Nixon was likely to fly to his Key Biscayne, Fla., home late this afternoon. Asked if the trip would amount to a vacation, he said key staff aides would go along and that he expected it to be a working trip.

In a televised election night statement from his White House office, Nixon said he may have won one of the great political victories of all time.

"In terms of votes that may be true," he said, "but in terms of what a victory really is, a huge landslide margin means nothing at all unless it is a victory for America. It will be a victory for America only if, in these next four years we, all of us, can work together to achieve our common great goals of peace at home and peace for all nations in the world; and for that new progress and prosperity which all Americans deserve."

Loser Too Old For Tears

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. (CP) — His wife and four children wept, but Senator George McGovern decided he was too old for tears and that even in crushing defeat he may have achieved something.

McGovern ended his 22-month crusade to change America's politics by becoming president in a typically optimistic note.

Standing before 2,000 supporters Tuesday night, the senator said his crushing defeat at the hands of President Nixon was worth it if it brought the U.S. closer to peace.

"Never forget that if we push the day of peace just one day closer, then every minute and every hour and every bone-crushing effort in this campaign was worth it," he said in his concession speech.

McGovern plans to return to Washington Wednesday and then pack for a holiday in the Virgin Islands, starting Thursday.

McGovern said his campaign had raised about $23 million and would not end in debt.

He was composed in defeat. Four daughters were fighting a losing battle against tears. His wife, Eleanor, was barely holding her own.

"Congratulations on your victory," McGovern told President Nixon in a telegram. "I hope in the next four years you will lead us to a time of peace abroad and justice at home. You have my full support in such efforts."

Canada Is Tough About Truce Role

OTTAWA (CP) — Signs are growing that Canada intends to take a hard-nosed position with respect to a possible Canadian peacekeeping role in Vietnam.

The official government policy is that Canada would be prepared to participate in truce supervision arrangements if it could do so usefully and if the operation held the promise of success.

The decision would be taken in the light of Canada's unhappy experience as a member of the existing International Control Commission (ICC) for Vietnam, established under the 1954 Geneva agreements.

Privately, some Ottawa informants voice much stronger reservations than External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp when he outlined the government's attitude in a statement Friday.

Their comments are in part a reflection of the fact that Canada has not been kept well informed about the progress of U.S.-North Vietnamese ceasefire negotiations, though it has been asked to make itself available to help verify the ceasefire when it comes.

Canada still is groping in the dark in trying to determine what role it might be asked to play, said one source.

"We have not the slightest idea of what is envisaged."

The remark recalled one by Mr. Sharp Friday that Canada had "no inside information" about what is going on between Washington and Hanoi.

Ship Hits Bridge, Cars Fall 80 Feet

BRUNSWICK, Ga. (AP) — At least 10 vehicles plunged 80 feet into the deep waters of the Brunswick River Tuesday after a loaded freighter slired into a drawbridge. At least five persons died and six are missing.

Two children were among the dead and another was nutring.

The refrigerator ship African Neptune rimmed the raised drawspan of the mile-long Sidney Lanier Bridge Tuesday night as it headed out of port on a swift southbound tide.

Two of the dead and two of the missing were members of one Waycross, Ga., family. Among those who escaped death was a honeymooning Pennsylvania couple.

The crash downed two spans on the south end of the graceful 16-year-old bridge and badly damaged the prow of the freighter.

The ship's crew apparently tried to avert the collision by dropping anchor, but the anchor did not hold. A crew member later told the U.S. Coast Guard there was a steering failure as the 572-foot ship headed through the drawspan.

Roscoe Turner, drawspan operator said the freighter missed by several hundred yards and sent planks through the bridge's south side.

"It was pitch black," said D. J. Moore, a mechanical maintenance engineer.

Darkness hampered initial rescue efforts, but helicopters and divers were called in to help local rescue units. Officials said 9-11 cars and one trailer-tractor rig went into the river.

George Kutcher, a 16-year-old shrimp boat worker, was among those called out for rescue duty. He said: "We saw several people floating in the water. We pulled up those we could. I pulled up this woman— her face was covered and when I took her in the boat . . . it was my grandmother! I didn't even know she was there."

Potter Will Stop Denturists Sales

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Health Minister Richard Potter said Tuesday firms that sell denture directly to the public "are openly breaking the law" and will be closed.

The sale of dentures without the supervision of a qualified dentist is forbidden under the Dentistry Act of Ontario.

Mr. Potter said in an interview that about 70 denturists in Metropolitan Toronto who have been selling dentures directly to the public have produced no evidence why the law should be changed.

The health minister was to receive a report today by a seven-member dental technologists advisory committee.

Legislation introduced last June in Ontario proposed a new type of dental worker, called the dental technologist, who would be permitted to fit dentures and sell them to the public without the direction of a dentist.

During the last few years, there have been several raids on the clinics of denturists in Toronto.

Mr. Potter said he in roduced his legislation knowing it would be controversial, but wanting to "clear up the mess" as soon as possible.

He said it will be decided before the legislature reconvenes later this month whether the legislation will be amended, or kept in its present form with staff requirements brought in for the qualification of dental technologists.

"I want to be darn sure it's in the best interests of the public . . . to ensure that the public not only gets less expensive dentures but reliable treatment as well . . . money is only part of it," Mr. Potter said.

The health minister said he has told denturists he will not interfere with them "as long as they were breaking the law. There will be a lot of them closed down. There's no question about that."

110 Power Failures Reported in Quebec

MONTREAL (CP) — A meeting of Hydro-Quebec and union representatives with government mediator Yves Dansereau in preliminary attempts to open contract talks under way again broke up at about 4:00 a.m. today.

A Hydro-Quebec spokesman said "it is not possible to make any comment on the preliminary talks."

"We should have something to say about it later today— probably in the early afternoon.

The strike by 8,500 of the public utility's 12,000 employees enters its third day today.

The Hydro-Quebec spokesmen said a midnight check showed there were 110 power failures across the province affecting 46,000 people. Several hours earlier, 70,000 people had been without electricity.

Supervisory personnel are attempting to fix the power breaks left unrepaired when the strike of linemen, maintenance workers, engineers and some offices personnel.

The spokesmen said the breakdowns would ordinarily be handled quickly by the workers.

Tuesday night's meeting was the first since negotiations broke off Thursday. The workers walked off the job Monday morning.

brand new Community Centre Complex at Tillsonburg in western Ontario.

Last Wednesday Governor General Roland Michener and Lady Michener opened the million - dollar complex and since then a steady stream of attractions has been appearing at this new jewel in the heart of the tobacco area.

Following a concert that included music from the realms of classics, Broadway production tunes and folk sources, Mr. Choma was the recipient of certificates of appreciation to each member of the orchestra for their participation in the centennial celebrations of Tillsonburg.

Centenial wooden nickels were also distributed to the musicians. A cheque to cover expenses of the trip for the half - hundred musicians was proffered at the same time to Mr. Choma with the balance to be used for the purchase of new music.

A real surprise to the well known conductor was the appearance of his former music teacher, Miss Bessie Lee, on stage who presented him with a Centennial Tray struck with the emblem of the town of Tillsonburg.

It was Miss Field who started a small musical group in 1948, then handed these teenage school musicians over to Stephen who brought these brass, woodwind and a few string players to such a degree of ability that they won the Silver Cup at the Kiwanis Festival in Woodstock the following year.

Since Mr. Choma left that area in 1951, Tillsonburg has not had a permanent orchestra, but is hoping to bring one into being in the future.

The certificates of appreciation were awarded by Centennial Chairman Jim Jones, who played first violin in the original orchestra. Arrangements for the concert were under the direction of Recreation Director John Hunter and Complex Manager Stan Moore. Fifty-two of the 55 in the orchestra were on hand to give what could be considered the best performance of orchestra in its history.

Shortage of Raw Hides Shoe Industry Concern

BATAWA (Staff) — One of the single most important problems facing the shoe industry today is the "tremendous shortage" of raw hides and the resulting skyrocketing price, Tom Bata, president of Bata Industries, said before a brief press conference held at the company's plant here Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Bata said in 1971, raw hides used for footwear lasther cost about 11 cents a pound. At Moast count prices, quoted at Chicago, give the price at 42 cents a pound. He said the average Bata shoe takes about three pounds of shoe leather.

These rising prices plus results of experiments with less expensive raw materials in the international shoe industry have been topics of discussion between Bata executives from around the globe, this week touring Canadian facilities. Present at the press conference were nine heads of Bata organizations, plus local plant officials.

Mr. Bata said in order to reduce costs, his company has been using less expensive materials in their shoes. In some instances, plus cuts in overhead costs in order that Bata can continue its policy of stylish footwear.

The international Bata representatives spoke of growing shoe industry concerns for Bata, in many instances serving as pioneers in growing countries.

John Moore, who heads Bata operations in the Middle East, serving countries such as Lebanon, Nigeria, Sierra Leone, Cyprus and Ghana, said their products are made for both style-conscious wearers incilles such as Beirut Lebanon, to the first stages of footwear for Nigerian natives.

Mr. Moore began his career in Batawa in 1949. Another manager of a Bata world division, Otto Daicar, in charge of Central America, Mexico, parts of the Caribbean a nd Tahiti, also began his career in Batawa, in 1932.

He top spoke of the tremendous variety of styles of shoes manufactured in the countries his division serves. One advantage in his marketing area is the Caribbean common market as well as a common market in Central America, both allow trading of goods within the common markets countries only free.

Not uncommon in many emerging countries, is the almost missionary-like role industry plays. As products of the more affluent countries flow in, the peoples of these emerging nations are taught the importance of the products.

Said Robert Strom, in charge of, Bata's central and east African region, to many people in Mauritius, South Yemen and Kenya shoes are part of the outside world's way of life. "I guess you can compare our task to that of the early missionaries. The people didn't have the religion, they had to be taught. It's the same for shoes. It's our job to convince them they need shoes."

Mr. Strom said in many of the countries his nine plants and two Lanneries serve, there are a number of diseases transmitted by, shoeless people.

Malaysian Bata representative L. Coutis spoke highly of Canadian government assistance in his part of the world. Aid includes training in high urban areas, surveys on railroads, harbors and airports.

"There's a lot of Canadian business coming in, especially electronics," he said.

In his country of 10 million people, there are 5 shoe manufacturers. For the first time in 1971, his plants exported footwear to Canada.

Asked to comment on political situations in countries on the scattered Bata plants, Mr. Bata said each Bata company is told to inform the public of basic information such as the rate and the mill rate. He also observed it is time for taxpayers to discover how much money has been spent unwisely.

Mr. McFarland stressed the need for industry here and in the entire community would benefit. He noted many of the scholarships and bursaries presented at Prince Edward Collegiate graduation exercises last Saturday were donated by industry such as Lake Ontario Cement Co. Ltd.

"Council just manages, it does nothing," said the former mayor.

If Mr. McFarland seeks office he may be opposed by incumbent mayor Margaret Ackerman, who has declared she will run for office if renominated.

Picton Reeve Albert Piroth also has been rumored to be interested in the mayoralty. He has stated he will seek re-election but has not indicated in what capacity.

River Run Cancelled By Loyalist

Loyalist College's board of governors has concurred with a coroner's jury recommendation banning the annual river run on the Moira.

A five member jury last July recommended that the city pass a bylaw prohibiting future river runs after David Bellamy, 21, of Wellington, was swept to his death in the turbulent waters below Lazier's Dam.

The Loyalist student died April 16 while attending the river run on a hastily construction raft built by himself and his companion, Garnet Bowers, 20, of Belleville. Bowers struggled 30 minutes to free his companion from the raft, caught in a whirlpool, then floated down the river to be picked up by Lt. Jim Service Police. Both were unofficial entrants in the river run.

The coroner's jury based its recommendation of a ban on the annual event on the fact that none of the 14 witnesses could suggest adequate safety measures.

Even with the best rescue equipment available, there is only a five per cent chance of saving anyone in the water below Lazier's Dam during the height of the spring runoff, said Emergency Measures Organization co-ordinator Angus Duffy.

Coming Events

Cat Bylaw Passes

City council has finally resolved its excess cat problem. The matter had been in and out of council several times since last summer follow in the complaints of a West Side property owner who said the value of his property was being adversely affected because of the approximately 20 cats kept by his neighbor.

Council directed the city solicitor to draft a new bylaw restricting the number of cats which can be kept by any one resident.

But when the bylaw came to council, objection was raised because the suggested limitation did not take into account the probability of a cat lover's cat having a litter of kittens.

So the bylaw was sent back for amendment but when it returned to council Monday, Alderman Paul Russell was still not satisfied.

The intent of the amended bylaw was to limit any one household to 2 cats, but Alderman Russell said the wording could still conceivably allow a household to keep as many as 50 or 60 cats, depending on the number of people in the family.

He suggested that the intent of the bylaw could be accomplished by changing the word "owner" to "owner" and council went along with the amendment to allow each "owner" to keep as many as 10 cats.

Mayor J. Russell Scott said the bylaw amendment allows for the probability of cats having litters.

IN MEMORIAM

ANDERSON — In loving memory of our dear brother P.O. Wallace Anderson, killed in action, November 8, 1944.

We do not need a special day,
To remember you dear brother,
For the days we do not think of you,
Are very few indeed.
We miss you more than words can say,
And will forever be so,
Loved, remembered, treasured,
Always.

— Ever remembered by Gary and Helen.

ANDERSON — In loving memory of P.O. Wallace Anderson, R.C.A.F. Anderson, killed in active service, in Holland, November 8, 1944.

Sadly missed by Mother and Dad.
Memories keep you ever near,
Though parted by years of time when
Death removed you from our home,
Held memories that will last forever.
— Ever remembered by Mom and Dad.

BARTLE — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother, Annie Bartle, who passed away November 8, 1970.

Sadly I need a special day,
To bring you to our mind,
For the days we do not think of you,
Are very hard to find.
If all the world were ours to give,
And I could call you back,
To see the days you've missed,
Come smiling through the door.
Always remembered by daughter-in-law Dot and grandchildren.

DE ROCHE — In loving memory of Mary Ann De Roche who died November 8, 1971.

What would I not give to clasp her hand,
Her dear sweet face to see,
To hear her voice, her smile,
That would be heaven to me.
— Sadly missed by sons John and Gerard.

PERRY — In loving memory of a dear daughter, sister and friend, Elda Perry (Boyle).

Fondly remembered, as memory gets grey proud to announce the birth recurs,
Not destroy, Mother and Dad and family.

Townhouse Rezoning Approved

City council has approved a rezoning application from Maurice H. Rollins Construction Ltd. for a subdivision area south of Bridge Street and east of Elizabeth Crescent to allow higher density construction.

The request is for a change from the present R2 to R4G, which would allow the construction of town housing in the area.

The rezoning application had received favorable consideration from the subdivision planning committee on condition of a site plan being provided and also on a commitment from the developer that he will build single-family dwellings to act as a buffer zone between the town housing and existing single-family housing outside the subdivision area.

Ernest Burnham, retired public utilities manager, appeared as a one man delegation representing area residents before council to protest the rezoning, claiming that the proposed town or row housing could become a potential slum area.

He said residents had purchased their homes knowing there were zoning regulations and were depending on council to protect their investments.

Alderman Robin Jeffrey asked that the resolution approving the rezoning application be held up until a public meeting of ratepayers and the developer could be held.

This, she said, would allow residents to inspect

October Wet

TWEED (Special) — October's rainfall in the Tweed forest district was about double the normal amount, says the department of environment.

A fall of 4.63 inches turned the bush soggy and eliminated the threat of forest fire. The normal amount for the month is 2.67. But October 1972 has set a record. Heaviest rainfall for October occurred in 1955, when 10.83 inches fell.

plans. The townhouses proposed by Mr. Rollins were attractive, she said, and if residents saw the plans it could allay their fears and prevent an OMB hearing.

Alderman Arnold Orr, speaking for the subdivision planning committee, said the main objection at a previous public meeting was that town houses would adversely effect their residences.

However, with a buffer zone of single-family residence to be built by Mr. Rollins, the alderman suggested it would be these homes, if any which would be affected.

Council turned down a tabling motion and on a recorded vote and gave approval to the rezoning application by a 7 to 2 vote. Opposing the motion were Alderman David, Jeffrey and Soulier.

Parking Restriction Is Passed by Council

Despite strong objection from Alderman Robin Jeffrey, who said the move would only compensate residents of Dufferin Ave., city council Monday approved a city traffic committee resolution calling for two-hour, one-side parking on streets in the vicinity of the hospital.

Alderman Jeffrey said residents of her street had no objection to the two - hour parking limit on weekdays but suggested there was no need for the restriction on Saturdays or Sundays.

Alderman Arthur Keegan, ex-chairman of the traffic committee, and Alderman Paul Russell, said, however, that the two-hour parking restriction would alleviate the immediate problems and would afford greater safety for safety for children. Also, it would assist Bayview residents who are protesting vehemently about all-day parking by hospital employees, were in favor of the two-hour restriction.

Another part of the traffic committee recommendation called for city representatives to meet with hospital governors to discuss hospital parking problems.

Alderman Enos David argued that this put the cart before the horse and suggested the meeting with the hospital board should be held before with two-hour parking edict was put into effect.

Alderman Donald Soulier claimed the problem had not been properly researched, claiming that such a parking restriction should be city-wide, not just in the vicinity of the hospital.

Alderman Keegan disagreed, pointing out that in other city areas there is no hospital parking.

"Bayview area people are satisfied with the two - hour parking," he said.

Horticulturalists Meet on Weekend

PICTON — Members of horticulture societies from Belleville, Picton, Brockville, Kingston, Cataraqui, Tweed, Stirling, Napanee, Collins Bay and Rideau Lakes will join in conservation organizations at Kingston, holding their annual meeting in the Frontenac City next year.

An invitation extended by the Kingston societies was accepted at the annual meeting held Saturday at the Four Seasons Motel, Belleville.

Ross McMahon of Kingston was elected district director succeeding Robert Patterson of Belleville who is leaving the district. Philip Dodds, Picton, was named assistant director to succeed William Barratt of Napanee. Mrs. M. Mabee of Gananoque was chosen secretary, Harry McQueen of Brockville, treasurer and Cecil Becker of Belleville, auditor.

It was decided to set up an interim district council to be composed of the executive and two representatives from each society.

Reports of each society indicated growth and activity with the provincial convention in Kingston last June representing the highlight of the year.

Philip Dodds pointed out horticultural societies are the second oldest organization in Ontario and have a membership of 45,000 with 230 organizations.

Mr. Dodds said these groups serve the community in a way different from that of other service clubs and felt they should consider themselves as service organizations.

Other highlights of the annual meeting last weekend included a discussion on pruning by Larry Johnston of Belleville and slide presentations and a lecture on arrangement of a flower show by Al Gardiner, Belleville.

Robert Patterson also used slides, to demonstrate flower photography.

A tour of the Bell Telephone facilities at the Four Season hotel was featured during the meeting.

School Programs Involve Residents

BLOOMFIELD (Staff) — Residents of Prince Edward County are taking an active role in education at Pinecrest Memorial School, Bloomfield through a community involvement program.

More than 200 students Monday divided into three groups to participate in 60-minute programs conducted by—Mrs. Jon Hand, R.N.A., Picton, Mrs. Jack Laundry, East Lake and Miss Margaret Hayjock, Picton.

Mrs. Hand, who recently visited Russia during the Team Canada hockey games, entertained youngsters with vivid descriptions of the Soviet Union. Color slides and souvenirs highlighted her talk.

Mrs. Laundry shared a first hand impression of Hawaii with students eager to study this tropical paradise.

The World of Horses was the topic introduced by Miss Hayjock, who discussed horse and pony breeds, tack and riding.

Question periods followed each of the talks.

Co-ordinator for the afternoon programs was Pinecrest teacher Mrs. Donald Camp.

Mrs. Camp said several other county residents with special interests and hobbies will be invited to speak to students this year.

MAYOR DUNCAN McDONALD

Trenton Mayor Seeks Third Term

TRENTON (Staff) — In a brief statement in his office, Trenton Mayor Duncan McDonald officially announced he will seek his third mayoralty term.

A veteran of more than 19 years on council, Mayor McDonald believes there are no major issues involved in the forthcoming Dec. 4 municipal election, stating most of the issues have already been dealt with openly by council.

He does, however, believe the subject of sewers and street conditions are matters of concern for many residents, and pledges to continue with a program of curb construction, street resurfacing and sewer installation as one of the priorities for 1973.

On the subject of street sewers, Mayor McDonald said he will urge the co-operation of those citizens without such services. "This project w ill have to be done under local improvements," he said, indicating some increase in taxes would be necessary in order that the remainder of the town receive proper installation of services.

He also said he would appeal to the Ontario Municipal Corporation to ask for more low rental and senior citizens housing units to be constructed in Trenton. The mayor said he would do this in light of response to the future construction of a 36-unit senior citizen apartment, on Wragg Street. "There have been many applications received for this than there are units," he told The Intelligencer.

Ski Club Lights Approved

WALLBRIDGE (Staff) — Sidney township council Monday approved a request from the Batawa Ski Club to have street lighting extended to the club parking lot.

Approval to provide limited lighting came after council heard of pending developments for the local ski centre.

Ski club president John Cormack told council the club is installing a T-bar lift that will handle up to 1,200 people an hour for the coming season. He also said the club will have two more ski trails in operation this year and all trails will be illuminated.

However, Cormack expressed the club's desire to have the lighting extended to the parking lot.

However, Cormack expressed the club's desire to have something done about vandalism. He said there has been a problem with culprits stealing hub caps and batteries. Incidental damage has been done to the clubhouse itself.

The club has a lot of hard work and we do not like to come back and find things smashed up," he said.

Cormack said he is confident adequate lighting will help curb the vandalism. Council acceded to the club's request and will light the carpark.

Change Stolen

TRENTON (Staff) Trenton police are investigating an early Tuesday break-in at the Morton-Parker Silversmere plant in Trenton.

Detective - Sergeant Sid Vickers reports thieves smashed a window and then ransacked office drawers. Only item reported stolen was $20 in loose change, the property of one of the employees.

Council Race Opens Up

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

A keen contest for the 10 aldermanic seats open on city council is indicated by the number of aldermanic aspirants who have announced their intention to run for election.

Barring a last minute dark horse entry, the mayoralty will be a straight fight between incumbent Dr. J. Russell Scott and Alderman Robin Jeffrey.

But the aldermanic race will be a wide-open contest between incumbents, ex-councillors and a full slate of newcomers.

To date, only two of the present council, Alderman Jean Smith and Alderman Arnold Orr have announced they will seek re-election. Other incumbents, however, are expected to make their announcement later. They are Alderman Gerald Joyce, Ben Corke, Jack Ireland, Arthur Keegan and Paul Russell.

Alderman Enos David has indicated he will not seek re-election. Alderman Robin Jeffrey is giving up her aldermanic role to contest for the mayoralty.

Alderman Donald Soulier announced Monday in council that he would not seek re-election.

Former aldermen to attempt a comeback on city council are Dr. John Stock and Joseph Rayroft.

Newcomers to the aldermanic race so far include George Zegouras, city merchant, Joe Cox of Wilson Concrete, Rick Williams, Loyalist college teacher and Stu Meeks, Belleville ambulance operator.

And by the end of the nomination period several other newcomers are expected to be in the field.

Under the new election procedure no nomination meetings are required this year, with candidates being replaced by what is known as a nominating period extending from Nov. 9 to Nov. 13.

Under the new procedure, prospective candidates pick up nomination papers at the city clerk's office, have them signed by 10 or more qualified electors and return them to the municipal office.

City Clerk Adam Stalker said today that already quite a number of would-be candidates have called at city hall to pick up nomination papers.

To be elected in Belleville at the Dec. 4 election, are mayor, 10 aldermen, and two members of the public utilities commission. In addition, public school supporters will vote for five trustees to the Hastings County Board of Education, while separate school supporters will vote for six trustees, plus one member at large to the public school board.

Area Ability Fund Tactics Discussed

Regional organizers and workers of the Ability Fund, formerly the March of Dimes, gathered in Belleville Monday to discuss the possibility of bolstering volunteer support and taking a "grass roots" approach to helping the disabled.

As part of a trend to bring administration of the fund to a local level, programs will be investigated for bringing better services directly into more direct involvement with the needs of the disabled.

The meeting of volunteers from Stirling, Trenton, Campbellford, Madoc and Belleville was told by Bill Oaks, director of fund raising for the Ability Fund in Ontario, that whether a volunteer is faced with considerable success in other parts of the province with the goal of trying to find the specific needs of the disabled from the disabled themselves.

Finding the disabled is often difficult, he indicated, saying "it is often largely a role of search and rescue . . . services are not easy to locate."

In Galt, questionnaires were circulated to disabled people and programs there will be geared to individual needs. Belleville Ability Fund chairman Mrs. R. D. Morphy said today these needs may include transportation, recreation, vocational training and companionship.

Under present organization of the Ability Fund, contributions from throughout the province are collected at a central point and distributed from there as needed.

Mrs. Morphy says that within a few years, programs for the disabled and the management of the funds may well be largely a job for the Ability Fund organizations.

The Belleville Ability Fund will be meeting within the next few months to decide whether it will follow the Galt example of surveying the disabled, a first step toward a grass roots approach to the fund's services.

It was resolved at yesterday's gathering that municipalities in this area will end the practice of campaigning for funds in January of each year. Instead, the Ability Fund drive will be conducted from nov on in the month of June.

Guy Wires Halt Road

PICTON (Staff) — Picton mayor Margaret Ackerman cast the deciding vote Monday when council deadlocked concerning an agreement with subdivider William Pannell and the Picton public utilities commission.

The agreement bylaw concerned the extension of municipal services to an apartment building project on Downes Avenue and Simcoe Street and was an amendment to an earlier proposal.

Because of a hydro installation with guy wires extending to a road allowance, the agreement allowed the subdivider to share the construction of the road and drainage facilities, sanitary sewer and water mains.

Reeve Albert Piroth questioned when the new agreement had been authorized by the public works committee and claimed it had never been discussed there when he was in attendance.

Mayor Ackerman explained the amended agreement was mentioned during an orientation of the subdivision when the Ontario hydro warned that guy wires were installed on the road allowance.

Reeve Piroth said the lines could be moved at an approximate cost of $5,000 to permit road construction.

Councillor Harry Ahern suggested removal of the hydro lines and said local growth eventually could demand this be recommended construction of the road according to an agreement presented to council last August.

The councillor criticized local planning and observed with two planning committees little action is taken. "It stinks," he asserted and noted the agreement was originally for a road "to the end of the line."

A recorded vote for the second reading of the bylaw for the agreement was exercised by a split with councillors Ahern, Cronkwright, Walraven and deputy-reeve Piroth opposing it.

In favor were deputy-reeve James Bird, mayor Ackerman and councillors Harold McLoughlin, William Lane and Bessie Ward.

In its third reading, the bylaw was passed when Mayor Ackerman, broke a tie vote again making the count five to four.

Reeve Piroth questioned the cost of hiring town solicitor Jack Wood to draw up the amendment to the agreement and referred to the time required.

He suggested the solicitor could devote his hours to other business if subdividers were required to retain their own lawyers.

Mayor Ackerman explained Mr. Wood charges $50 and at no extra cost to the town since this is covered in the original fee granted to him in the budget.

Mr. Ward informed the reeve his comments were "entirely unfair" and said maybe bylaws cannot be completed in a month's time. He added that his annual retaining fee of $2,000 does not cover the immediate type of service suggested by the reeve.

Canada's Role in NATO and A Changing Europe

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst

Whither NATO in a Europe of common markets, military detentes and U.S.-Soviet summitry?

What of the military shield it represented against a Soviet attack on Western Europe? While West Germany recognized Communist Poland and flirts mightily with East Germany, what purpose now the many West German divisions—and other NATO units keeping watch on the East?

In this crazy and confused world we live in, NATO still must exist for the same reason it was formed in 1949, even though some of these on the surface have lost their justification. That reason is still to serve as Europe's shield against a Russian attack.

East-West relations appear to operate more at a two-tier level than ever. First the high bottom one appears to be the arms build-up which once separated the Communist and non-Communist blocs from speaking to each other.

The top one is the new world of joint trade and economic agreements, of international corporations such as Kroop, Hoesch and Pilkington dealing with Communist regimes to supply expertise or even build their own plants in the East.

The top layer is where the world watches President Nixon and Premier Kosygin sign agreements to restrict nuclear weapon output, agree to cooperate on environmental pollution problems.

Per Canada, the once creditable NATO commitment, cut in half by Ottawa's change of foreign policy priorities in early 1968, still has value. It's less so militarily, more so as a trade-off against future concession if Canada is faced with an even stronger Common Market trade threat.

Our European allies in NATO definitely want a Canadian presence, even if it continues to be a small one. It represents to them some kind of counterweight against the Americans, under pressure from economic events at home to reduce their costly NATO role.

In effect, the "trade off" concept of keeping NATO alive, appears to be the new justification of what was once a purely military alliance.

The Russians on the other hand, cannot evade their Eastern European commitment to the Warsaw Pact, as NATO has been downgraded, for two good reasons. The first is Moscow's lingering fear of another invasion from the West if she reduces her military shield in Poland, East Germany and Czechoslovakia.

The second and more likely, bearing in mind the events in Budapest in 1956, Prague in 1968 and Danzig in 1971, are uprisings among the Soviet satellite nations in Eastern Europe. These would win precious popular support if Russian tanks and troops were not there to subdue them.

These two reasons also indicated why the Warsaw Pact nations will always have more troops and greater hardware than the NATO nations, by far.

In purely military terms, NATO participating countries will match these early if their governments, hard-pressed to reduce military establishments even further, can sell the electorate on the more expensive weapons needed to replace more obsolete NATO weapons.

Take the Canadian case. We still fly aging and dangerous F-104s on photo-reconnaissance missions in West Germany. This aircraft was removed from the U.S. Air Force about eight years ago. The replacement for Canada's hearing tanks in Europe will be a light weapons carrier, recall of composition, but ideal for mobile air lifts.

NATO to many Canadian taxpayers and politicians is a dead issue and has served its purpose.

Bonds for weapons should now go to, say, solving environmental problems.

Immigration 1905-Style

At the age of 17 Channel Islander Thomas LeBreton sailed from Jersey in the 155-ton brigantine "Dawn," bound with five other passengers for Paspebiac on Quebec's Bale des Chaleurs.

It was the year 1905 and Mr. LeBreton, a Belleville resident for a number of years and currently a patient at Belleville General had been engaged by Charles Robin and Co. as storekeeper. With two years retail training already — in Jersey's largest clothing and haberdashery store — behind him, the young man would earn £60 a year for the first three years.

The other passengers had also been engaged to work for the Jersey firms along the Gaspe coast — as apprentice clerks, farmers, mechanics, general servants and one was a beach master returning to Gaspe.

Prior to the turn of the century, according to a narrative of Mr. LeBreton's arrival and experiences in Canada, many Jersey firms had established fishing and trading posts in Newfoundland, as well as Bale des Chaleurs, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. The Robin company which continues to this day as Robin, Jones and Whitman Ltd., was founded in 1766.

In the narrative, forwarded to us by his sister-in-law, Mrs. Mildred Sweeting of Buckingham, Quebec, Mr. LeBreton goes on to describe the Jersey voyage, which was marked by a violent storm in the Bay of Biscay. All the passengers were violently ill.

Finally the vessel reached calmer waters. Mr. LeBreton's new home seemed to him a forbidding place but he soon settled down and progressed from storekeeper to branch manager to purchasing agent. After a disastrous fire some years ago, Mrs. Sweeting says the writing of his memoirs made no further progress, beyond short attempts at subsequent chapters. However, Mr. LeBreton did return to Jersey for a visit, by jet, accompanied by his two sons.

Mr. LeBreton is now 84 and as Mrs. Sweeting points out, her brother-in-law's jet flight would have brought back contrasting memories of his voyage to these shores many years before. She goes on to make this telling observation:

"Like many Canadians, I tend to forget what it 'cost' at one time for others to make their dreams come true to have the opportunity of living in this wonderful country. I wonder how many of us would do what he did now? As we approach Remembrance Day, it seems to me that stories like this take on more meaning, for this was the Canadian way of life that our soldiers sought to preserve."

Christmas Seals

A form accompanying the Hastings Prince-Edward tuberculosis and respiratory diseases association issue of Christmas Seals offers some interesting information which members of the public would do well to heed.

Public contributions for the Christmas Seals help fight crippling respiratory diseases as follows: $1 provides leaflets on how your body fights TB or 100 people or anti-smoking literature for two classrooms or looseleaf charts of the respiratory system for 100 students; $2 provides pamphlets on bronchial asthma for 100 patients or sufficient wall charts on the respiratory system for 50 classes or booklets on How to Improve Your Breathing for 50 people; $3 covers booklets on breathing troubles for 70 emphysema patients or leaflets promoting clean air to 600 people or leaflets on the effects of smoking for 1000 people.

More than 10 per cent of Canadians, the leaflet points out, have chronic bronchitis, emphysema or asthma.

Wires Crossed

In a recent piece entitled Further Rambles we spoke of the area around Cedardale beach and Shoal Point and Barcovan beach. Well it seems our geography may have gone slightly awry, for a long-term resident of Shoal Point informs us that our description of some older properties sounded more like Stoney Point. We had an interesting chat about the historic character of many fine old homes in the Quinte area generally and our informant also noted that a lot of money is being spent on modernizing properties in these various vacation areas.

Westminster's Document On N. Ireland

Montreal Gazette

With publication of William Whitelaw's "green paper" the political fortunes of Northern Ireland appear to be turning up at last. The document is the first official discussion of a new government since the British established the Protestant regime last March and imposed direct rule. By spelling out the alternatives available for decision, the paper will help dispell the dreams of extremists and focus attention on the realities of the referendum expected early next year.

Independence will be out of the question. Those who seek membership in the United Kingdom will know the price of admission if the vote is yes. Ulster will get a single-chamber assembly to control most of the province's domestic affairs. A notable exception will be the police power, which will remain in Westminster.

Two aspects of the would-be government receive strong emphasis. These are its representational character and its job servience to Britain. "At a minimum," it says of the first, this will "involve assuring minority groups of an effective voice and a real influence." Of the second, it says simply, "As long as Northern Ireland remains part of the United Kingdom the sovereignty of the United Kingdom must be acknowledged." Along with the qualifications, however, the paper says that such must and will remain part of the United Kingdom for as long as that is the wish of the majority of the people. The statement should ease the fear of British abandonment felt by many Protestants.

The paper is diplomatic in its approach to the Irish Republic, although that is not the reason it is green. A green paper is a basis for discussion, in contrast to a white paper, which is a statement of fixed policy. A white paper expected after the referendum will form the basis for action by the House of Commons.

The present document points out the geographical unity of Ulster and the republic and states that whatever decision is made must be acceptable to Dublin. It also asserts that Britain will not stand in the way of Irish unity, if Ulster's voters wish it.

The strong indication of Ulster's likely future illuminates for the first time the cryptic path to resolution of the province's difficulties. It is not a prospect that will please the radicals and romantics whose vision is outrun plausibility. There is little here for the IRA, and Bernadette Devlin calls the long as Northern Ireland is unacceptable. Similarly, the militant Ulster Defence Association says "We would not accept any govern ment which did not control internal security." But the mid of the road Ulster Alliance Party calls the paper "a major historical document" and a spokesman for the Fine Gbel Party in Dublin sees in it "a refreshing recognition of a simple truth".

So there it is — a way out of the mess — not all popular, but at least possible, a way that stresses the core of the difficulty rather than the extremes that imparts purpose to the proposed referendum and offers an alternative to chaos.

Davis Increased His Stature On Federal Election Trail

By DON O'HEARN
from The Intelligencer's
Queen's Park Bureau

Before dismissing the federal election a few final comments:

First the Big Blue Machine.

Ever since the election there has been curiosity as to just how big a part the Davis political machine played in the Stanfield gains in Ontario.

The answer seems to be that it was a help but not nearly as important as some people would have it.

Some key people in the party say that the most potent aid from the Ontario party was the endorsement of Stanfield by Premier Davis and his personal activity and interest in the campaign.

In their assessment this gave Stanfield a credibility he needed and also stimulated border-line workers to get into the campaign.

Backing up the opinion that the machine wasn't all that effective is had a good many of the Tory wins such as that of Allan Lawrence in Northumberland Durham and James Gillies in Toronto were clearly the result of good organization and strong effort by the candidates.

There, where does Bill Davis go from here?

The Stanfield gains could set back his hopes of becoming national PC leader.

Mr. Stanfield obviously will be in office for a while now and if still probably be some years before the Ontario premier can fulfill what most people accept as his ultimate ambition.

However Davis is still a young man. He can wait.

And he has, of course, considerably contributed to his potential success by loosing up as largely as he did in the Stanfield campaign.

He now is definitely a national figure, his activities in the campaign were reported and commented on coast to coast several times. And this got him recognition as a power.

Before conceding him the full ailment of his dream, however, a look should be taken to the west where Peter Lougheed in Alberta delivered all its 19 seats to the PC's.

And also to the east where Richmond Hadfield has been attracting a lot of admiration — even though he wasn't able to do much about delivering federal seats in his personal New Brunswick.

Barring the emergence of some outstanding personage in Ontario it is likely these three men will be the main contenders for the next PC leadership, when ever it may open up.

Today In History

The Allies invaded several key points in French North Africa 30 years ago today — in 1942—in a massive thrust against the Germans. The 850 warships under Admiral Sir A. B. Cunningham, defending 500 convoy ships that launched the attack, included 17 Canadian corvettes. At the same time, Lt. Gen. Dwight Eisenhower commanded the invasion, the British 8th Army was pushing Axis forces westward in Africa.

1960—Democratic senator John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts was elected 35th president of the United States.

1942—Carrier HMS Avenger was sunk off Africa with 500 dead.

1936—A cabin boy was the sole survivor of 40 aboard the motorship Isis which foundered off Land's End, England.

Muggers Prey on Poor Too

An Editorial in The Nation
(New York)

It is widely believed that mugging is part of the war of the criminal elements of the ghettos against the prosperous, but that is only one aspect. Actually, muggers prey extensively on the poor in their own neighborhoods — they are not interested in class warfare. That drug addiction has greatly complicated the problems of robbery and burglary is undeniable. It is equally obvious that if there were no slums there would be fewer crimes against persons and property, but it progress is being made in the eradication of slums and rural slums, it is not visible.

On the contrary, what are well under way are strategies by the wealthy and well-to-do to prevent themselves and their lake the hindmost. It is the modern equivalent of the moated castle and takes two forms — the ostensibly mugger-proof suburb, and the high-rise self-contained city building whose tenants need never leave its confines, except perhaps with a bodyguard, and where no one can enter he menace them.

Newsweek (September 25) describes some of these fortresses. "On the outskirts of a score or more of the U.S.'s fastest-growing cities," we are told, "huge security - oriented subdivisions are springing up, some with all the characteristics of a Biblical walled city." But these communities, held together by fear, differ from their ancient prototypes in that they employ the resources of modern technology — computers, closed-circuit TV and other electronic devices; locks with combinations instead of keys; floodlighting, etc. Since mugging appears to be a specialty of black criminals, as white collar crime is of Canadians, blacks are particularly singled out for exclusion, but protection is not the only ground. "Blacks are getting closer to our community in the city all the time," a businessman told Newsweek. "So I will be joining the crowd that's fleeing suburbs. I'll stay with the group I get along with. That's who I'm going to live with, and I want to be sure to keep the lawyers out." He would be keeping them out even if they were as law - abiding as he considers himself to be.

The social tragedy is that divisions within the society are widened by such measures and attitudes. The effect is to insulate the prosperous from the poor and discriminated, but it is fantasy to believe that meaningful security can thus be achieved; on the contrary, apprehensions and fears proliferate.

The effect is to fragment society and its internal differences and tensions. These could be reconciled, of course, but it a price the rich are not prepared to pay, since it involves the social rights-movements — specifically since the riots of 1967 and the assassination of Dr. King — nothing has happened to give than barriers any substantial reason for believing that relief or redress is in sight. Hence is one result, the continuing degradation of the drug problem and a kind of cold war between the haves and have-nots.

American Gets Job

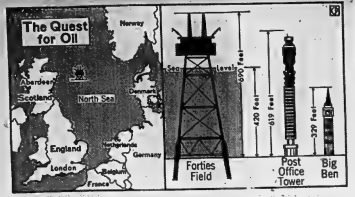
Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I was startled when I noted in your Thursday edition that a director for Prince Edward Heights had been selected, and he seems to be an American citizen.

Is there no Canadians who could capably fill this position?

I seem to remember when a few weeks back when a police chief was selected for a Canadian and he, too, was an American citizen. This stirred a public outcry.

Let's keep Canadian jobs for qualified Canadians.



In the news, tonight there is an item regarding a certain senior hockey executive who seems to be getting "preferential" treatment at one of our penal institutions.

I ask you, Mr. Editor, does not the public hold true that "Mercy talks".

F. H. AKEY,
Point Anne

Democrats Keep Grip on Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The voters who gave President Nixon his landslide victory Tuesday also elected a Congress almost as firmly in Democratic hands as the House of Representatives and Senate with which Nixon dealt during his first term.

The Democrats widened their margin in the Senate by at least two. The Republican incumbent was running ahead in Michigan in the last undecided race. If he kept his lead, the division in the new Senate would be 57 to 43.

With only seven of the 435 House races undecided, Republicans had made a net gain of 11 compared with the 41 needed to take control. And some of the new Republicans replace conservative southern Democrats who generally had voted with the administration.

It appeared the few Congress would have at least 16 women members, compared with 12 in the last Congress. The number of black members seemed likely to increase to 16 from 13.

The Senate outcome was an especially hard blow to the Republicans who had weeded off the House, but needed a gain of only five to take control of the Senate and thought there was a real chance.

Two Republicans were elected to the House from Mississippi and one from Louisiana, the first since the reconstruction period after the Civil War. And in Virginia, William Scott defeated Senator William Spong to become the first Republican senator from the Old Dominion since 1892.

The ticket-splitting voters across the country conformed to no pattern, but ousted conservative incumbents here and liberals there.

Death Penalty Popular

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — Californians voted Tuesday to override their high courts and restore the death penalty.

In a referendum conducted along with the presidential ballot, they voted almost two to one to resume executions in the gas chamber at San Quentin.

Californians voted on a wide range of issues by referendum in the election. They voted against legalizing marijuana and against stern censorship measures to combat pornography.

Agnew Shapes Up as '76 Candidate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spiro Agnew, assured of another four years in the vice-presidency and the base for a possible presidential bid himself in 1976, says there must be an effort to reconcile the winners and losers in Tuesday's election.

"We must reach out the hand of conciliation to those who opposed us," Agnew said Tuesday night.

Agnew, who celebrates his 54th birthday Thursday, told cheering supporters after the victory: "I hope the performance of the Nixon-Agnew administration will satisfy not only those who support the ticket this year, but those who didn't."

Even before Agnew spoke at the victory celebration in a Washington hotel, some Republican party officials were talking about an Agnew presidential candidacy in 1976.

"It'll be Agnew and Teddy in '76," one party worker said. The reference was to Senator Edward M. Kennedy (Dem., Mass.).

"Twelve more years, 12 more years," partisans chanted as the vice-president was introduced.

Picks Quick

NEW YORK (AP) — All three major American broadcasting networks made early projections of President Nixon's re-election Tuesday night.

NBC's projection came at 8:30 p.m. EST and was based on an estimate that Nixon had won 277 electoral votes. A total of 270 is needed for victory.

CBS based its Nixon victory projection on an estimated 286 electoral votes at 8:33 p.m. EST.

ABC projected Nixon's re-election on an estimate of 281 electoral votes at 9:21 p.m. EST.

Nixon Lost Battle, Won War

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite losing New York City, President Nixon swept the state by more than one million votes and recorded his 41 electoral votes in his echoing for the first time in three runs for the presidency.

Running on the Republican and Conservative party lines, Nixon ran up 4,023,130 votes in the state, or 60 per cent, with 53 per cent of the 12,998 precincts reported. Senator George McGovern had 2,785,743 votes.

McGovern's victory margin was less than 100,000 votes in New York City, where he made numerous campaign appearances. The South Dakota senator had his biggest edge in Manhattan and also won in Brooklyn and the Bronx.

No Republican White House candidate has carried both city and state since Calvin Coolidge performed the feat in 1924.

Fun and Fitness at Family Y

A formula to beat fatigue and promote a feeling of well-being is now being offered to Belleville housewives and working women.

Belleville's Family Y has a the formula, but it promises no magic. The road to increased stamina is the old one — exercise and more exercise, in hour - long work - outs twice a week.

But the effort is worth it, claim the more than 50 women enrolled this year in the women's fitness program. In the two months they have participated, a large number have reported firmer muscles and less flab.

And fitness does produce dividends of increased flexibility, more stamina and less fatigue.

The women tell me they get through their housework faster and find it less tiring, says Y fitness instructor Mrs. Kay Hall.

Exercise has become a science, carefully calculated to increase the capacity of the heart and lungs without putting undue strain on either.

For instance, did you know it is as harmful to the heart to suddenly stop strenuous exercise and remain still as it is to jump into a brisk workout without a preliminary warm-up?

The Y offers an hour of recreational swimming or use of the sauna after each fitness class.

But the program is strictly do - it - yourself.

"I'm not a believer in machines," says Mrs. Hall.

She is living proof of the value of exercise. Once an asthmatic, she has found she seldom wheezes since she began her fitness program.

The twice-weekly sessions at the Y must be augmented with daily practice at home to achieve the full fitness potential of each individual.

The Y fitness town between fitness classes every Tuesday and Thursday morning at 9:30 and another Tuesday and Thursday at 7:30 p.m. for working women. There is a nursery available for a nominal sum in the mornings for pre-school children.

Church Holds Anniversary

RAWDON — On Sunday, November 5, Mount Pleasant United Church on the Rawdon charge was filled to capacity with friends from the surrounding area on the occasion of the 101st church anniversary.

Rev. John Morrison, Campbellton was the minister in charge and conducted the service. Special music was presented by Harvey Ouch and sons, Kenneth and Douglas. The organist was Mrs. Mae Sharp. Miss Jeanne Hoard, was piano accompanist for the junior choir.

Ten hymnaries were dedicated in memory of Mrs. John Holmes and sons Clifford, Kenneth and Douglas. John Holmes and Miss Annie Holmes donated the books. Another hymnary was dedicated in memory of Gorden Linn, a gift from the neighborn.

Ushers at the church were Grant Dunham, David Jeffs, Terry Bailey and Donald Hubel.

Fellowship Service Held

STIRLING — The annual fellowship service held each autumn for all churches convened in St. Paul's United Church, Stirling on Wednesday evening. The UW president, Mrs. Ray Keating extended a warm welcome to approximately 140 women present.

Representatives from all churches in the village attended. Three other church representatives in the Rawdon charge; Mount Pleasant, Bethel and Springbrook were there also.

Mrs. Ross Jeffs presented the devotional theme assisted by Mrs. Herbert Smith, Mrs. Robert Hoard and others.

Miss Barbara Vardy of Grace Chapel sang with Mrs. Kenneth Broadworth as piano accompanist. Sandra LaChapelle, Elizabeth Marie Kerby and Jack Sontrop from St. James the Minor Roman Catholic Church contributed two vocal solos with guitar accompaniment.

Mrs. Ray Donnan and Mrs. Melville Grills of Good Tidings Pentecostal Church collected the offering which will be a special gift to the Plainfield Home for Retarded Children.

During the program, an imaginary television program was in charge of Mrs. John May and Mrs. George Williams. Commercials were sa-ed by Mrs. Maurice Clancy and Mrs. Jack Bush.

Mrs. Blake Faulkner closed the program with prayer.

A buffet luncheon was in charge of Mrs. James Gough and her unit.

Cosmetic Regulation Urged

EDMONTON (CP) — Stricter regulations for the cosmetic industry" have been urged by a consumer research group in a letter to Heal h Minister John Munro.

Save Tomorrow Oppose Pollution, based on a report made by researcher Ammonite Ruder, requested that cosmetics be made subject to strict labelling laws which would make listing all ingredients mandatory.

Ms. Ruder, who said "she preferred to be identified this way, said S.T.O.P. became interested in cosmetic regulation when the organization became aware of possible dangers of the chemical beachlorophene as an additive in cosmetics.

Canada imposed restrictions on hexachlorophene last May, requiring that products containing more than 75 per cent of the chemical be available only on prescription. Use of the chemical in the United States was restricted more recently after research showed several babies bathed in solutions of hexachlorophene suffered brain damage.

Ms. Ruder said what started as an inquiry into shampoo, skin cleaning and deodorant products containing hexachlorophene led to disturbing findings on other aspects of regulations on the cosmetic industry.

Among the report's findings was that the food and drug directorate, which has jurisdiction over cosmetic products, "can act only after a cosmetic has been sold and has caused injury or has been proven to have been mis-labelled."

The report expressed concern over evidence that hormone creams with a high estrogen content, advertised to prevent skin wrinkles, are sold without proper labelling, though deemed potentially dangerous in an American Medical Association publication.

Ms. Ruder's research uncovered evidence of what the report termed "the myth of the rare ingredient" where such substances as mink oil, turtle oil, and royal jelly, are common, inexpensive ingredients added to cosmetics sold at high prices.

Such additives, said the report, have no proven beneficial results.

The report said there is "hope in sight" through proposed United States legislation which would demand registration of manufacturers and disclosure of all products, formulas and labels.

S.T.O.P. said it wants this type of legislation introduced in Canada, including the submission of test results and manufacturing descriptions of cosmetics made subject to government inspection.

As a footnote to her research, Ms. Ruder advised the public to:

—Return products that cause irritation, itching or swelling of any part of the body.

Be alert to any discomfort to eyes or breathing while using hair spray.

—Return products that don't live up to their advertising claims.

—Buy products sold with a guarantee of satisfaction and return them if they don't satisfy.

Announcing Our Compact!
Our compact isn't like the popular "small car compact" syndrome. The ones that are striped inexpensive and usually tiny. Almost the only similarity between our "compact" and theirs is the word. The BERNINA 807 "compact" is every bit the great sewing machine all the other BERNINAS are, except it's more compact. It has as many built in stitches as you'll really want and all of them are stretch stitches for the new fabrics.
It even has VARI-OVERLOCK, a feature usually only found on professional factory machines.
The BERNINA 807 "compact" is Swiss precision built to make all sewing chores a pleasure, so if you're looking for the ultimate in sewing machine excellence, but would like it on the "compact", then here it is. The new BERNINA 807.
Sometimes good things do come in small packages. Wide choice of cabinets and fully guaranteed.

Ann Landers

Prize Money Awarded to Winner – Not His Team

Dear Ann Landers: We are average people, middle income, married three years, and we have a small child. We are not in dire financial straits but we do have to budget our money.

My husband loves to bowl and is good at it. His team buddies are all nice fellows and there is an unspoken agreement that the tournament money won by a team, or any money won by individuals, would be put in a kitty and used for a evening out for the team members and their wives. The largest amount in the kitty was $50.

Now the problem: A few weeks ago my husband entered the all-city tournament. He won first prize. It was the men's singles and the purse was $1,000. The tax on that money is $200. We offered to take the team and their wives to the best place in town for dinner and dancing. We figured it would cost about $200. They all screamed, "No fair!" They want the prize money divided among the team members. My husband and I are hurt. We feel they should have settled for the evening out and been happy for us. This disagreement has caused hard feelings and we are sad about it. Please, Ann, tell us what to do. We are going to abide by your decision.—P.D.

Dear P.D.: If the team members want to get together and change the deal for future wins, that's another story. But the opposition of this prize money has already been determined. So—divide the $1,000 (less the tax you must pay) and then it would be nice if they took you and your husband out for a night on the town.

Dear Ann Landers: Forgive me for asking a question about your job, but I'm really fascinated. I find myself adding a year. I know I can't keep this up. When our daughter starts school we can't lie about her age. One day she might ask to see our marriage certificate. What should I do?—Home To Rest

We have moved to a new neighborhood and when people ask me how long we've been married I find myself adding a year. I know I can't keep this up. When our daughter starts school we can't lie about her age. One day she might ask to see our marriage certificate. What should I do?—Home To Rest

Dear H: Tell the truth. Make no explanation to the neighbors. If, in a few years, your daughter asks questions, provide her with honest answers.

Dear Undecided: The woman who expects a face-lift to take 10 years off her age is in for a disappointment, unless, of course, she has some glaring cosmetic defect, such as pronounced bags under the eyes or gross sagging of the jowls.

A supple slim figure will go a lot further toward making a woman look younger than facial surgery. But of course it means giving up some of those gourmet delights and exercising regularly. Most women would rather have an operation. It's easier to put the burden on a surgeon.

Brighteners Do Inspire

By DORIS CLARK

"How far that little candle throws his beams! So shines a good deed in a naughty world." — from Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice.

How far do you let your candle throw its beams? There are times when a chance remark can light up a wide area. Like ever-widening ripples in a pond.

— A brief reference to a certain fine book of inspiration gave a lift which turned an older man's discouragement into new hope. He then bought copies for four friends.

— My visit to International People's College and report to you, my readers, sent Lena Ambrose there for six months of exciting learning.

Club Activities

BELLEVILLE SR. CITIZES CLUB NO. 94

The regular meeting of the Belleville Senior Citizens club No. 94 was held at the Recreation Centre with junior vice - president, Mrs. Lulu Longhurst chairing the meeting in the absence of the president, Mrs. Kath'een Moon. Mrs. Lulu Adams was pianist for the opening ceremony.

Three new members were received into the club and one visitor, Mrs. Greta Tanner: from Richmond, B.C. was given a hearty welcome. Minutes of the previous meeting were read by Mrs. Retha Bowers and Mrs. Elsie Jackson gave the financial standing. Mrs. Gertrude Gist gave the report on those who were ill. Mrs. Jessie LaLonde reported on the euchres.

A letter was read from Mrs. Vickers announcing her resignation as euchre convener due to poor health.

Mrs. Wilma Summers, was asked by Mrs. Longhurst to conduct the election of a treasurer and recording secretary. Mrs. Elsie Latchford was elected as treasurer and Mrs. Marjorie Austin, the recording secretary.

Mrs. Longhurst thanked Mrs. Summers.

Members were invited to attend the craft program starting Nov. 8 from 10 to 12 a.m. by Mrs. Moyncs.

Mr. Peal, his three children and William Walker performed during the entertainment program.

Thanks was expressed by Mrs. Bedell. Following the program, refreshments were served by Mrs. Tryan and helpers.

Couple Wed 60 Years

TWEED — Over 100 friends and relatives gathered at the hall in Fernleigh to honor the couple married longer than anyone in the area, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Flieler, of Fernleigh.

They were married in Flinton, 60 years ago by S. Ferguson, the first Methodist minister on the Flinton circuit.

Allan and Harriett were both born in Fernleigh, and have lived there all their lives.

Allan sang his version of "Golden Wedding Days". He changed the words to read "Diamond Wedding Days". Many gifts, including a pair of matched family rings from their daughter Beatrice, (Mrs. John Schoenauer) and their son Bill were presented. The normandy gift was a large wall mirror and a pair of matching pin-up lamps.

A card of recognition was received from the Prime Minister, Pierre Elliott Trudeau, W. J. Natsall, Member of Parliament from Toronto, presented the couple with a 60 year plaque on behalf of Premier W. G. Davis.

Lunch was served following the presentation.

The Experts Say Librarians and Book Shoppers

TORONTO (CP) — If you would like to buy a book for a child for Christmas or any other time, there are eople positively eager to help you get your way through the massos there are to choose from.

Libraries have book lists, they have a Young Canada Book Week starting Nov. 15, they have books. Most helpful of all, they have librarians.

Margaret Johnston, head of boys and girls services for the Toronto libraries, said parents come to us for suggestions, and we encourage it. They really employ us to do this for them, you know."

Miss Johnston said the reasons for choosing a book for a child are the same as the reason you'd use judgjer an adult book. Know something about the child and his interests. then consider: the book on its content, style, characterizations, on its truth and the reliability of the information in it.

She said all bot the youngest children can help choose.

"Even among the pre-school children using the library. Their specialities get developed. They tell us if they liked a book or not, it's their expression of what they have enjoyed.

"Remember, the bookstore people can be salesmen who will say 'This book is popular,' or 'This goes well for seven-year-olds.' The right book for the right child at the right time should reply.

Fiction is where it is the most difficult to do the choosing. But there is a body of children's literature that is the children's rightful inheritance, books like The Wind in the Willows and Alice in Wonderland. They don't die because the children keep them alive, and others get added over the years."

She named E. B. White's Charlotte's Web and the Lion, The Witch and the Wardrobe, by C. S. Lewis, as two fairly recent "additions."

Miss Johnston said a lot of children's books now are available in paper backs, that can bo inexpensive gifts. Boys and Girls House in Toronto and other libraries have lists.

Many libraries had other lists available. The federal government put out a list for Book Week, and many libraries had displays from Book Week that might provide inspiration.

Miss Johnston said young people now are encouraged to use any part of a library and the fell they should be allowed to try books that may be too difficult.

"Let them go ahead and get what they can from it. Adults don't always get everything they can out of a book or a lecture."

She said she sees no harm in some trash reading.

"A steady diet of it dulls the mind. If there's no exercise in re a ding, you're going to leave it. But I think they should all have some trash in their lives. This is the main use to enjoy books."

Marion Cooke, head of Boys and Girls House, told the circulation to children's librarians hasn't dropped appreciably, but that it's at its heaviest during the grade school years. Through adolescence, books have a lot of competition from sports, social life, television. But she said a child who has been reading will come back.

"It's the mental stimulation that makes reading valuable, and it's a very personal thing. Each person who reads a book gets something different out of it, and no one else can share it.

"A child is never too young to start off on books. Even at a year to a year and a half, they can have the nursery rhymes read to them, I think. Then you can progress to simple books, the Beatrix Potters.

"If the parents read and read to the young children, the children will come to books."

Biologists Fear End of Research

OTTAWA (CP) — A Senate committee report that criticized the National Research Council (NRC) was itself criticized by one of NRC's advisory committees Tuesday.

The advisory committee on biology, in a seven-page critique on the 600-page report of the Senate's special committee on science policy, said "the NRC has served Canada well and has been an important factor in the development of research in Canada."

The advisory committee said because of recent trends "there is a serious danger that pure research will be extinguished."

"We particularly deplore the general implication of the Senate report which would in effect remove the basic research functions of the National Research Council."

The Senate committee recommended NRC's pure research role be cut and that it become more of a granting council. However, it made other proposals for ways pure research might be continued even if NRC's role was changed.

Dr. Mary Spencer, professor of plant biochemistry at the University of Alberta, Edmonton, and chairman of the advisory committee, said the report had particularly expressed the feelings of the university community.

She said it was "essential to maintain the NRC."

"It is very difficult times for universities and they couldn't be expected to take over (pure research now done by the council)."

Dr. D. J. LeRoy, a member of the advisory committee and vice-president of the NRC, said it was probable that the council meeting, which ends today, would not make any comment on the critique because "the NRC doesn't express approval or disapproval of the actions of another arm of the federal government (the Senate)."

He said the report was not a document of the NRC expressing council views, but that it did represent the views of a special committee of volunteers who reported to the council.

Missing 'Copter Not Found

WINNIPEG (CP) — Fifteen aircraft search unsuccessfully Tuesday along a 250-mile route between Winnipeg and Norway House at the northern tip of Lake Winnipeg for four men reported missing Friday on a helicopter flight.

The men were picking up bolt boxes from the Oct. 30 federal election in remote areas of Churchill riding. One bolt box is believed to have been aboard the helicopter when it was reported missing.

Two of the missing men, Ian Fraser, 23, and Nathan Kryger, 22, were listed as messengers. The third passenger, Gerry Walsh, 32, is an election clerk. All three are Thompson, Man., residents. The pilot is Al Giebmanns, 37, of Winnipeg.

Papers Got No Orders By Irving

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — Moncton publisher T. K. Grainger testified at the Irving newspaper combines trial Tuesday that he makes policy decisions for the Moncton Times and Transcript without instructions from Irving executives in Saint John, N.B.

He said K. C. Irving Ltd. has never exercised any control or direction over his papers nor has there been any interference by Ralph Costello, publisher of the Irving-owned Saint John Telegraph-Journal and Times-Globe. Mr. Costello was also chairman of the Moncton papers' board of directors until last April.

Mr. Grainger told the New Brunswick Supreme Court that he appointed his own executives without reference to Mr. Costello and set his own advertising rates. His editors wrote their editorials without direction from Saint John.

He said he knew nothing about the 1968 Irving acquisition of the Fredericton Gleaner until he read about it in his paper.

The board of directors had reappointed him president of the Moncton Publishing Co. Ltd. each year since Irving interests bought him out in 1947. If he wanted a raise in salary he looked to no one but himself.

Prosecutor William Hoyt questioned Mr. Grainger about an entry in the company's 1967 financial statement labed "head office expense." The publisher said he did not know what the figure meant and he would have to ask company auditors for an explanation. The only head office he knew about was in Moncton.

Recount Set For Oct. 30

WINNIPEG (CP) — County Court Judge C. I. Ketlh will conduct a judicial recount Friday of ballots cast in Selkirk riding in the Oct. 30 federal election.

Returning Officer Grant Del Bigio said last Friday his official count gave New Democrat Doug Rowland a victory by a margin of only 13 ballots.

Mr. Del Bigio's count gave Mr. Rowland, who was first elected to the Commons in 1970, a total of 18,046 votes to 18,033 for Conservative Dean Whitesway.

Nickel Belt Recount Asked

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — Gaetan Serre, Liberal candidate in Nickel Belt riding in the Oct. 30 federal election, Tuesday advised his lawyer to file application for a judicial recount of ballots.

Mr. Serre, who lost by 1,932 votes to New Democrat John Rodriguer, said he wants the recount because 4,718 ballots, or 13 per cent of the total vote, were spoiled.

Mr. Rodriguer polled 14,833 votes to 12,101 for Mr. Serre.

Blind Woman May Stay

TORONTO (CP) — Immigration Minister Bryce Mackasey decided Tuesday to issue a blind United States woman with a discretionary permit to remain in Canada for one year, overriding a deportation order issued against her a year ago.

Lynn Hackett, sightless since birth, was ordered deported because she suffers from epilepsy and thus was classed as a prohibited person. She also failed to score enough points on her visa application to qualify for landed immigrant status.

Signature Forged On Order for Jet

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — Mayor Ed McNeely said Tuesday the investigation into Oshawa's role in the crash of an F-86 Sabre jet last Sept. 24 in Sacramento, Calif. that killed 72 persons, disclosed that the city's purchase order for a jet airframe contained a forged signature.

The mayor said the investigation now is in the hands of the Crown attorney's office. However no one at the office would comment.

The investigation was ordered by Mr. McNeely after the jet, allegedly destined to be a monument in Oshawa, crashed into an ice-cream parlor in Sacramento.

Canadian government officials in Washington said following the accident that Crown Assets Corp., which disposes of Canada's surplus government property, sold two stripped down F-86 jets to Oshawa.

Mr. McNeely said the city ordered only one jet airframe and it now is a monument at the city's airport. He said he has instructed the city solicitor to investigate the ownership of the jet monument.

Jack Mann, former general manager of the Chamber of Commerce which was involved in the purchase, said a document shown him during the investigation did have an "X" for more than one frame.

"However, when the order left my hands to go to Ottawa there was just one airframe on order," he said.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1972

Detours, Headaches Really Necessary If City Services Are to Continue

By BRIAN AMARON
Staff Reporter

"This has definitely been the worst year yet for traffic."

That sentiment by Harold Reid, deputy chief of the Belleville Police Department, would certainly be echoed by most city residents.

Driving in Belleville in 1972 became an exercise in patience and frustration. At almost every turn — coming or going — work crews were tearing up roads to provide quicker traffic flow or install underground pipes.

The city's five major exit arteries were all under construction at one time or another.

One, Cannifton Road, was out of commission for most of the summer. Drivers who have negotiated perilous Dundas St. west in recent months probably with the same precaution had been taken there.

North Front Street has been restricted twice and more work may be forthcoming next year. Even the luxury of five smooth lanes on Dundas East in front of the hospital can't obliterate the memory of dusty, dartine treks earlier in the year.

And who can ever forget those long line-ups at the Bay Bridge waiting for the light to change.

What's Gained

What has the city gained for its $5-million worth of trouble?

The complete results won't be evident for some time but city engineer Wilbur Purcell can see the outcome.

"We are beginning to make inroads into our major streets," he says. "If we get them done in five years . . . a people can at least get through the city on good roads."

Mr. Purcell was referring to arterial routes — Dundas, North Front and Cannifton Road.

But Deputy Chief Reid feels the biggest bottleneck has been the four Corners.

"We've had to place men on duty at the foot of Campbell Street as well as at the Four Corners," he observed.

Even during non rush-hour periods, police have been faced with the task of funneling three lanes of traffic into one across Bumey Bridge Street. The situation has also created problems on the Dundas and Upper Bridge where the two lines of cars have become the rule.

No Choice

There was no choice but to proceed, though, insists Mr. Purcell. As well as pertaining it to the new sewer in the Moira River, timing of the project enabled the city to get $30,000 in provincial subsidies that would likely not be forthcoming if it had work been delayed until next year.

When construction is complete early in December, buildings in the northwest corner of the city will be tied into a sanitary sewer for the first time. Until now, wastes were deposited directly into the river.

In addition, the storm sewer from Pinnacle to the river has been replaced. The old conduit backed up several times after it was constructed. A new pipe system under Pinnacle Street several years ago.

"There was only one mistake we made," said Mr. Purcell. "We didn't consider the store owners and their opinion about the situation."

The Downtown Businessmen's Association recently claimed business in the Bridge-Front area has declined by as much as 40 per cent since work began in October.

Repercussions were almost as bad as construction itself on Cannifton Road, says Purcell.

"Tying the road up that long was a big difficulty for us. Without that, other problems wouldn't have been so noticeable."

The road cut-off and adjacent detour became necessary to enable workers to install the first stage of a major trunk sewer built at a cost of $1.4-million that will serve northeast Belleville and eventually southern Thurlow Township.

Services Needed

There has been an urgent need for serviced land if Belleville is to attract new industry, industrial commissioner Fred Beamish has frequently stated. With no adequate services available from December on, the industrial park south of Highway 401 may acquire new residents.

Cannifton Road has also been improved somewhat, with an extra two feet of width added between Highway and McFarland Streets, not to mention a smoother surface. Another layer of asphalt will be applied in the spring, eliminating penetrating manhole covers.

Dundas Street has provided the city — and many drivers — with another sore spot.

Work at both ends began as a matter of expediency to accommodate related projects nearby.

In the east end, officials decided to go ahead with highway widening at the same time as the hospital was being expanded so that BGH would not be faced with further disruptions next year.

At the other end, the road is being widened to four lanes from Holden Street, just west of the Bay Bridge Road, to the city limits. There it will connect with Highway 2, still over the Canadian Pacific grade crossing and carry on to Trenton.

Most Done

Except for some underground installations, most of this year's work has been done. The entire route through to Trenton is expected to be open next fall.

Drivers on North Front Street were recently granted a reprieve as a month intervened between sewer projects above Sidney Street.

The road was cut to two lanes while a large storm sewer draining the area north of Tracey Street was dropped into place. Despite pressure from city officials, work took longer than expected when the contractor was unable to supply 'someone to resurface the road.

Two weeks ago, Belleville Utilities Commission set up breaking signs to begin installation of a 1,400-foot water main. The old pipe, inherited from Thurlow Township 12 years ago, was smaller than planned for the new one and had broken in 18 places since 1955.

Weather permitting, work should wind up this week, although there's no guarantees more pipe won't be replaced next year.

BUC's other large-scale operation has been the watermain emanating from a $½-million gallon reservoir now being built near Herchimer Ave. Together, the projects cost $1.15-million and will ensure adequate water pressure for the city's north and east ends.

The only resulting traffic holdups occurred along Station Street east of the Canadian National station where a detour was set up, on College which was closed for a week in the Hillcrest area, and at the corner of Stanley and Russell Streets where pipe crews cut off one side of the intersection.

Farley Street was also dug up along the east side while a 16-inch main was installed, but traffic was not impeded.

While Quinte residents and visitors raised a collective howl, the Bay Bridge was confined to one lane during July and August — height of the tourist season. Fortunately the ancient structure now has a clean bill of health, although demands for a new bridge will undoubtedly continue.

Still With Us

The other major tie-up will be with us for some time. West end residents are well aware of the infamous Sidney - West Moira junction and have learned to bypass the potholes with alarm-like dexterity.

Officials expect two lanes — paved or otherwise — will be open on Sidney Street this winter to carry vehicles over the CN double track. Once that portion is ready, workmen will tear down the existing wooden bridge and continue the four-lane expansion.

Problems in the area are compounded by the fact that a new intersection had to be designed for the crossing. West Moira between Sidney and Yeomans has been closed for some time although the approach should be finished before the end of the year, thereby solving one part of the maze.

Elsewhere, utilities crews replaced a 500-foot watermain on Prince of Wales Drive in Queen Mary Park and installations on Harriett-Street and Elgin Street in September. Ballast replacement under the CPR tracks on Dundas Street - East in September closed the road to two lanes for four days.

Alderman Art Keegan, chairman of the Traffic and Light Committee, says the city must go through a complicated procedure before the provincial government grants approval to roads projects.

"We can't always do the work when we want to," he says.

Deputy Chief Reid, meanwhile, feels things could have been worse in 1972. Commenting on the Cannifton Road situation, he said:

"A lot of people used the detour because it was well marked. The other arteries were all manageable. We haven't had too much fuss."

But the future could be another story, according to city engineer Purcell.

"By all appearances, this is going to continue for a few years. We're just beginning to make inroads into the major streets," he says.

More to Come

Still to come are the widening of Dundas Street from Front to Bleecker Ave., widening of Sidney Street from Catherine to College Street, sewer installation in Hillcrest, the Pinnacle Street bridge, a grade crossing over the CN tracks on Cannifton Road and widening of Bridge Street West between Highland and Sidney. Victoria Ave. is also slated for improvement but that project is probably two years away.

While the worst is not yet over, Mr. Purcell's optimistic.

"Just 10 years ago, North Front Street had only two lanes, including the bridge over the CN tracks. Now look at what we've accomplished."

But, he warns, don't get your hopes up that your three-lane-ing alley is next in line.

"It's going to be a long time before we get to the side streets. I don't think people want to spend the money."

Uniform Ad Law Advocated

The federal government must initiate uniform advertising regulations, says a leading Canadian salesman.

Lynn Helpard, president of the Canadian Advertising and Sales Association (CASA), warned that if Ottawa does not step in, marketers will be forced to do a different sales approach for each province — a costly proposition that would result in higher prices for consumers.

Mr. Helpard made his remarks at a dinner last night at Sag Lack Gardens. He was addressing members of sales and ad clubs, many of whom came from across the country to attend yesterday's board meeting at the Quinte Hotel.

The Montreal sales supervisor cited several examples of what he termed "marketing law fragmentation."

In Quebec, an order in council has eliminated cartoon characters from television centred advertisements. Consequently, two commercials must be made — for Quebec and for the rest of Canada.

Another regulation stipulates that all package labeling in Quebec must be equally bilingual. The result, says Mr. Helpard, is the manufacturers are forced to produce packages in two languages for Quebec and in English for more central areas such as British Columbia where French is unnecessary. Problems are therefore increased in stock control and production.

"The company can only absorb so much of the additional costs. The rest is passed along to the consumer.

Politicians, in particular, are apt to jump on the anti-advertising bandwagon, claims Mr. Helpard.

"They say 'others aren't acting' and take it upon themselves to fight. After all, it makes great grist for the press."

He points to Richmond Hill, Ont., and Victoria as examples of communities where after politicians went too far. Both cities introduced bans on outdoor advertising — specifically billboards — as anti-pollution measures, a stance CASA has formally opposed.

Mr. Helpard also urged the see the federal government, through the ministry of consumer and corporate affairs, apply a "stiffer line" to the provinces to prevent fragmentation and keep prices down.

"CASA has taken it upon itself to educate the public to the spiral being created," he said.

Consumers are the victims of ill-advised legislators in another sense.

"When courses for consumerism are established by the ministry of consumer and corporate affairs, they failed because people did not want to lose their right to make decisions," said Mr. Helpard.

But phone boxes across the country to consumer experts followed.

"It is gilding the lily. Government is overreacting to a problem that is not as bad as people seem to think it is."

Mr. Helpard struck a note for capitalism when he stated:

"Business built this country, not lawyers, politicians or doctors. This is the heritage that has been left to us."

In conclusion, he said Canada was "faced with creeping socialism" and warned his fellow sales experts to be "gently offensive but no longer defensive."

Chairman of the dinner was Carolyn Emerson, president of the Women's Sales and Ad Club of Belleville which organized the dinner and afternoon luncheon.

ROGER PORTER

Porter Will Run For City Council

Roger Porter, president of the Belleville Downtown Association, yesterday announced his bid for a seat on city council in the upcoming municipal election.

A resident of the city for the past 20 years, Mr. Porter says the past number of years managing Barclay and Crawford, stock brokers.

He moved recently to Pitfield, Mackay, Ross and Company.

Mr. Porter has busied himself in the community as president of the merchants' association and was instrumental in designing of a fund used to hire Belleville as an "improvement area."

Through a variety of legal channels, Mr. Porter found a way to levy an additional tax to merchants, which would create a fund that would be used for redevelopment of the downtown section.

While no issue is seen by Mr. Porter as major in the upcoming election, he says a key area of interest to him is the development of the waterfront, river and Front Street.

"I am not taking care of just my business associates the downtown but striving to uplift the area," he said.

The entire community has to benefit when work is done downtown," said Mr. Porter.

Mr. Porter said, "I am making the time available to be able to get involved into the city where I live and staying. I want a hand in shaping Belleville."

Mr. Porter looks at no faces of municipal politics more than the other, but intends doing a lot of homework, finding out what council is all about and work from there.

He intends to get involved with committees but says, "It would be a mistake to hire if too much by joining too many."

It's wiser to concentrate on one area and be able to make sound decisions in it rather than spreading my time and myself too thin over a large number of committees," he said.

Mr. Porter intends leaving the downtown body shortly but will retain a seat on the fund management committee, coming off from the redevelopment scheme.

Delegation Protests Hydro Line

Name - calling, finger-pointing and speculation began at last night's public meeting when a Napanee delegation asked for help in fighting Ontario Hydro.

Armed with maps and charts of the area, the four-member delegation complained to the Belleville group (People Against Contaminated Environment) "they were getting nowhere in their talks with Ontario Hydro regarding a high transmission line" proposed to cross the Bay of Quinte from the Lennox Generating Station in the Adolphustown area to Prince Edward County.

The power line would be a main feeder of electricity to the county.

To bridge the 3,200 - foot gap above the bay, a 329-foot tower would have to be built on either side, with approximately five towers one mile inland to a Prince Edward County transformer.

The dlegation argued on the grounds that the finest selling point of the bay is its beauty and its attraction to tourists. This would be ruined by the power corridor and overhead lines, they said.

Sight lines in all would span the bay.

The delegation claimed it had several times tried to get Ontario Hydro Chairman Hydro who responded "amiably," but "inconclusively".

At first we were told there was a possibility that the line could go underwater," said one spokesman, "but now we're told that Ontario Hydro will make no concessions on the station of the line for three months."

The delegation's chief concern was "why were such large facilities needed for a county with small population and little industry" as assessed by the Lake Ontario Regional Development Council.

"It seems obvious to me that something is very wrong when a straight answer can't be obtained. Then a body such as Ontario Hydro," said a spokesman for Face.

"Somebody knows what is going on and I have a few hard asks."

The only place to look is Lake Ontario Cement, he said.

"They are the people who announced earlier in the years a 500-million expansion program and that means automatic — lots of it," said Bill Hockley speaking for the group.

With the new cement plant at Bath, they now have to be competitive," he said. "It won't be enough anymore, just to have free sand.

"They can't only smells, it stinks," continued Mr. Hockley.

"Take a petition, and then take it to Queen's Park.

The Napanee group has been there especially from normally-pro industry," he said.

The Environmental Law Research Foundation, Pollution Probe, federal and provincial governments will be asked to investigate the freeze on information pertaining to the power line and the justification of the line at all.

A key question, contained in a brief asks, "What precise objectives has Ontario Hydro in the alternate routes in the vicinity of Carrying Place, underwater at Massassauga Point or along the Mohawk Bridge?" and "Why the massive increase of power?" — lots of it," said Bill Hockley speaking for the group.

Norman Manning, public relations officer for Ontario Hydro in Belleville, said this morning the route for the Lennox to Picton line was studied in detail in 1970.

A presentation was made at that time to the government liaison committee for northern and eastern Ontario.

A task force studied the project and later presented it to the municipalities involved and no objections were raised.

This fall investigations will begin on the feasibility of submarine cable and results are expected by December.

Mr. Manning claimed the county now has three 44,000-volt lines on wood poles, stretching 35 to 45 miles from Belleville and Trenton.

The new line would get rid of these, giving more efficient service to the county. With the 220,000 - volt line from the Lennox Generating Station, a transformer could be placed and the wooden pole system could be integrated into it, making the county independent power.

Mr. Manning said figures predict the county will surpass its power supply by 1975 unless additional power is provided.

He said he knew nothing about the Lake Ontario Cement issue, and explained the power line was needed for the county according to the five to eight per cent annual increase in electrical consumption.

"We are willing to sit down with these people and talk it over," said Mr. Manning.

Belleville, Thurlow To Open Negotiations

CANNIFTON (Staff) — Negotiations between Belleville and Thurlow and the Belleville public utilities commission are expected to begin later this month for the supply of water to the township's first full service area.

Sometime in 1975, construction is expected to begin on both water and sewer lines for the entire community of Cannifton, Maitland Drive, Cloverleaf Drive and the Block Diamond Road.

This will be the first township service area in the Belleville and Quinte Planning Board deputy director Frank Stokmans said today it will be the first of several.

The township will be trying to have water service extended to the service area on the basis that all incoming water will be metered as one point only, with Thurlow paying for it.

Residential property owners will pay a monthly flat rate by the Thurlow public utilities commission and a charge for each 1,000 gals. of water consumed. For commercial premises, there will be an option of flat rate or meter charges.

Thurlow officials estimate that about 285 homes will be linked to the water and sewer services when the system goes into operation. Both water and sewer lines will be built concurrently.

The provincial ministry of environment will contribute 30.9 per cent toward construction of the water mains. Thurlow paying the rest through monthly charges over 40 years.

For sewers, the Ministry of Environment will build them, again charging the township monthly for a 40-year period.

Matters to be settled between the township and the Belleville PUC include the charge for water to be borne by Thurlow as well as arrangements by which the utility will service the water mains in the township service area.

The service area will be a boon to development of the township, as provincial authorities are against permitting building permits where servicing is inadequate.

Moreover, on the household level, the taste of tap water should be measurably better in Cannifton.

The Thurlow service area to be launched in 1975 is the first of four planned for the township. Extensions of this system are projected for 1978, 1983, 1988.

Kings, Backstrom Continue Climb

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

There was a time in the not too distant past when Ralph Backstrom almost quit hockey. More recently, the future of Los Angeles Kings has been in doubt.

Fortunately, both have survived their depressions and the Kings are currently on an eight-game winning streak that has moved them four points atop the National Hockey League's West Division.

Backstrom scored the winner in their latest conquest, 3-2 over St. Louis Blues Tuesday night, and moved into second place in the NHL scoring race with team-mate Butch Goring.

Goring, who assisted on the first Los Angeles goal by Jim Peters and engineered Backstrom's winner at 7:15 of the third period, now has picked up a point in the last 10 Los Angeles games.

Backstrom and Goring have 12 points apiece and are deadlocked with Rod Gilbert of New York Rangers and John Bucyk of Boston Bruins, three behind points leader, Buffalo Sabres centre Gilbert Perreault.

It was the only game scheduled Tuesday night.

The Kings go after No. 9 in Atlanta tonight against the Flames while Montreal Canadiens entertain Toronto Maple Leafs. Vancouver is in New York with the Rangers, New York Islanders are at Chicago Black Hawks, Philadelphia Flyers at Pittsburgh Penguins and California Golden Seals at Minnesota North Stars.

Backstrom was a disconsolate figure midway through the 1970-71 season when he jumped Montreal Canadiens and headed home to Kirkland Lake, Ont.

There were rumors of friction with then coach Claude Ruel which neither side denied. Speculation was that Backstrom would only return to the club if he was traded to a west coast franchise.

Several weeks of talks ensued, following which the moody centre returned to Montreal and was shortly thereafter dispersed to Los Angeles in a straight trade for Gord Labossiere.

The Kings were a sinking ship and continued to founder, finishing out of the playoffs the last three years, going through a succession of coaches and drawing at the gate only when some of the old established NHL teams visited Jack Kent Cooke's plush Forum in suburban Inglewood.

The Kings showed little signs of awakening early in the 1972-73 schedule behind rookie coach Bob Pulford. But in recent weeks they've put it together and during their current win streak—a record for expansion teams—have outscored the opposition 37-11.

Balanced League

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The World Hockey Association may not be North America's biggest drawing card, but the fledgling league can hardly be accused of not providing a balanced diet.

Three points separate the top four teams in the Western Division and four points the first five in the Eastern sector after Tuesday night's contests.

Alberta Oilers set up a log-jam atop the west by beating New York Raiders 4-2 at Edmonton while Houston Aeros nipped the hometown Chicago Cougars 3-2.

Fewer than 6,000 fans witnessed both games.

Tonight the Raiders are in Los Angeles against the Sharks and Winnipeg Jets, who share first in the west with Alberta and Los Angeles, visit Quebec Nordiques.

Jim Harrison picked up three assists at Edmonton, engineering the winning and insurance goals by Al Hamilton and Steve Carlyle that broke up a 2-2 game in the third period in front of 2,815 fans.

Alberta's Bill Hicke and Norm Ferguson of the Raiders exchanged first-period goals. Ron Ward gave the Oilers ahead with the only goal of the second period.

Craig Hanchuruk knotted the score for New York early in the third period while Alberta was delayed at 12:19 when Ron Anderson of Alberta and Ted Scharrle traded punches. Both players drew fighting major penalties.

At Chicago, where 2,943 saw the Cougars suffer their first setback in 12 games, Ed Hoekstra and Jack Stanfield scored their first goals of the season to break up a 1-1 stalemate in the third period.

Young Retires As Seals Coach

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Charles O. Finley announced that his California Golden Seals of the National Hockey League accepted the resignation Tuesday night of coach Garry Young.

Finley, at a news conference, said Fred Glover, a Seals' executive who previously was fired by Finley as coach, would take Young's job on an interim basis.

"It may be three or four games," Finley said, "It may be 10 games, 20 games, the balance of the season or until we find someone to take over."

Finley said Young resigned for health reasons. He ha dun-cdrgone lung surgery three months ago an dhe said at the news conference, "the coaching pressure was more than I bargained for."

Young joined the Seals' organization as general manager last year and after Vic Stasiuk left the California coaching job following the season, the Seals searched all summer for a new bench boss. When no one was found, Finley gave the job to Young.

Glover, who coached the Seals from 1968 through 1971, coached Los Angeles Kings last year and then went back to the California organization in a front office capacity this fall.

Glover's first game behind the bench will be today against Minnesota North Stars. The Seals are last in the NHL's West division.

Keech, Henry Click for Braves

SMITHS FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Steve McCoshan scored two goals Tuesday night to lead Brockville Braves to a 7-4 win over Smiths Falls Bears in the Central Junior Hockey League.

Other Brockville goals came from Bob Mulcahy, Rick Spreckling, Steve Keech, Dave Dixie and Dave Henry.

Bobby Richardson, Barry Kerfoot, Mike Defalco and George Thompson scored for the Bears.

It was a quiet game, with only six minor penalties called, three to each team.

The Braves knocked the Bears 43-38 before a small crowd of about 225.

Hull Hopes to Play Tonight

QUEBEC (CP) — Bobby Hull, former Chicago Black Hawks winger, who signed with Winnipeg Jets of the World Hockey Association as player-coach, said Tuesday he hopes to be in a Jets' uniform tonight.

The stocky, blonde superstar said he remains optimistic that a Philadelphia judge will rule in favor of his right to play with the Jets.

The Black Hawks of the National Hockey League have a suit in court trying to block

BOBBY HULL

Hull's move to the WHA.

But Hull told a news conference he was "very optimistic," that a U.S. district court judge, A. Leo Hilgginbotham, will rule in favor of the WHA today.

Judge Higginbotham is expected to issue a 200-page opinion today on whether John Mackenzie, formerly of the NHL Boston Bruins, will be allowed to keep his player-coach contract with Philadelphia Blazers of the WHA.

The judge's ruling is expected to decide whether pro-sional hockey is exempt from anti-trust laws and to affect the Hawks' suit against Hull.

Hull said he does not think the judge would wreck the WHA by ruling against it.

The Jets meet Quebec Nordiques tonight in WHA play.

Hull said if the judge decides against the WHA, "It would have a great deal to do with ruining the entire WHA if all 70 guys that came from the NHL were not allowed to participate in games, especially in the United States."

Hull would not comment on the possibility that he would play only in Canada if Judge Higginbotham rules in favor of the NHL.

But he said that, technically the only place where he couldn't play right now would be in Illinois. But, we're trying to keep it clean."

He hoped the judge would take that into consideration.

QUEBEC (CP) — Bobby Hull said Tuesday that "in the not unforeseeable future" World Hockey Association would merge with the National Hockey League.

Hull, the former Chicago Black Hawks star now with Winnipeg Jets of the WHA, told a news conference then he got the merger idea after Tuesday afternoon conversations with Paul Sauriol, president of Quebec Nordiques WHA team.

"Of course, you know—we talked a lot about it here a little while ago—there's a possibility here that a merger could be ahead," Hull said. "You never can tell," Hull said.

"And for me to say we'd never play in the NHL again—we might be playing with and against teams in the NHL sometime or another, so you can't really cut off that possibility either."

Hull did not know what kind of a merger it could be, but said "it could very possibly be" one similar to the merger of the National Football League and the American Football League several years ago.

Hull is writing for a United States court ruling expected today on whether former NHL players can play in the WHA before he actively assumes his player-coach role with the Jets.

BRUINS LOSE GOALIE

BOSTON (AP) — A practice shot from the stick of teammate Mike Walton broke the left collarbone of Boston Bruins' No. 2 goalie, Ross Brooks, Tuesday, and sidelined him for at least two months, a team spokesman said. The injury was a serious blow to the defence of the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup champions, who are off to a slow start this year as superstar defenceman Bobby Orr recovers from a knee operation. Brooks, 35, was undefeated with two wins and two ties in his first year in the NHL, after coming up from Boston Braves.

GERELA'S STRING INTACT

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Steelers placekicker Roy Gerela got good news from the National Football League office Tuesday—his string of 102 consecutive extra-point conversions is still intact. League officials ruled that a fumble of the snap by holder Bobby Walden after the Steelers' second touchdown against Cincinnati Sunday was not considered a miss by Gerela. Gerela picked up the ball and attempted a left-footed drop kick, but it was blocked.

PHILS CUT SHORT

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Chris Short, veteran left-handed pitcher, was waived by Philadelphia Phillies Tuesday and has agreed to a contract with the Milwaukee Brewers' Evansville farm club in the American Association, Jim Wilson, Milwaukee's director of baseball operations, said Short was released because of a sore back. During his 13 years in the majors, all with the Phillies, he compiled a 132-127 record, including a 20-10 mark in 1965.

BCI Seniors Cage Ernestown

In exhibition basketball last night, BCI seniors defeated Ernestown 69-48, despite Ernestown's Tom Anger's dropping 19 points into the bucket. Ernestown's other high scorer was Pat Laidlaw with 11.

BCI's scoring was spread out over Gary Donovan with 12 points, Wayne Giles (10) Rick Bell (11) and Dave van Vliet (11). George Lloyd worked the boards well for BCI.

The BCI seniors play their first regular season game tonight at 4:30 p.m. at BCI.

Some Mascot!

Moira Secondary School cheerleaders pose with the football teams' mascot, a 15-foot high Trojan horse. The wooden horse was built by Don Foster for a previous Santa Claus parade and then donated to the school as a suitable mascot for the Trojan athletic teams. Moira and their king-sized mascot will face a task of equal proportions Friday when their juniors face BCI for the COSSA title. Quinte seniors will meet Adam Scott of Peterborough for the senior crown in another Friday afternoon game.

Belleville Certain Of One COSSA Crown

Belleville could be the home of not one, but two COSSA football champions this season, as BCI and Moira will battle each other for the junior title, while Quinte Secondary will host Peterborough's Adam Scott seniors Friday.

Both BCI and Moira coaching staffs expect the junior final to be a test of their respective defences. BCI head coach Ted Mowery said that he expects a "defensive battle," but that with "two good kickers on the team," BCI should be able to boot points onto the scoreboard if the Moira defence held firm.

BCI defensive coach Ken "Casey" Soden said that he expects that Moira will "pass a little bit more," but that his team was prepared. At practices this week the defensive squad has been running through basic blocking techniques, and working on keying on select Moira offensive positions. Despite the workouts, coach Soden said that, "whoever gets the first break will break the back of the other team."

Soden expects "whichever way the game goes the teams will be within one or two touchdowns of each other."

Each team has prepared new offensive surprises for the other. Moira's head coach Dave Sneddon said, "we've got a few new wrinkles in the playbook," and that his team, which has been practising every night for the final, will be ready to take on BCI juniors for the COSSA championship.

With both teams having defeated each other — Moira taking BCI 14-0 in early season play, and the Collegians defeating Moira 13-0 in the COSSA finals, Friday's game at OSD field at 2:00 p.m. should be a touchy battle for the rubber.

Peterborough's Adam Scott Collegiate, coming off a 10-0 decision over Moira seniors, will be at Quinte Saints' home field Friday at 2:00 p.m.

Mead Johnson's centre Ray Summers and right winger Lee McBrien were inseparable in Gas House hockey action against Cassidy last night.

Together they accounted for three of Mead Johnson's goals in its 4-3 win over Cassidy.

McBrien assisted Summers' low shot on Cassidy goalie Joe Scanlon for the first of Johnson's first tallie. Cassidy's Gary Sero tied it up 1-1, when he swooped around Mead defenseman Ted Rowlands to score. Ten seconds later Summers, again assisted by McBrien, dropped one in for Mead's 2-1 lead. Mead Johnson's third and last goal of the first period came on a Rowland's slap shot, which hit goalie Scanlon in the chest and dropped to the ice where Dave Fox deflected the puck in for the tally.

The second period was scoreless, but in the third Lee McBrien, assisted by centre Summers, shot from beside the net, Cassidy's goalie lost it for a second, and only discovered it behind him when the red light flashing sticks up into the air. Joe Clarke scored Cassidy's final goal.

In the other Gas House hockey game Tuesday night, Rallies moved into fourth place in the standings with a 5-1 win over Stewart Warner. Rollies tallies came from Howard Skelly, Don Bowery, Barry Marshall, Wayne Harris and Scott McLaren. Stewart Warner's lone scoreboard markup came from Bob Young.

The Saints hope to maintain their winning streak of seven games by defeating Peterborough and giving Belleville its second COSSA senior football championship in as many years.

Wellington Wins Opener

Wellington's Bantam "D" minor hockey team played its season opener Tuesday defeating Stirling 2-1. The game was a closely fought battle according to coach Jim Dunlop.

tario driver to win 100 races on the Brockville - Belleville-Kingston Memorial Centre - Frontenac Downs four track circuit.

With 86 wins and only 11 race days remaining in the harness season, Wemp will attempt to come closer to the century behind Dandy Duke in the featured ninth at Frontenac Downs tonight.

Yankee Jed (with Bernie Hunt in the bike), Justa Gay Lass (Orley Coville), Glory Patch (Ross Webster), John's Duke (Vern Moulton), and Resin Bow (Chris Stroman) make up the rest of the field.

Belleville drivers Larry Zebedee behind Rob Bon Besoy in the eighth, and Lillie Hawthorn in the tenth. Gerry Walsh behind Lady Violet Direct fifth, and Dave Irvine behind Magic Joan and Presto Heel in the fourth and second respectively will race in the 10 race card. Post time tonight is 7:45 p.m.

Imperials Score 5-2 Victory

Blake Kerr Imperial middets scored a 5-2 win over Picton in OMHA hockey action Tuesday.

Steve Kirby paced the Belleville all-stars with a pair of goals while Kerr netted going to Mike Crawford, John Murphy and Rick Growden. Picton scorers were Steve Kemp and Joe Lewis.

The Imperials next game will be Sunday, 3 p.m. when they face Napanee at the Belleville Memorial Arena.

Mavety Moves

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Cougars obtained defenceman Larry Mavety Tuesday from Philadelphia Blazers in a straight cash World Hockey Association deal. Mavety, 26, started the WHA season with Los Angeles Sharks and played last season with Salt Lake City of the Western Hockey League.

Vancouver Rekindles Flame

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Olympic flame may yet burn in British Columbia, thanks to voters in Colorado.

Mayor Tom Campbell said the Vancouver-Garibaldi Olympic Committee will go after the 1976 Winter Olympics now that Colorado has rejected them.

In voting Tuesday night, Coloradans voted to cut off state funds for the event, meaning that the 1976 Games now have no home.

"When we originally made a bid for it we felt we had the best site available in Canada," Campbell said. "We'll be a little rushed for 1976 now, but we can do it."

Bob Hindmarch, acting president of the Vancouver Games Committee, said: "We're definitely interested in the 1976 Games. . . .

"We already have in writing from the federal government the promise of financial assistance, and our bid for the Games stressed that it would be ecologically sound because it would ensure the orderly development of Whistler Mountain."

The choice of the site now will be in the hands of the International Olympic Committee and it "should be decided in the near future who will get the Games now," Hindmarch said.

However, the Games won't be automatic for the Vancouver group. Lake Placid, N.Y., the village that was host to the 1932 Winter Olympics, bid for the 1976 Games, but lost out to Denver.

Lake Placid officials said if Colorado voters rejected the Games they would offer their facilities as an alternative.

On hearing of the voters' rejection of the Games for Denver, Clifford Buck, president of the United States Olympic Committee, said:

"... it is a tremendous disappointment to me. I think it's a tragedy for the state and a tragedy for the nation that the people of Colorado were not aware of the great privilege and great honor to host the 1976 Winter Games."

Henry Kimbrough, a director of Citizens for the 1976 Winter Olympics, said, "I'm bitterly disappointed.

"You need the political support and backing of the people to stage the Games and I can see no way that Colorado can stage the Olympics now.

"This is a tremendously poor reflection on the United States. We've frequently heard the term 'Ugly American.' Well, we've proved the term again. We've said 'no' to the world."

Russia Slated To Face NHL

DETROIT (CP) — A four-game exhibition tour of selected National Hockey League cities by one of the top Soviet Union teams has been approved for late next January.

R. Alan Eagleson, executive-director of the NHL Players' Association, said in a statement Tuesday that "this is a joint venture pursuant to an agreement entered into three years ago between the N H L owners and the NHLPA and does not involve any other organization."

The executive committees of the component members of the NHL, owner-player council met "for the purpose of exploring the request of the Soviet Ice Hockey Federation for a series of four games to be played in North America during the latter half of January, 1973," Eagleson said.

The NHLPA was represented by president Red Berenson of Detroit Red Wings, vice-president Stan Mikita of Chicago Black Hawks, and Eagleson.

The NHL was represented by Charles W. Mulcahy Jr., chairman, a vice-president of Boston Bruins; Bruce Norris of the Red Wings and W. W. Wirtz of Chicago. President Clarence Campbell of the NHL was also present.

The meeting approved the proposal and authorized the undertaking of reasonable negotiations with the Soviet federation of all the necessary arrangements to implement the series," Eagleson said.

The series will entail the participation of one of the top three clubs of the Soviet first division against four NHL member clubs not yet selected, in their respective home cities."

Hornets Sting Germans

GALT, Ont. (CP) — West Germany's National hockey team soon may have a complex about the 14th minute of the third period.

Tuesday, Galt Hornets scored two goals in eight seconds at that time of the period to defeat the Germans 4-2.

In Toronto Sunday night, Oriolia Terriers scored three goals in 34 seconds at the same time to break a 3-3 tie and win 6-3.

The West German's four-game series with teams of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A league resumes tonight against the Aces in Kingston and finishes Friday with the Germans playing the Flyers in Barrie.

Galt took the lead on defenceman Ron Smith's long slap shot from the blueline. Vance Miller scored the clincher on another long shot that bounced in off German goalie Anton Kohle's pads.

Howie Dietrich and John Beechey had the other goals for the winners while Karl Heinz Egger and Rudolf Thanner replied for Germany which held period leads of 1-0 and 2-1.

Galt outshot the visitors 31-22 and took six of nine minor penalties in a game watched by 2,-165 fans.

Ottawa Pays Bonuses

OTTAWA (CP) — Did Ottawa Rough Riders finish first or second to the Eastern Football Conference?

League statistics show that both Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Ottawa were tied for first but that Ticats were awarded top spot by virtue of their sweep of the three games played between the teams this season.

But 11 hurly Riders convinced general manager Frank Clair Tuesday that by being Hamilton for first place, they were entitled to bonuses which their contracts call for if the team finished first.

Clair said Tuesday that he couldn't argue with the players "after the fine season we have had."

But that was a change from the position he took Monday night after the players, backed by coach Jack Gotta, made their pitch for the bonuses—up to $2,000 a player.

Clair said then it was obvious the club didn't finish first.

"It's the team that draws the bye and wins the first-place trophy," he said.

Hamilton got the bye and stands by Saturday while Montreal Alouettes and the Riders meet in the sudden-death semi-final game here.

Coach Gotta, speaking at a radio station party in which kicker Gerry Organ and lineman Wayne Smith were honored, said he considered the Riders "co-champions of the EFC."

He said he told the players that if they won the last three games of the season, which they did, "that's going to make us first-place finishers."

"I don't want to get caught in the middle of this thing," he said. "But I am whether I like it or not. After what I told the players, how does it make me look?"

JOHNNY BENCH

Bench Named MVP

NEW YORK (AP) — Johnny Bench proved both to himself and to baseball that he could come back, and he reaped his reward Tuesday by being named the 1972 Most Valuable Player in the National League.

It marked the second time in three years that the honor had fallen upon the 24-year-old catcher for Cincinnati Reds who, after a spectacular 1970 season which won him the MVP, went into an abysmal .238 hitting slump in 1971.

"I got a little out of shape on the banquet circuit," Bench said of his 1971 collapse.

"I felt behind in my hitting and pressed too much. I kept pressing but still couldn't catch up.

"I said to myself then, 'Maybe I'll never have another good season.'"

The rugged, hard-hitting catcher was a strong winner this year, getting 11 first-place votes from the 24-man panel of The Baseball Writers Association and was rated no lower than fourth on any ballot.

Bench received a total of 263 points—32 more than the runner-up, Billy Williams of Chicago Cubs.

Willie Stargell of Pittsburgh was third with 201 points and Joe Morgan, a Bench teammate with the Reds, was fourth with 197. Steve Carlton of Philadelphia Phillies, winner of the Cy Young Award as the year's top NL pitcher, came in fifth with 194 points.

Bench batted .270 and led the league in home runs, 40 and in runs batted in, 125.

Blue Not On Block

But Finley added just as vociferously that his hockey California Golden Seals, baseball Athletics and basketball Memphis Teams are staying put where they are, at least for now.

Finley called a news conference Tuesday night to announce that Seals' coach Garry Young had resigned because of ill health and that Fred Glover will handle the team behind the bench as interim basis.

Blue, who was named the American League's 1971 Most Valuable Player and Cy Young Award winner as the outstanding pitcher, slumped to only six victories in 1972 season and is reported to have said he wanted to be traded when he was used mostly in relief in the World Series.

"No sir," Finley responded to a question of a Blue trade. "My hometown of La Porte, Ind., is giving a testimonial on my behalf the 15th of this month.

"They invited three players: Joe Rudi, Gene Tenace and Vida Blue. They will all be there. It made me very happy that Vida said he would be there.

NUTRITION-WISE AUTUMN VEGETABLES

The end of summer isn't the end of nutritionally delicious vegetables. Many Autumn and stored winter vegetables provide more food value than people realize.

Winter squashes are surprisingly high in iron, vitamin A and vitamin C. Just one cup of cooked squash provides 4 mg. of iron, 5,000 I.U. for vitamin A. Onions, cabbage and rutabagas are important sources of vitamin C, especially when served raw. Even potatoes provide important food value. Cook Autumn vegetables carefully, serve them promptly.

Questions And Answers

By The Ontario Motor League

QUESTION: We are considering a trip to Mexico this winter. How are driving conditions in that country?

ANSWER: Mexico's massive road - building program, hailed as a key factor in unifying the country after stable government was established, has made it possible to reach almost every area of interest by automobile. Construction continues, adding well - engineered, thoroughly modern highways to the expanding network. Older routes are being constantly improved.

Still, roads in Mexico should not be compared to the superhighways in Canada. Following the dictates of mountainous terrain, they are rolling or winding much of the time, although there are many straight, level stretches in Northern Mexico. In some areas the surface has a sandpaper texture, which, though affording better traction on curves, is a bit wearing on tires. Lanes and shoulders are rather narrow but the relatively light traffic reduces the hazard.

If you plan to do much driving over unpaved roads, it is advisable to have some protective covering for your luggage in the car trunk. This will help to keep out dust.

Driving in Mexico is very much like driving in Canada, but several simple precautions should be observed.

Driving after dark is extremely dangerous and should be avoided. Besides the poor visibility, there is the hazard that vehicles which do not always use their headlights might suddenly swerve to your side of the road to avoid a pothole. Bicycles often have no lights or reflectors.

Livestock — principally cattle, horses and burros — constitute the greatest danger to motorists along most Mexican highways. Since most highways are not fenced, livestock may appear unexpectedly on the road. Slow down and give them a wide berth. They can cause tremendous property and physical damage.

The maximum speed limit is generally 100 kilometers (about 62 miles) per hour, or as posted. In towns and villages the limit is 40 kilometers (25 miles) per hour; in some cities 30 kilometers (18 miles). Most cities have many one-way streets. Signs on each corner indicate traffic direction by an arrow; two-way streets have an arrow with two points. Red arrows act as stop signs. Green arrows facing you give you the right-of-way if you are on a red-arrow street; otherwise you must yield to vehicles on your right.

Road signs have been modernized; with few exceptions, they are now all international symbols. Older signs are in Spanish; should you encounter one and not understand it, slow down in anticipation of something ahead that requires special attention. Particularly when passing pedestrians, slow down and tap your horn. Near congested areas, you may encounter a sign saying Bordos, Topes or Tumulos, meaning that sharp bumps are built into the road to make certain that traffic decelerates.

Don't park on curves, and, if possible, get off the pavement entirely when stopping even for a short time.

Be particularly careful when approaching bridges. Those marked Puente Agosto 1 1 are narrow, one-way bridges. When two cars approach from opposite directions, the first driver to flick his headlights other must pull to the side of the road, allowing the first to cross the bridge.

In all cases trailering should be confined to the main highways. Because it is comparatively level and well aligned, Mex. 85-49-37 from Laredo via Monterrey and Saltillo is the easiest trailer route to Mexico City. Neither is trailering on Mex. 85 discouraged, despite the 120 miles of mountain driving southward from Tamaunehale. The steepest climb supposedly is 6 per cent, many of the curves are banked and there are a limited number of sheer drops. Heavy truck trailers are a common sight along this highway and should have no difficulty.

No Antiques

TAIPEI (AP) — Taiwan's education ministry has decreed that foreigners may not buy antiques of cultural, historical or artistic importance.

Planes Stopped

PRAGUE (AP) — A Czechoslovak housewife set a steel trap for the polecat she thought was stealing eggs from her henhouse. The trap caught the thief, who turned out to be her husband. He confessed he had been stealing the eggs to pay for his drinking.

Historic Rhine Said Near Death

BONN, West Germany (Reuter) — Old Father Rhine is on his deathbed. The historic river of fable and romance now is Europe's largest sewer, members of the International Rhine Protection Commission were told at a congress in Wiesbaden.

A group of international scientists and politicians attending the congress travelled down the Rhine from Basel to Rotterdam to see—and smell—the problem for themselves.

For long stretches, from its source in Switzerland to its mouth in Holland, 825 miles to the north, the great stream is no longer composed of water at all, they were told.

In the eyes of an analytical chemists is a liquid mixture of human effluent, mostly untreated, chloride, zinc, copper, lead, nickel, manganese, strontium, rubidium, chemical pesticides, radioactive isotopes and oil.

Oxygen, which is supposed to be a major constituent of water, is present only in small traces.

BUY BOTTLED WATER

Yet somehow the world's busiest waterway keeps rolling along, bearing 17,000 passenger and cargo vessels every year and providing drinking water—after chemical processing—for 20 million people.

Werner Best, environment minister for the West German state of Hesse and chairman of the Commission for Rhine Purification, told the Wiesbaden congress that the quality of the water in parts is on the point of clinical death. Many people living beside the Rhine never touch tap water. They buy it bottled.

When the oxygen content falls below 1.5 milligrams a litre the experts say it "tips over." The fish and the aquatic organisms that are vital to the regeneration die out. The river continues to flow but it is no longer "breathing." This happened over a large stretch of the river two years ago.

Best said he would regard it as a success if the commission could prevent this from happening again. But it would take another 10 years and colossal investments by local authorities and industry to make the river clean enough to swim in once more.

More than one-quarter of all sewage, effluent and industrial waste is poured into the long-suffering Rhine untreated either mechanically or biologically.

All five countries bordering the river contribute to the pollution and only concerted international action can save it. Switzerland, West Germany, France, Luxembourg and the Netherlands are members of the Clean Rhine Commission.

Early Blunders Doomed McGovern

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator George McGovern's quest for "the White House was doomed by the blunders of its infancy, errors that all his campaigning could never undo.

To the end they plagued his candidacy. And in the end they helped President Nixon attain one of the great landslides in U.S. history.

In part, the fatal flaws stemmed, from what McGovern had to do-or thought he had to do-to catch up and win the Democratic nomination in the first place.

But two problems stand out above all the rest:

—The admittedly ill-conceived McGovern proposal that every American be given $1,000 by the government. He dropped it, but was never able to forget it. And the Republicans used it to help implant the notion that, if elected, McGovern would give away the money of the workingman to people who refuse to work.

—The case of Senator Thomas F. Eagleton, the vice-presidential nominee McGovern deposed after promising him 1,000-per-cent support despite his tardy disclosure of past mental treatments.

Those, and an assortment of other incidents, statements and disputes, enabled Nixon's forces to make McGovern himself the central campaign issue.

That effectively denied him the traditional offensive role of the challenger, and shielded Nixon from the necessity of any extensive personal campaigning to defend his conduct in office.

It was particularly valuable to a president whose own campaign organization had been implicated in the June 17 wiretapping of Democratic national headquarters, and whose top White House aides had been accused of political sabotage and espionage.

It was particularly frustrating to McGovern, struggling to take the stack, but always forced to defend. Nothing netted him more than the fact that his own credibility, once rated his greatest asset, was in question.

As Nixon buried McGovern beneath one of the greatest landslides in U.S. history, his own Republican party actually lost seats in the Senate and gained but a handful in the House of Representatives.

Governor Wins

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. (AP) — Senator George McGovern failed to win his home state of South Dakota in his presidential bid Tuesday, but Gov. Richard Kneip became the first Democrat since the Depression to win a second term.

In a slow ballot count caused by near-record numbers of voters McGovern trailed President Nixon from the first returns.

Thieu Views Captured Guns

Referendum Favors Regulated Coastline

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — California's environmentalists scored a major referendum victory Tuesday by winning public support for regulated development of the coastline.

The measure known as "Proposition 20" reduces piecemeal development of the coast by local government bodies and creates a state commission to oversee planned development.

Voter support for the measure was put at 55 per cent, with 45 per cent against.

It was opposed by oil companies, public utilities, land developers, many coastal cities and some labor unions.

Wallace Stand-in Finishes Far Back

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — John G. Schmitz, a last-minute stand-in for wounded Alabama Governor George Wallace, failed to make a dent in the presidential election race.

The controversial Schmitz, running as representative of the American Independent Party, did not win any of the 538 Electoral College votes to elect the president, whereas Wallace won 46 four years ago.

Wallace had been hoping to improve on that performance and become a powerful force in American politics before being cut down in an assassination attempt while campaigning in Maryland last May.

The 42-year-old Schmitz, a long-time member of the right-wing John Birch Society, replaced him on the independent party ticket and was proclaimed as "America's foremost anti-Communist."

He immediately made headlines with charges that Wallace was the victim of a conspiracy.

Schmitz conducted a vigorous campaign across the country, concentrating on attacking President Nixon.

He angered the Nixon faithful with a widely quoted remark that "I'm not opposed to his (Nixon's) visiting China, I'm only opposed to his coming back."

Another anti-Nixon line was his quote that "if there were two Gods, Richard Nixon would pray to both of them."

Unfortunately for Schmitz, his campaign failed to catch on with Wallace adherents as indicated by his gaining only 900,000 votes with most of the returns in, compared with Wallace's almost 10 million votes four years ago.

Woman Senator Defeated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Margaret Chase Smith, 74-year-old Maine Republican, a powerful figure in Congress for more than three decades, was toppled in a major election upset Tuesday.

While losing out in the Senate, which now becomes an all-male bastion, women captured five seats in the House of Representatives and seemed to have returned all but one of the 10 congresswomen who ran for re-election.

Only Representative Louise Day Hicks, 50, (Dem. Mass.), was in trouble as late election returns were counted. She was trailing Boston city councilman John Joseph Moakley, 45, a Democrat who ran as an independent. Mrs. Hicks campaigned against busing of school pupils.

With Mrs. Hicks, there would be 15 women in the House.

North Official Annoys Natives

OTTAWA (CP) — Unfriendly relations between Commissioner Stuart Hodgson of the Northwest Territories and native groups in the North hit a new low Tuesday when the groups accused him of being ready "to sell out Arctic resources at any cost."

He has, as well, no concern for native rights, they charged.

"We hope he is not speaking for the federal government although we know he is a federal public servant," the native groups said in a news release.

Mr. Hodgson, speaking to the Canadian Club in Toronto Monday, said firms which invest millions of dollars in the North should be encouraged "instead of being slighted and in some cases condemned."

He also contrasted Canadian viewpoints on northern development with those in the Soviet Union. In Russia, he said natural gas pipelines and their development were hailed as great achievements.

The native groups replied that they were not sure how development of Russia's northern areas was done but they assumed it did not follow the standards expected in a democratic society.

Groups associated with the news release were the Indian brotherhoods of the N.W.T. and the Yukon, the Committee for the Original People's Entitlement, Inuit Tapirisat of Canada (Eskimo Brotherhood) and groups representing Metis and the Federation of Alaskan Natives.

Mr. Hodgson first aroused the wrath of the groups when a letter he sent to Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien earlier this year requestioned the government policy of funding native organizations.

He said the policy was frustrating the will of the N.W.T. council which he heads.

In their news release Tuesday, the native groups said Mr. Hodgson was showing a "total disregard for the concern of native people" who are seeking compensation for their land claims before development takes place.

Plan to Keep Streetcars

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto Transit Commission decided Tuesday that streetcars belong on streets and not in museums.

The commission voted unanimously to maintain streetcar service on St. Clair Avenue. The line had appeared destined to be taken over by diesel or trolley buses.

David Lacey, commission vice-chairman, said the entire five-man commission wants "to retain streetcar service in Toronto for all time."

However, the commission reaffirmed an earlier decision to remove streetcars from Rogers Road under pressure from York borough. This line will probably be replaced by trolley buses.

Christmas just isn't Christmas without a Christmas tree full of lights, tinsel, ornaments, garlands, and all the love you can give. Just ask your children. Or your grandmother. This year you can enjoy all the beauty and warmth of a life-like artificial tree in 4½-ft., 6-ft., or 7 -ft. heights, and not worry about the hazards of a real tree. Choose a Scotch Pine, Blue Spruce, Moss Green or the soft needle tree-Canadian Fir. Either way, just think how much fun you and your family will have decorating the tree on Christmas Eve — a tree that's long lasting and fire resistant.
